APOTHECARIES' COMPANY.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The charter of the Society of Apothecaries is dated 6th December, 15th year Jac. I. (A.D. 1617).

The charter recites the charter of the Grocers and Apothecaries of the City of London, dated 9th April, 4th year Jac. I. (A.D. 1606), and the desire of the Apothecaries to be dissociated from the Grocers, and to form an independent body, on the ground "that the "ignorance and rashness of presumptuous empirics and "ignorant and unexpert men may be restrained where-"upon many discommodities, inconveniences, and perils "do daily arise to the rude and incredulous people."

B., C., D.—Nil.

E.—The Act of 55 Geo. III. cap. 194, commonly known as the "Apothecaries Act, 1815," and the Act of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 34, commonly known as the "Apothecaries Act Amendment Act, 1874." The abstract of the effect of each of these Acts is given under Returns F. and H.

F.—This is taken with Return H.

G.—The licence in mortmain is comprised in the charter. It empowers the Society and their successors for ever to hold lands in mortmain, provided that they do not exceed "the clearly value of 40*l.*"

It has never been exercised.

F. and H.—The objects of the charter of the Society, 15 Jac. I., concisely stated, are—(1) To restrain the Grocers (the former associates of the Apothecaries) or any other city company from keeping an apothecary's shop or exercising the "art, faculty, or mystery of an apothe-"cary within the City of London or a radius of seven "miles." (2) To allow no one to do so unless apprenticed to an apothecary for seven years at least, and at the expiration of such apprenticeship such apprentice to be approved and allowed by the master and wardens and representatives of the College of Physicians, before being permitted to keep an apothecary's shop, or prepare, dispense, commix, or compound medicines. (3) To give the right of search within the City of London or a radius of seven miles of the shops of apothecaries or others, and "prove" the drugs, and to examine within the same radius all persons "professing, using, or exercising the art or mystery of apothecaries."

It also confers the power to burn "before the offender's doors" any unwholesome drugs, and to summon the offenders before the magistrates.

(4) And to buy, sell, or make drugs. Up to the passing of the Apothecaries Act, 1815, so far as the prescribed radius extended, the three first-stated objects of the charter and the existence of the society in relation to its members were identical. A member of the Society of Apothecaries and an apothecary of the City of London or within seven miles were convertible terms.

As regards the fourth object prescribed by the charter, the Society, doubtless from its want of means, has never itself until the present year bought, sold, or made drugs, but owing to the great difficulty of its members obtaining pure drugs it allowed them to raise money themselves and create stock or shares for that purpose, and to carry on such trade in the name of the Society for their own personal profit as a private company or partnership under various titles. Owing to such trade having ended in a loss, this private partnership was agreed to be dissolved as from 31st December 1880, and is now in liquidation, and the Society (but by way of experiment only) is now itself carrying on the trade at its own risk.

As regards the three first-stated powers of the charter, the Society (by means of the Apothecaries Act of 1815) extended them so greatly as to effect not only a revolution in their own sphere of operations, but also in the medical profession and in the relations subsisting between the latter and the general public.

This Act (after placing the right of search referred to in the third stated power of the charter on a more precise and practical basis, but to which it is unnecessary to allude as having fallen into necessary desuetude by the various Pharmacy and Poisons Acts) created a court of 12 examiners to be appointed by the master, wardens, and Court of Assistants, who were to examine all persons in England and Wales as to their skill and ability in the science and practice of medicine, and five examiners to examine assistants for the compounding and dispensing of medicine. It authorised the Society to receive fees for granting the respective licences, and (saving the rights of the Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons) it empowered the Society to recover penalties for practising or compounding without such licences.

The Apothecaries Act, 1815, contained, however, two restrictions which were removed by the Apothecaries Act Amendment Act, 1874, namely, (a) the obligation of the 12 examiners being members of the Society of Apothecaries, and being of at least 10 years' standing, and (b) of candidates for examination having served an apprenticeship of five years to an apothecary.

The Act of 1874 also contained other provisions which relate more to questions of medical legislation than this present inquiry. Shortly the effect of the Act of 1815 was to make the Society of Apothecaries one of the three great medical licensing bodies for England and Wales [the number of its present licentiates is between 8,000 and 9,000], and of the Act of 1874 was to throw open the Society's examinerships and to confer on it a freedom in reference to future medical reform to an extent not exceeded by any other body.

I.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

A.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law or chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1.—The governing body, according to the charter, consists of the Court of Assistants, 24 in number (master wardens and one and twenty of the Society).

2.—The qualification for membership is that of being a member of the Society. (Byelaw 3, "Assistants.") The time and period of election is the court succeeding the court at which a vacancy has been declared (same byelaw). The qualification of voters is that of being a member of the Court of Assistants (same byelaw).

3.—The functions of the full court are (a) Election and removal of assistants, (b) Election of liverymen, (c) Election of officers (Byelaw 1, "Election of liverymen," Byelaw 2, "Election of officers and servants of the Society"), (d) Election of court of examiners under Act of 1815, (e) Election of examiners in arts under regulations of General Medical Council, (f) Election of committees for parliamentary business and management of the Society's botanic garden at Chelsea, (g) Election of examiners for Society's prizes and curator of botanic garden.

The master and wardens alone form the private courts held monthly, when (a) freemen are admitted, (b) liveries are taken up, (c) apprentices bound, (d) bills examined and directed to be paid, cheques signed, and the ordinary routine business of the Society transacted. Each assistant on election pays 12*l.* (Byelaw 5, "Assistants.") Each assistant for each attendance at a Court of Assistants receives 2*l.* 2*s.*, and the like sum is paid to each of the master and wardens at private courts.

The members of the parliamentary committee and botanic garden committee also receive 10*s.* for each attendance.

The auditors of the clerk's accounts receive 1*l.* 1*s.* each, and the auditors of the Court of Examiners a like sum.

4.—See answer to Return A 3, and in addition the following: (A) Confirmation of business transacted at private courts and parliamentary and garden committees; (B) Control of expenditure of the Society; (C) and confirmation of audits of accounts; (D) but by far the heaviest business which comes before the Court is in respect of its duties as the licensing body under the Act of 1815, and in reference to the numerous and important questions which have continually agitated the medical world since the passing of the Medical Act of 1858.

The byelaws require four quarterly Courts of Assistants (Byelaw 4, "Court of Assistants") and a court for the election of master and wardens (Byelaw 1, "Election of master and wardens"), and a court for election of officers (see Byelaw 8, "Election of master and wardens"). The latter court, however, has been merged in the October court.

There are also two special courts held every year, one for the election and another for the swearing in of examiners, and sometimes special courts are held for the consideration of extraordinary business. The courts sit two and sometimes three hours, the business being often very heavy.

The elections of assistants, liverymen, and officers are by ballot (see Byelaw 1, "Manner of election"), and all other questions (except relating to censure or fine) are decided by show of hands, unless ballot demanded by any member (see Byelaws 5, 7, 9, and 11, "Court of Assistants").

The decisions or resolutions of the Court, so far as they affect the Court of Examiners or board of examiners in arts, or any persons concerned in such decisions, are communicated to the parties respectively, otherwise the proceedings are secret (see Byelaw 4, "Assistants," and Byelaw 2, "Clerk to the Society").

5.—Members of the governing body are liable to removal by the Court if incapable or absent for four successive courts without leave or other reasonable cause (see Byelaw 1, "Assistants").

6.—The following is the effect of the byelaws not specifically referred to in answer to questions previous or subsequent:—

(1.) Nature of seal, by whom to be kept, and how to be affixed, and to what.
(2.) The mode of making, altering, or abrogating any byelaw by the Court of Assistants.
(3.) Copies of the byelaws to be given to the freemen at the discretion of the master and wardens.
(4.) Court of Assistants must meet (see also charter) eight days before or eight days after 29 August, and elect master and wardens.
(5.) Persons elected to such respective offices must, under penalty of removal, make a declaration to execute their office before acting. Court of Assistants on death or removal of master or wardens to fill up vacancy. Master and wardens to appoint deputies within nine weeks after master and wardens elected; court to be held for electing officers and auditors of the clerk's accounts, and appointing annual committees.
(6.) Assistants, when elected and refusing to act, to be fined 25*l.*, and not attending court, 5*l.*
(7.) Thirteen persons to constitute a Court of Assistants, seven days' notice to be given of court. All questions to be decided by a majority. Master to have casting vote. Master empowered to call a special court. Master or wardens to call a court, when required, by seven assistants.

B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1.—See answer to Return B 2. The following are the grades of membership. (1) Freemen, called the Yeomanry. (2) The Livery. (3) Court of Assistants. Women are not admitted members.

2.—Freedom may be obtained—(a) by patrimony (i.e., being the son of a freeman); (b) by service (i.e., apprenticeship); and (c) by purchase or redemption. (See Byelaw 4, "Admission of Freemen.") The fees are as follows:—For freedom by servitude, 2*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*; freedom by patrimony, 2*l.* 10*s.*; and for freedom by purchase (which is conferred only on practising apothecaries or persons who have held the office of examiner under the Medical Act, 1858) arbitrary. (See Byelaws 1, 2, 4, and 5, "Admission of Freemen.")

3.—No persons are required (in respect of their particular trade), either by statute or otherwise, to become freemen of the Company. See above, conditions on which persons can become free of the Company by purchase.

There is no process for compelling persons to become so. Freedom of the city is a condition subsequent to membership, and has to be acquired independently, and is optional on the part of a member.

The apothecary of the present day does not consider himself as practising a trade, but the nearest answer to the question is explained by the following facts:—There are between 8,000 and 9,000 apothecaries holding the licence of the Society under the Act of 1815 to practise as apothecaries, and there are 400 members of the Company or Society. Of these a very small number, of advanced age, were apothecaries before the Act of 1815, and there are about six gentlemen, members of the Company, who took up their freedom by patrimony, and who are not apothecaries.

Some doubt has been expressed whether any but apothecaries can legally be members of the Society, but the question has never received a judicial decision.

4.—Freemen are not liable to become, though at their own option they may be, disfranchised. For being so disfranchised freemen have to pay 50*l.* (See Byelaws 2 and 3, "Freemen.")

5.—The number of the livery of the Company is 150.

None but freemen can be elected (Byelaw 1, "Election of Liverymen").

The Court of Assistants elect, and the election immediately takes place on a vacancy being declared; the fee is 21*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.* (Byelaws 1 and 2, "Election of Liverymen.")

Liverymen are not liable to removal.

The master or chairman dissolving court without consent is to be fined.

A member quitting court without leave is liable to fine, and on disobeying byelaws to censure.

Private courts are to be held by master and wardens once a month.

The Court of Assistants is empowered to elect a new liveryman in place of one nominated and refusing to serve. The fine for refusal or wilful neglect is 25*l.*

Every freeman has to pay 10*s.* 6*d.* yearly to support botanical garden.

The master is empowered to summon freemen, and there is a penalty for default. Every freeman is to be obedient to the master, warden, and assistants.

Every freeman, within three months of their being taken, is to bring his apprentices to the Society to be bound, under a penalty of 5*l.*

The Court of Assistants, or master and wardens, are to be satisfied of qualifications of apprentice, and he is to be bound as a condition of freedom.

No apprentice is to be turned over to another freeman without permission, under penalty of 10*l.*

All officers and servants are to be elected annually.

All summonses are to be issued in the name of master and wardens, and are to be delivered or sent by post to usual place of abode, and if sent by post are to be deemed to have been received.

Annually a day to be fixed for a public or general "Herborising" (i.e., botanical excursion), on which day a dinner is to be provided at the expense of at least 10 stewards, to be nominated by the Court of Assistants at the cost of the stewards. (This byelaw has been abrogated.)

On Lord Mayor's Day, or three days after, a dinner is to be provided for court and livery at the expense of the Society. The master and wardens are empowered to invite on the Herborising and Lord Mayor's Day such members of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, and such other official persons, as they shall think fit.

All fines and penalties (reducible at pleasure of Court of Assistants) to be recovered by action of debt in name of Society.

C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1.—The present number of freemen is 250.

2.—The present number of the livery is 150.

3.—The present number of the Court of Assistants is 24, but this is included in the number of the livery.

4.—The following is a return of the freemen elected by patrimony and by service sespectively during each of the last 10 years.

	Servitude.	Patrimony.

5.—The following liverymen have been called during the same period :—

1870	6
1871	11
1872	2
1873	11

D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentices been paid by the Company ?

1.—The following is the number of Apprentices bound at the Hall during the last 10 years :—

1872	6
1876	5
1877	9
	74

2.—All such apprentices were bound to apothecaries, they could not be bound to anyone else. See Byelaw 5, "apprentices."

3.—The Company had never paid any part of the fees or premium of any apprentice.

E.

RETURN E.—Profits and Privileges :—

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3), master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation ? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company ?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body ?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected ? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with ?

1.—As regards (1) and (2). There are no advantages whatever at the present time. The freemen are invited to one public dinner, and the liverymen to three. Both have also the advantage of taking an apprentice, and are eligible to come on the court of assistants.

(3.) The advantages of master wardens and governing body are given in Return E 2.

2.—Freemen and liverymen receive nothing. [See preceding Return.] As regards the master, wardens, and Court of Assistants, the Court fees were doubled at the end of 1878. The average is therefore given for 8, not 10 years.

An ordinary assistant for the 8 years preceding 1878 received 8*l.* 8*s.*; 10*l.* 10*s.*, or 12*l.* 12*s.*, if, besides being an assistant, he was also a member of one or both (as the case might be) of the Parliamentary or Garden Committees; if a master or warden he received 12*l.* 12*s.* in addition for 12 private courts. The result is that the average fees for 8 years received by an ordinary assistant would be not exceeding 12*l.* 12*s.*, and by a master or warden not exceeding 25*l.* 4*s.* per annum.

By the double fees received during the last two years the master and wardens receive 21*l.*, and the ordinary assistant 8*l.* 8*s.*, in addition to the sums given as the average for the 8 years.

3.—There is only one pensioner of the Society, the widow of a late beadle, who receives 25*l.* per annum.

4.—An assistant is usually a liveryman of 15 years' standing. The average present time for which a member continues on the governing body is difficult to state. The three oldest members of the Court have been on it nearly 30 years. Recently elections have been made more frequently. The present master has only been on the Court 7 years.

5.—The Company is at present carrying on trade as an experiment, as above stated.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

A., B., and C.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—There are only two officers, the clerk and the beadle, both named in the charter, and neither of them are members of the Corporation.

By byelaws [4, 5, & 6, "Clerk"] the clerk's duties are defined to be—

(1.) To receive instructions and act in all such matters, under the direction of master and wardens, as are not specifically provided by the laws.

(2.) To receive all fines, penalties, donations, contributions, and sums of money belonging and due to the Society, and to pay such sums of money out of the public funds of the Society as directed by the master and wardens, or any two of them, or by the Court of Assistants.

(3.) To keep an account of all moneys received and paid by him.

It may be assumed that the duties of the clerk were originally those principally of cashier of the Society and transcriber of the minutes and acts of the Court of Assistants. Since the Statute of 1815, however, the clerk has always been a solicitor. The predecessor of the present clerk held the office for 38 years and was (as the present clerk) a member of a leading firm of solicitors. During his (the late clerk's) tenure of the office it became an obvious fact, that if the appointment of clerk and solicitor were to be held by the same person it was impossible that a person could be found at the salary offered who would be capable of advising the Society on the continual questions of medical policy and law, and who could also be in daily attendance for the minor matters of the clerk's duties. The clerk's personal attendance is therefore only exacted at the 12 private courts, and all Courts of Assistants; at these courts he attends as clerk, and he receives a salary of 310*l.*, out of which he has himself to pay a responsible and superior clerk to attend every day at the Hall to discharge the minor duties of the clerk's office. The clerk attends all parliamentary committees, and acts in all matters arising out of the Acts of 1815 and 1874, as solicitor, and charges the ordinary legal charges for work done in that capacity. He has no house, residential apartments, or other emoluments, except a gratuity of 2*l.* 2*s.* each year. The practical permanence of the appointment of clerk, and the necessary experience and skill required in the discharge of most multifarious and complicated duties, make this office one of the greatest responsibility, which could not be held by anyone who did not enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of the Society.

The duties of the beadle are defined by the byelaws to be—

To deliver or cause all summonses to be delivered or sent to members, and to transact and perform all such business and services as directed by the master, wardens, or Court of Assistants [see Byelaws 3 & 4 "Beadle"]. He receives a salary of 105*l.* and has a house on the premises free of rent, he also receives annually 136*l.* 10*s.* for the duties he performs in connexion with the Court of Examiners, duties of the most varied and important nature, but which salary of 136*l.* 10*s.* is paid out of the Court of Examiners' Fund.

B.—There is only one servant of the Company (the housekeeper); she receives from the Company 52*l.* 10*s.*, and from the Court of Examiners 52*l.* 10*s.*, out of their funds, and has also a house free of rent.

PART IV.—B.

RETURN B. 1.—List of Moneys belonging to the Apothecaries' Company, invested in Government or other Stocks, Shares, Funds, or Securities.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., Gift with Name of Donor, Bequest with Name of Testator, Sale of Lands, and which, &c.	In what Name standing—e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what Account belonging—e.g., any particular Fund or Trust Account.	Net Annual Receipt.	Remarks.
£ s. d. 21,671 5 7	Bank of England.	Partly from accumulation of rents and fines, &c., and partly from sale of house property. See remarks.	Master, Wardens, and Society of Apothecaries.	Company - -	About 2,200*l.* -	Up to 1862 the amount of Bank Stock was only 6,137*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* Between that date and 1870, inclusive, the Company sold their house property in Chatham Place and Earl Street, and invested the proceeds in Bank stock.
2,450 0 0	Consols. - -	Excess of receipts over payments in respect of licenses to practise granted by the Society of Apothecaries under the Act of 1815.	Ditto - -	Court of Examiners.	About 72*l* -	This amount is taken from the audited accounts of 1879, but in fact it is a continually varying figure. The annual receipts for licenses, &c. from the Court of Examiners are not now sufficient to meet the payments, and the deficiency is met by a sale of part of this stock which is kept altogether distinct from the Corporation fund. The salary paid to the Court of Examiners (as it is) is a very inadequate one.

RETURN B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding ten years.

RETURN B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere.

2.—The following are the balances for the last ten years:—

31st December 1870	898	4	1
„ 1871	1,182	19	6
„ 1872	205	6	0
„ 1874	364	14	6
„ 1875	487	5	1
31st December 1876	684	16	0
„ 1877	*1,940	5	11

*This included balance of moneys received from Board of Works, referred to in Return C. 1.

3.—The household furniture is insured for 500*l.*, the plate for 200*l.* Both of these are probably very full estimates of the value of the articles in question.

C.

RETURN C.—(1) A list of any properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C.—(2) A list of any properties of which the Company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

1.—The botanic garden at Chelsea, held by the Society under grant from Sir Hans Sloane, Bart., dated the 20th February 1722.

The trust is to use same as a physic garden, and the grant is made void if not so used, and in such event trusts over under same restrictions are declared in favour of the Royal Society and the College of Physicians.

The trust has, however, been faithfully observed by the Society, and even during periods when its income from any property held by the Society was insufficient to maintain it the garden was preserved at the personal expense of members of the Society. A rent of 5*l.* was reserved to Sir Hans Sloane and his heirs by the deed, and is always paid.

The expenditure for each of the last 10 years on the botanic garden is as follows:—

1870	463	9	10
1872	460	2	7

Less received from the Metropolitan Board of Works for the erection of wall and railing as compensation for the loss of the water-frontage of the Society's garden by the Chelsea Embankment	2,713	0	0
Balance expended by the Society	6,784	11	4

D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

D.—The premises adjoining the Hall and not used by the Company or their officers.

With the exception of a house let on a yearly tenancy to the "Times" Office for the last 10 years at the rent of 30*l.*, the Society received annually for the above premises, not used for Company purposes, from the members of the private partnership before referred to, for the last 10 years up to Christmas, 1878, 465*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*, and subsequently up to Christmas, 1880, 600*l.* per annum.

The whole of the premises so used by the private partnership have now lapsed to the Society.

E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last ten years in respect of—(1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

E.—(1.) The following are the amounts received on admission to freedom during the last 10 years by patrimony and servitude respectively :—

F.

RETURN F.

(1) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

(2) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1. See Return H., Part IV.

F. 1 and 2.—If the botanic gardens were taken under the compulsory powers of an Act of Parliament, and a garden had to be provided elsewhere or an equivalent given in some shape or another, the Society would, having regard to the value of the site of the present garden, be probably relieved from any further annual outgoings in respect of the substituted garden or equivalent. They might, therefore, under such circumstances, save the annual charge of the garden, or some portion of it, now defrayed by the Company. If the Society (see Returns F. and H., Part I.) should carry on the drug trade at a profit, or, discontinuing such trade, should let off the premises formerly used for that purpose, they might receive an augmentation to their present income. By profit on trade or increased rent from disused premises their income is therefore likely to increase, but not materially.

G.

RETURN G.

The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company.

G. 1.—The previous answers will show that there is no property to manage.

G. 2.—By the clerk, under the control of the master and wardens and Court of Assistants.

G. 3.—By two members of the Court of Assistants who have not served the office of warden, and subsequently by a committee of the master and wardens and past masters of the Society, before whom the two auditors attend, and who report to the Court of Assistants. (See Byelaws 1, 2, 3, and 4, "Audit of the Accounts of the Society.")

The audit of the Company's accounts (they being in so small a compass) is, as may be inferred, most simple.

G. 4.—The Company's accounts are not published, and are only accessible to members of the Court of Assistants.

They have also occasionally paid eminent lecturers for lectures on special subjects such as "State Health."

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appropria- "tion or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

IN the present state of transition in the medical world and the Society's affairs it would be impossible at present to suggest anything very practical, but the Society may confidently appeal to what they have done in the past as a guarantee for what they will endeavour to do in the future.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave the fullest information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. See extract at the end of Part IV., Return G.

APPENDIX B.

Some correspondence took place between the Commissioners and the Company shortly after the returns had been received, but the Commissioners have not thought it necessary to print the letters.

*ARMOURERS' AND BRASIERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the company were accompanied with the following protest:—

In the annexed Returns the company of Armourers and Brasiers has furnished full particulars of its trust property.

With respect to such of the property of the company as is not subject to any trust, the company is advised that it might properly as well as legally decline to furnish any information; the company is not, however, disposed to insist upon its strict rights.

The company thinks it, indeed, its duty to claim before the Commissioners the right which it would be entitled to assert even in legal proceedings before courts having power to enforce discovery, of protecting from disclosure its titles to the private property of which it is in possession, but with this exception it has given such information as is hoped will be found sufficient for the purposes of Her Majesty's Commission.

But in giving this information the company desires in the most formal manner to state that its readiness so to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on its part of any right in the crown or any other jurisdiction to enquire into its private property, or to deal with it in disregard to its rights.

The company desires also to record its claims that, if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust or is the private property of the company, every such question must be determined only by the Courts of Law.

The company has in these Returns endeavoured to the best of its abilities to furnish such information as the Commissioners have asked for, but it desires to place on record the fact that such information is given without prejudice in any way to its rights, and that the company claims not to be estopped or prejudicially affected in any way by the Returns now made.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being especially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding Returns, which "found, regulate or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The date of the foundation of the company of Armourers and Brasiers is not known, but it was certainly long previous to the year 1453, when King Henry VI. granted a charter incorporating the company by the title of "The Fraternity or Guild of St. George of the Men of "the Mistery of Armorers of the City of London." In that charter it is recited that the men of the mistery of Armourers of the City of London and their predecessors had for a long time past established a guild amongst themselves, and had founded and maintained a chapel in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's to St. George the Martyr, and it appears from documents in the possession of the company that the guild were in the possession of a hall as early as the year 1428. Again, in a report made in the year 1578 by two referees appointed by the Court of Aldermen to settle certain differences which had arisen between the Company of Armourers and the Company of Bladesmiths as to the right of search of armour, guns, weapons, and edge tools, claimed by the said companies, the following passage occurs: "The Armourers did shewe "unto us that in Kinge Edward the Second his time the "Lord Maior and his brethren did ther graunt the serche "unto the Armourers." From this evidence it is clear that the company was in existence as a recognised guild as early as the beginning of the fourteenth century (1307–1327). There is no record in existence shewing the circumstances in which the company took its origin.

B.—The following is a list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which are now or which (so far as is known) have been at any time in the possession of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers:—

* The Court forwarded to the Commissioners with the returns a volume containing photographs of the charters and byelaws of the Company.

Charter dated 8th May, 31st year of Henry VI.
Charter dated 8th November, 1st year of Elizabeth.
Charter dated 29th September, 17th year of James I.
Charter dated 12th May, 1st year of James II.
Charter dated 17th June, 7th year of Anne.

C.—There are no trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the Company of Armourers and Brasiers.

D.—There are no decrees of court, whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, nor any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, regulating or affecting the Company of Armourers and Brasiers, so far as is known.

E.—There are no other documents not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns which found, regulate, or affect the Company of Armourers and Brasiers, so far as is known.

F.—The origin of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers is lost in antiquity. The company was, however, founded previously to the beginning of the 14th century, for records are in existence shewing that at that time (1307–1327) the company had vested in it the right of search of armour and weapons. It would appear from documents in the possession of the company that as early as the year 1428 the company was in the possession of a hall. In the year 1453 the company was incorporated by a charter from King Henry VI. by the title of "The Fraternity or Guild of St. George of the Men of the Mistery of Armorers in the City of London," and had licence granted to it to appoint a chaplain to its chapel in St. Paul's Cathedral.

It is believed that the company of Brasiers was incorporated about the year 1479 by Edward IV., and that the craft of bladesmiths was incorporated with the company of Armorers about the year 1515, but the company has no authentic evidence in its possession as to these facts.

In the year 1559 Queen Elizabeth granted a charter of Inspeximus, confirming the Letters Patent of King Henry VI.

In the year 1619 King James I., in consideration of the sum of 100*l.*, granted Letters Patent confirming the title of the Fraternity or Guild of St. George of the Men of the Mistery of Armorers, in the City of London, to the messuages and lands then held by it. The greater part of these messuages and lands is still in the possession of the company.

In the year 1685 King James II. granted Letters Patent to the company which (inter alia) directed that all edge tools and armour, and all copper and brass work wrought with the hammer within the City of London, or a radius of five miles therefrom, should be searched and approved by expert artificers of the company.

In the year 1708 the Company of Armorers was by Letters Patent granted by Queen Anne incorporated with the Brasiers under the corporate title of "The Company of Armourers and Brasiers in the City of London." In this charter it is recited that of late years many of the members of the Company of Armourers had employed themselves in working and making vessels, and wares of copper and brass wrought with the hammer, and that for want of powers to search and make byelaws to bind the workers of such wares in the City of London, frauds and deceits in the working of such goods and vessels had increased, and power was thereby granted to the Company of Armourers and Brasiers to make byelaws for the government of the company; and also of all persons making any work or vessel of wrought or hammered brass or copper, in the Cities of London and Westminster, or within a radius of five miles thereof, and with authority to inflict fines and penalties against persons offending against such byelaws. And the company was invested with power to inspect and search for all goods worked or wrought with the hammer and exposed to sale within such limits as aforesaid. No person was allowed to sell or make armour or vessels, or wares of copper or brass wrought with the hammer, unless he was a member or had been apprenticed to a member of the company.

It would appear that the master and wardens exercised a very extensive jurisdiction in ancient days, fining and punishing members of the company for social offences as well as for infringements of the byelaws of the company, and hearing and adjudicating upon all questions arising between members of the company and their apprentices, and also inflicting fines on persons making or selling goods of an improper quality.

This company is still in the habit of binding apprentices to masters engaged in the trades of workers of brass and copper, and of pensioning infirm members of those trades.

G.—The Company of Armourers and Brasiers holds a licence in mortmain. Such licence was granted by the various charters held by the company. By the charter of Queen Anne the company is empowered to purchase and hold, in addition to the lands then held by the Fraternity or Guild of St. George of the Men of the Mistery of Armourers, other lands not exceeding the yearly value of 500*l.*, over and above all charges and reprises. The company was thereby invested with this power, in addition to the other powers vested in it by its previous charters.

The licence of the company in mortmain is not exhausted.

H.—There is vested in the Company of Armourers and Brasiers by charter the right of exercising superintendence over the making and selling of armour, and of all vessels, wares, goods, and commodities made and wrought out of wrought copper and wrought brass hammered. The company is invested with powers of search and inspection over and is empowered to make byelaws for regulating the above-mentioned manufactures and trades, and has power to inflict fines and penalties in the case of a breach of such byelaws. The exercise of such control is limited to the City of London, and a radius of 5 miles adjacent thereto.

No control over the above-mentioned manufactures or trades is now exercised by the company, and it would appear that none has been exercised since the end of the last century, when the company searched at Bartholomew and other fairs.

The circumstances under which the exercise of such control fell into desuetude are not known, but it is believed that such control was abandoned in consequence of a decision or expression of opinion adverse to its exercise given by the courts of law.

PART I.—RETURN I. CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its origin and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

For each of the years 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, 1875, 1876, and 1877.

NOTE.—The Returns of the Charities under the management of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers for each of the years 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, are precisely similar to the Returns for the year 1870.

PART II.—A.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers is constituted of a master, upper warden, renter warden, and 18 assistants, who form and are called the court of assistants. The constitution of the governing body is according to the Charter of Queen Anne.

2. Every member of the livery of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers is qualified to become a member of the court of assistants of the company.

On the death, resignation, or other removal of a member of the court of assistants a vacancy is declared by the master at a subsequent quarterly court, and the election of a new member in the place of the member so dying, resigning, or being removed as aforesaid takes place at a subsequent quarterly court after the vacancy is declared. The election is by ballot, and only members of the court of assistants are qualified to vote.

3. The functions of the court of assistants are to transact all business relating to the company.

The functions of the master are to preside at all courts and meetings of the company, and to act for the company in all minor matters and in cases of emergency happening between the holding of courts of the company. The master is assisted by the wardens in the performance of his duties.

The functions of the upper warden are to preside at all courts and meetings of the company in the absence of the master and generally to act as deputy to the master.

The functions of the renter warden are to collect the rents of the property belonging to and the other income of the company, to make all payments on behalf of the company allowed by the court and, under their direction, to manage the estates of the company, and generally to act in all matters as attorney for the company and as deputy for the master and upper warden in their absence.

The master, upper warden, and renter warden, meet once a week at the hall of the company to transact the business of the company.

The only fees or fines paid by a member of the livery of the company on his admission to the court of assistants are 2*l.* to the poor's box, 2*l.* to the clerk of the company, and 10*s.* to the beadle. A fee of five guineas is paid at each court of assistants to every member of the court who is present at the commencement of business, and a fee of one guinea is paid at each committee meeting to every member of the court of assistants appointed and serving on the committee who is present at the commencement of business.

4. The court of assistants of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers transact all business questions and matters in any way relating to the company or to the management of the property of the company, with the exception of the election of the renter warden, clerk, and beadle of the company respectively.

Previous notice of all business to be transacted by the court of assistants and of all motions to be made by members of the court is given to each member of the court. All business is transacted and all questions are discussed in court, the decision of a majority of the members present prevailing. Eleven members of the court of assistants form a quorum, of which number the master and wardens or any one of them must form part.

A court of assistants is held annually for the election of the master and upper warden upon the feast day of St. George or within 60 days after. Quarterly courts of assistants are held upon or within 10 days after each of the usual quarter days. Half-quarterly courts of assistants are held on or about half-quarter day, the annual court for the election of a master and wardens as aforesaid being the half-quarterly court nearest St. George's Day.

Courts of assistants are held half-yearly in the months of June and December in each year for the purpose of auditing the accounts of the company.

A court of assistants is held in the month of May or June in each year for the purpose of taking and checking the inventory of the property of the company.

A court of assistants is held in the month of May in each year for the purpose of viewing the estates of the company. The master and wardens or any two of them have power to summon special courts, and the court of assistants have power to appoint committees, but special courts and committees are alike of rare occurrence, the entire business of the company being, as a general rule, transacted at the ordinary meetings of the court of assistants as aforesaid.

The opinions of the members of the court of assistants are taken by a show of hands, except in the case of the election of a master and upper warden, when the votes are taken by marks placed against the names of the persons nominated for the respective offices by the members of the court of assistants, and in the case of the election of a member of the court of assistants, when the votes are taken by ballot, the opinion of a majority of the members present prevailing in all cases. A general court of the company, constituted of the master, wardens, assistants, and liverymen of the company or the greater number of them is held annually on the feast day of St. George, or within 60 days after, for the election from among the assistants of a renter warden. A general court of the company similarly constituted has power to make and inflict fines and penalties in the case of a breach of the byelaws of the company.

General courts of the company, constituted of the master, wardens, assistants, and liverymen of the company (30 to form a quorum, of which number the master and one of the wardens must form part) are held for the election of a clerk and beadle to the company respectively, and of a renter warden in case of the death, resignation, or removal of the renter warden elected for the year. The opinions of the members of the general courts of the company are taken by ballot, the opinion of the majority prevailing in all cases.

The resolutions and decisions of the court of assistants and of the general courts are not published, but minutes of such resolutions and decisions are entered in the minute books of the company.

5. The master, wardens, and members of the court of assistants are liable to removal for evil government in their respective offices, for misdemeanour, or for any other reasonable cause; such removal is effected by the decision of a majority of the master, wardens, and members of the court of assistants.

6. The following is a statement of the byelaws of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers:—

Byelaws bearing date the 26th day of January 1570, made in pursuance of the Act of 19 Henry VII., and sanctioned by the Lord Keeper and the Chief Justices of the Pleas and Common Pleas respectively.

Byelaws bearing date the 15th day of February 1710, made in pursuance of the before-mentioned Act and sanctioned by the Lord Keeper and the Chief Justices of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas respectively.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. Any British subject is qualified to become a member of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers.

The several grades of membership of the company are as follows:—

1. Freemen (formerly called yeomanry).
2. Liverymen.
3. Members of the court of assistants.

The daughters of freemen of the company are occasionally admitted to the freedom, but no women have been admitted to the livery of the company.

2. The freedom of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers may be obtained by the following modes:—

1. By patrimony:—The son or daughter of a freeman of the company born after the admission of his or her father to the freedom is entitled to admission to the freedom of the company. The fees payable in respect of admission to the freedom of the company by patrimony are as follows:—By a master: Company, 1*l.* 10*s.*; clerk, 1*l.*; beadle, 7*s.* 6*d.*; poor's box, 1*l.*; stamp, 1*l.* By a journeyman:— Company, 1*l.* 10*s.*; clerk, 1*l.*; beadle, 7*s.* 6*d.*; poor's box, 10*s.*; stamp, 1*l.*
2. By service:—Any person having duly served an apprenticeship of seven years to a freeman of the company is eligible for admission to the freedom of the company. The fees payable in respect of admission to the freedom of the company by this mode are as follows, viz.—By a master: Company, 1*l.* 10*s.*; clerk, 10*s.*; beadle, 7*s.* 6*d.*; poor's box, 1*l.*; stamp, 1*l.*—By a journeyman: Company, 1*l.* 10*s.*; clerk, 10*s.*; beadle, 7*s.* 6*d.*; poor's box, 10*s.*; stamp, 1*l.*
3. By purchase:—A foreigner (i.e., a person not coming under either of the above-mentioned classes) can obtain the freedom of the company, if (being first duly proposed and seconded) he is elected thereto by the court of assistants. The fees payable in respect of admission to the freedom of the company by purchase are as follows:—Company, 105*l.*; clerk, 3*l.* 3*s.*; beadle, 15*s.*; poor's box, 2*l.* stamp, 3*l.*

By gift:—The freedom of the company may be obtained by gift by any person who is elected thereto by the court of assistants. This power, however, is but very rarely exercised. No fees are paid by persons on whom the freedom of the company is conferred.

3. No persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers. By the byelaws of Anne it is provided that all persons being free of the City of London, or working armour, or vessels, or wares of wrought copper or wrought brass worked with the hammer, and living within the Cities of London an Westminster, or within a radius of five miles, who have served a seven years' apprenticeship to an armourer or brasier, shall and may be admitted to the freedom of the company. There is no process by which members of such trades can compel the company to make them members of the company, nor is there any process for compelling such members to procure admission to the freedom of the company. The freedom of the City of London is not a condition precedent or subsequent to membership of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers, but it is a condition precedent to admission on the livery of the company. All members applying to take up their livery must deposit their copy of the freedom of the City of London with the clerk of the company at the hall.

It is believed that there are members of the company who are not free of the City of London, but the number is not known and cannot be ascertained.

Many persons exercising or connected with the trades of a coppersmith, brasier, and engineer in London become members of the company. The number (so far as can be ascertained) of the members of such trades who are at present members of the company is 14. The number of the members of the company (so far as can be ascertained) who have been apprenticed to or are connected with members of such trades is 12. The number of the members of what may be called the trade of a "brasier," the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company, is (so far as can be ascertained) 14, in addition to numerous persons connected with such trade who have taken up the freedom of the company.

4. This company has no power of disfranchising the freemen of the company.

5. The livery of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers is not limited in number.

The qualification for election to the livery of the company is membership of the company by freedom. The members of the court of assistants are the electors thereto. Previous notice of the election of a freeman of the company to the livery is given; the candidate is proposed and seconded, and the election takes place in court. The opinions of the members are taken by show of hands, that of the majority of the members present prevailing. The fees payable on election to the livery of the company are as follows:—In the case of freedom by patrimony or service: Company, 30*l.*; clerk, 1*l.* 10*s.*; beadle, 10*s.*; poor's box, 1*l.* In the case of a foreigner admitted to the freedom: Company, 105*l.*; clerk, 3*l.* 3*s.*; beadle, 1*l.*; poor's box, 2*l.*

The company has not for a long period exercised any right which it may have of removing liverymen from the livery.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) A register is kept of persons admitted to the freedom of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers, but as the notice to the company of the death of freemen is not compulsory and is not always given, it is not possible to state the present number of freemen of the company.

(2.) The present number of the livery of the company is 66 (not including therein the members of the court of assistants).

(3.) The present number of the assistants of the company is 20, one of the assistants having quite recently died, and no one having been yet elected in his place. There are no members of the company other than those hereinbefore mentioned.

(4.) The number of admissions to the freedom of the company by each mode respectively, which have taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years is as follows:—

Year.	Patrimony.	Service.	Redemption.	Gift.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentices been paid by the company?

(1.) The number of apprentices bound at the hall of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, is as follows:—

Year.	Number of Apprentices.
1872	10
1876	15
1877	18
1879	5

(2.) The number of apprentices bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trades of coppersmiths, brasiers, and engineers is as follows:—

Year.	Number of Apprentices.
1872	6
1876	9
1877	11

(3.) None of the fees or premiums of such apprentices have been paid by the company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. (1) The advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a Freeman of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers are as follows:—

Eligibility for himself and his widow or children to hold a pension and rooms at the almshouses of the company, or to receive other relief if elected thereto by the court of assistants.

Eligibility for election to the livery of the company.

Eligibility to have apprentices bound to him through the company who can obtain their freedom by servitude.

Eligibility for his children, born after he has taken up the freedom of the company, to obtain the freedom of this company by patrimony.

(2) The advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a Liveryman of the company, in addition to the advantages incident to his position as a freeman of the company, are as follows:—

Eligibility for himself and his widow or children to hold a pension and rooms at the almshouses of the company, or to receive other relief if elected thereto by the court of assistants.

Eligibility for election to the court of assistants.

An invitation to dine with the company four times in the year, and on one of those occasions an invitation for a guest.

A fee of one guinea for attending the general court held for the election of a renter warden, if present at the commencement of business when the names are called over, at which court a member of the livery is at liberty to bring forward any matter which he may think affects the interest of the livery.

(3) The advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a Member of the Court of Assistants, in addition to the advantages incident to his position as a freemen of the company, are as follows:—

Eligibility for himself and his widow or children to hold a pension or rooms at the almshouses of the company, and to receive other relief, if elected thereto by the court of assistants.

Eligibility to hold the offices of master and warden of the company.

A fee of five guineas for attending at each court, if present at the commencement of business, and a fee of one guinea for attending on a committtee, if present at the commencement of business.

An invitation to dine with the company after the usual courts, and an invitation for a guest on every quarterly court dinner, and on every alternate livery dinner.

The master, upper warden, and renter warden have no advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, in addition to their privileges as members of the court of assistants.

2. The sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company of Armourers and Brasiers to the members of the company are as follows:—

To whom paid.	Fees for attending Courts and Committees of the Company.	Pensions.	Other Payments.
Assistants	1,185 2 8	—	—
Widows and daughters of assistants	—	400 0 0	—
Liverymen	A. 43 7 0	55 18 0	—
Widows and daughters of liverymen	—	374 10 0	—
Freemen	—	B. 299 8 8	—
Widows or daughters of freemen	—	B. 588 4 0	—

Note A.—This is an average for seven years only, no fees being paid to liverymen previously to the year 1873.

B.—These figures are the amounts paid for the year 1879, but they are believed to represent the average amounts paid during the last 10 years.

3. The circumstances in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation are the fact of the applicant being in poverty or reduced circumstances, and being a member of the company, or the wife or child of a member of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers. There are, however, other pensioners and inmates of the almshouses not connected with the company.

The number of present pensioners is 65, and the amount paid to them is 2,339*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* per annum.

The number of the present pensioners who were working coppersmiths, brasiers, and engineers is upwards of 20.

It should be stated that, in addition to the above-mentioned payments, the company grant between 300*l.* and 400*l.* per annum to various charities and institutions, and 525*l.* per annum to the City and Guilds of London Institute for the Advancement of Technical Education.

4. (1) The average standing of a member of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers, when he is made a member of the court of assistants (taken from the average of the present members of the court), is 18½ years.

(2) A member remains on the court of assistants for life, unless removed for misconduct. The average number of years for which a member of the court of assistants remains on the court (taken from the average of the 21 last deceased members of the court) is 19 years.

5. The Company of Armourers and Brasiers does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

A, B, and C.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The officers of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers are the clerk, the surveyor, and the beadle to the company respectively.

Clerk.

The duties of the clerk to the company (Mr. Marshall Pontifex) are as follows:—

To attend all courts and committees of the company.

Under the direction of the court of assistants to transact the business of the company, and generally to attend to all matters, whether of a legal nature or not, which concern the company.

To attend to all persons having business with the company, to prepare the petitions of poor persons applying for relief, and to reply to all correspondence and answer all enquiries.

To prepare and carry in the lists of the members of the company entitled to vote in elections for the City of London, and to attend the court of the revising barrister upon the revision of the list of voters.

To keep the account and other books of the company, as follows: rough and fair minutes of the proceedings at the courts of the company, account book, ledger, rental book, renter warden's pension book, inventory book, freemen's book, and livery roll.

To prepare instructions for the use of the renter warden in the performance of the duties of his office, with a schedule of the rents, &c., to be collected, and the policies and premiums to be paid and other payments to be made by him, and also to prepare the receipts for all rents paid and payments made to the company.

To prepare agenda papers, list of pensions, &c., for the use of the court.

To instruct the beadle to issue to the members of the company the necessary summonses and notices of courts to be held.

To prepare and complete the indentures of apprenticeship of persons bound as apprentices to members of the company.

To prepare and complete the bond given by the renter warden and the power of attorney from the company to him.

The salary of the clerk to the company is 300*l.* per annum.

The clerk in addition to this is reimbursed all sums of money duly expended by him on behalf of the company, and an additional sum is voted by the court of assistants in the case of special services rendered and work done by him.

The clerk also receives the following fees:—

On binding an apprentice.—Without a premium or with a premium under 20*l.*	0	7
With premium above 20*l.* and under 50*l.*	0	12	6

Hall-Keeper.

B.—The only servant of the Company of Armourers and Brasiers is the hall-keeper (Mr. Richard Canning Tanner).

The duties of the hall-keeper are as follows:—

To devote the whole of his time and attention to the purposes of the company.

To reside at the hall and never to sleep off the premises without the permission of the master or one of the wardens.

To be at all times ready to give his attention and services on the master and wardens respecting any matters relating to the company.

To attend the court of assistants and liverymen at all meetings.

To attend at the almshouses and pay the occupants their pensions, as directed by the court of assistants.

To report upon the condition of the almshouses and their occupants at each quarterly court.

To communicate immediately with the master and wardens when anything may occur relative to the company.

To have the custody and care of the hall and apartments, and of all the property and effects belonging to the company in and about the same.

To keep the hall, apartments, and premises, and every description of furniture, goods, and chattels, at all times clean and in good order in all respects.

To keep the hall and premises aired by opening the windows when the weather is fine, and to have fires therein and in the heating apparatus when required, the hall-keeper being allowed to take what coals are reasonable and necessary for his own purposes from the company's cellar.

To have the direction and superintendence of the butler, winemen, waiters, and attendants, and to see to the general arrangement and comfort of the meetings of the court and livery at all their courts and entertainments, and particularly to attend as much as possible in the dining room during dinner time to see that the company are properly waited upon, and that the waiters and others do their duty.

To exercise supervision over all workmen and others employed in and about the hall, and forthwith to report any cases of misconduct to the master.

The hall-keeper has at his own expense to provide all domestic and other assistance necessary to carry out the foregoing duties.

The salary of the hall-keeper is 200*l.* per annum, and 50*l.* per annum is allowed him by the company to provide domestic servants.

The hall-keeper is not a member of the company.

C.—The clerk to the Company of Armourers and Brasiers and the beadle to the company are elected at a general court of the company, constituted of the master, wardens, assistants, and liverymen of the company.

The elections are held by ballot, the opinion of the majority prevailing.

The surveyor to the company is elected by the court of assistants.

The hall-keeper to the company is appointed by the court of assistants.

"8. 38 little messuages or cottages in the same parish.

"9. 12 messuages in the parish of St. Botolph Without, Bishopsgate."

The Commissioners add: "We have no means of ascertaining the present value of this property, nor whether the whole is yet in the possession of the company."

The company gave the Commissioners considerable information.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
February 15th, 1882.

SIR,

THE Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Armourers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners; but, at the same time, to state that that information is not, in their judgment, quite sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the Returns of the Armourers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Armourers.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with respect to the following point:—

PART IV. Circular of August 14th, 1880.

The Court have not stated their income in detail for the 10 years respectively.

Armourers and Braziers' Company,
Armourers' Hall,
81, Coleman Street, London, E.C.,
May 11th, 1882.

SIR,

REFERRING to your letter dated the 15th February last, I now beg to hand you herewith a detailed statement of the income of the company for the 10 years referred to in Part 4, Return H., of the circular of the 14th August 1880.

I shall be obliged by your acknowledging the receipt of the statement.

I am, Sir,
Yours obediently,

APPENDIX C.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
June 15th, 1882.

Sir,

Referring again to the Circular of the Commissioners, dated 15th February, I beg to point out some matters with respect to which the Commissioners have respectfully to ask the Court of the Worshipful Company of Armourers and Braziers for a little further information.

1. The Commissioners would be glad to know whether the trust income of the Company is to any and what extent included in the Statement of Income and Expenditure with which the Court has favoured the Commissioners, and what the amount of the Company's trust income was for the year 1879? The Commissioners acknowledge that a very full answer has been returned to Part I., Return I., but they prefer to take the Company's own computation of the amount of their trust income.

2. The Commissioners would be glad to know the rateable value of the Company's almshouses in Britannia Place, Bishopsgate.

The Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court and to yourself for replies to the above two questions.

I am, &c.

Marshall Pontifex, Esq., H. D. Warr.
Clerk to the Armourers' and Braziers' Company.

Armourers' Hall,
81, Coleman Street, E.C.,
July 14th, 1882.

Sir,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th ultimo, which was placed before the Court of this Company at their last meeting.

I am instructed to reply that the Company have already given all the information on the first point of enquiry in your letter in their power, and that they are unable to furnish any further information upon the matter.

With respect to your second enquiry, I have to inform you that the Company's almshouses in Britannia Place, Bishopsgate, are not entered in the Valuation List for the Parish. I am therefore unable to give you the rateable value thereof.

I am, &c.

Marshall Pontifex,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
&c.

BAKERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the company were accompanied with a letter, from which the following is an extract :—

"With respect to such of their property as is not subject to any trust, the company are advised that they "might properly as well as legally decline to furnish any information. They are not, however, disposed to "insist upon their strict right. In giving the information comprised in the returns the company desire in the "most formal manner to state that their readiness so to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or here- "after as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown or any other jurisdiction to inquire into their "private property, or to deal with it in disregard of those rights.

"They desire also to record their claim that if any question be made whether any particular property is "subject to any trust or is the private property of the company, every such question must be determined only "by the Courts of Law."

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list which dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted.

Return H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A. The Bakers' Company was first incorporated by charter of Henry VIII., dated 22nd July 1509, to make, create, build, and establish a certain perpetual fraternity or guild of one master and four keepers of the commonalty of freemen of the mystery of bakers of the City of London and suburbs thereof then dwelling, or thereafter to dwell, and of the brothers and sisters freemen of the said mystery and others who would chuse to be of the same fraternity or guild within the city aforesaid, and that the same master, four keepers, and commonalty should for ever continue to be one corporate body, with power to elect annually from among themselves one master and four keepers for the superintending ruling and governing of the said mystery and commonalty.

B. The following is a list of the charters or of copies of charters in the possession of the company.

1. Charter of Henry VIII., 22 July 1509, above stated.

2. 11th year of Queen Elizabeth, 26th May. After reciting that the purpose of the charter was to form into a body corporate the freemen of the city of the mystery or art of bakers in the city and suburbs, as well white bakers as brown bakers using the art of baking bread of any kind whatever, to be exposed for sale for the good regulation and government of the same mystery or art, it was granted that the freemen of the said city using the art within the said city and suburbs should be one body corporate to have perpetual succession with power by the name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery of the Bakers of London, to acquire receive and possess lands, tenements, liberties, etc., of whatever nature or species for themselves and their successors in fee and perpetuity with power to sue, etc., and to be sued, to elect annually one master and four wardens of the freemen of the mystery, having authority to supervise, rule, govern, and correct the said mystery and freemen thereof and other household servants and apprentices and all others using the art of baking any bread to be exposed for sale to make laws, institutions, and ordinances for the good rule and government of the master, wardens, and commonalty and all others occupying the mystery or touching the officers servants and apprentices of the men using the same, and to make, ordain, or provide such kinds of pains, penalties, punishments, and imprisonments against all offending against such laws, etc. with power to levy and keep the same fines and amercements with power also to hold and enjoy and acquire for themselves and their successors for ever the hall in the parish of St. Dunstan, and to convoke meetings when necessary. Power is also given to have, receive, and acquire lands, tenements, and hereditaments of the clear annual value of 40*l.* besides the hall. To enjoy within the said city and suburbs, and two miles every way round the suburbs entire supervision scrutiny correction punishment and government of the said mystery and commonalty of freemen and others using the art or mystery of bakers, and there are other provisions regarding the making of different kinds of bread.

3. 19 James 1, 6th June 1622.—By charter of this date it was granted that the persons therein named and all others of the fraternity of brown bakers of the City of London and their successors should be one body corporate and have perpetual succession, with power to sue and be sued, and to purchase, have, obtain, and enjoy any messuages, lands, hereditaments, and chattels whatsoever to them and their successors in fee and perpetuity, and to have a common seal. That there should be one master, three wardens, and 16 assistants to be elected as therein mentioned. To establish laws, &c. for the good order and government of the said master, governors, and commonalty, and the apprentices and servants, and all others using the trade of brown bakers, with power to enforce same. The charter contains provisions for the annual election of master and wardens, the filling up of vacancies, to elect a clerk and beadle, the administering of oaths of office, binding of apprentices, power to make certain kinds of bread and inspection of same, and certain other provisions in relation thereto now obsolete.

4. 2 James II.—By charter of this date it is granted that all and singular the Freemen of the Mystery of Bakers of the City of London and suburbs thereof should for ever thereafter be one body corporate by the name of the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery of Bakers of the City of London with perpetual succession, and that they should be for ever thereafter persons capable in law to purchase, &c. manors, messuages, lands, &c., and other hereditaments whatsoever to them and their successors in fee and perpetuity, and all manner of goods, &c., with power of disposal over the same. To plead and be impleaded in any court. To have a common seal. To elect a master, four wardens, and 30 assistants. Power to the court, or the majority, to make laws. To levy fines and amerciaments, by distress or otherwise, according to law, and to elect a clerk. The assistants and clerk to take the oaths of allegiance and their respective offices. To be members of the Church of England and take the communion.

The charter contains power to the said master, wardens, and commonalty and their successors, and every person free of the company to bake and put to sale white bread, household bread, bread of mixed grain, and other kinds of bread, with power to the master, wardens, and assistants of the company, or any three attended with the clerk or beadle to search and weigh the bread to be made and sold by the said bakers, foreigners, or sellers within the City of London, liberties, or suburbs, and 12 miles circumference, and the sorts of bread, to examine whether the same be good, wholesome, profitable, sizeable, or of assize and not unwholesome, &c., or out of due assize according to the assizes prescribed by law, with power to seize unwholesome or unsizeable bread, or impose fines with power of distress. No cook or mealman or any other person should exercise the trade of a baker, or make bread for sale contrary to the laws of England upon peril which they would incur thereby. And the justices of the city are required to be aiding the said master, &c. and the privileges of former charters, &c. are confirmed.

C, D, and E.—The Bakers' Company have no documents of the nature mentioned in these returns.

F.—The history of the company consists of the exercise by the company of the duties imposed and the enjoyment of the privileges conferred upon them as appears by the foregoing extracts from their charters. The company continued to exercise their powers of search and superintendence over the trade of bakers, and to levy fines, &c. within the city and suburbs and 12 miles round under the authority and with the aid of the magistrates until the year 1822, when an Act of Parliament was passed (3 Geo. 4. cap. 16.) which repealed the Acts then in force relating to the bread sold in the City of London and liberties thereof, and within the weekly bills of mortality and 10 miles of the Royal Exchange, and provided other regulations for the making and sale of bread and preventing the adulteration of meal, flour, and bread within the limits aforesaid.

Since this date the powers conferred on the Bakers' Company over the trade have not been exercised.

G.—The Bakers' Company have a licence in mortmain; under the charter of 2 Jas. II. it is unlimited.

H.—The control which was exercised by the Bakers' Company under the charter 2 Jas. II. and previous charters, and the byelaws made in pursuance thereof over the trade of bakers within the city and suburbs has not been exercised by the company since the passing of 3rd Geo. IV. cap. 16.

Part. I.—Charities.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

A.

Return A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their serivces respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of a master, four wardens, and 30 assistants in accordance with the charter of 2 James II.

2. A member of the governing body must be a liveryman of the company in a respectable position of life. He is elected for life or until removal for misconduct.

There is no stated time for election, but when a vacancy on the court occurs the vacancy is declared at the first court of assistants afterwards, and it is filled up at the next court of assistants; the voters at elections to the governing body are the members of the court of assistants.

3. The master presides over all courts, committees, and meetings of the company, and has the general direction and superintendence of the property and affairs of the company subject to the orders and control of the court of assistants, the four wardens attend the master at all courts and meetings, they have no specific functions to discharge beyond that of aiding and counselling the master in the discharge of his duties, but the junior warden has the charge of the company's wine cellar, the other members of the court of assistants also attend all courts and such committees as they may be appointed upon and assist and aid the master and wardens in the management of the affairs of the company.

Each member on election to the court pays a fine of 52*l.* 10*s.* to the company's funds and receives for his attendance at every meeting of the court which he attends, when the names are called over previous to the commencement of business, a fee of two guineas; there are five meetings of the court in the year. No fee is paid for attendance on committee meetings or monthly courts.

4. The business transacted at the courts relates to the management of the company's property, the management of the almshouses, the election of officers and members of the livery, freemen, and apprentices, auditing of accounts, &c., and the making of byelaws for the good rule and government of the company and its affairs. All resolutions of the court on matters of business before them are passed by a majority on a show of hands, except on the election of officers when the votes are taken by ballot. The courts meet on the first Monday in February, May, July, and October, and on the election day on the last Monday in November. The resolutions are not published, but are accessible at all times to the members of the court of assistants.

5. Members of the court of assistants are liable to suspension or removal for absenting themselves or neglecting or refusing to give aid or assistance to the court not having a reasonable excuse, and it is considered that any member may likewise be removed for any other reasonable cause, but no case of suspension or removal has occurred for very many years.

6. The company have a set of byelaws of 22nd February, 19 James I.; they relate to the election of the master, wardens, and court of assistants, their removal or the removal of the livery if found to be guilty of misconduct for the keeping of accounts, the election of a clerk and beadle, the holding of quarterly and monthly courts for imposing fines upon freemen, the prevention of any person setting up the trade within the city and suburbs, the presentation of apprentices, the election of persons on the livery for the viewing, searching, proving, proving, and weighing of bread and making other regulations for the trade, the making of two stewards, to provide an annual dinner, and prescribing the form of oath to be taken by the master, wardens, members of the court of assistants, clerk, beadle, and freemen on admission to their respective offices. These byelaws are practically inoperative at the present time so far as relates to the regulation of the trade of bakers. There are Standing Orders for the conduct of the company's business, and the administration of its funds.§

The Standing Orders are as follows:

At a court of assistants of the Worshipful Company of Bakers, held at their hall, on Monday, the 2nd day of February 1874:—

It was resolved—

1st. That it is desirable that the funds of the company shall be so managed as to enable the court to invite the members of the livery to dinner at the hall once in every year.

2nd. That the court dinner on the first Monday after election day be discontinued in every year, when the funds of the company shall render it inexpedient to invite the livery to dine on election day.

3rd. That upon the day of election, the visitors to be invited shall be two friends of the master, a friend of the last past master, a friend of each of the wardens, together with such distinguished visitors as the master and wardens may consider expedient.

4th. That the visitors at the quarterly courts shall be two friends of the master, one friend of each of the wardens, and such members of the livery as may have paid the fine within the quarter.

5th. That the visitors at the monthly courts be the last past master, with two other past masters in rotation, and one friend of the master.

6th. That every member of the court shall have the privilege of inviting a friend at the quarterly courts or election day on payment of one guinea to the funds of the company, and giving three days' notice to the master.

7th. That on the application of a liveryman, the master and wardens may be at liberty to invite a friend of such liveryman to the livery dinner, on payment by the latter of 1*l.* 5*s.* to the funds of the company, and giving three days' notice to the master.

8th. That no person not a liveryman be admitted to the gallery of the hall on election day, or any other day when the livery dine, without a ticket of admission signed by the master.

9th. That a sum not exceeding 5*l.* be allowed to the master and wardens for the dinners on the monthly court days, together with any extra expense occasioned by the meeting of committees on those days.

10th. That the sum of 10*s.* per head be allowed to the beadle for the dinner on quarterly courts.

11th. That the balance sheets of the company's and almshouse accounts be printed, and a copy sent to each member of the court with the summons to attend the court in February.

12th. That any motion may be entertained by a quarterly court, provided that notice thereof shall have been given to the clerk at least 14 days previously to such court, and be entered on the summons sent to each member of the court, and that no business shall be entertained without notice.

13th. That any vacancy in the almshouses may be declared at a monthly court, when it may be ordered to be filled up at the next quarterly court.

14th. That notice of a vacancy in the almshouses be advertised in the "City Press" and one daily paper as soon as the vacancy has been declared, or not later than three weeks prior to the meeting of the court for filling up the vacancy.

15th. That an inventory be taken by the master every year, in the month of December, and that he report that he has done so to the court in February, and that notice thereof be inserted in the paper of business.

And it was ordered—

That the foregoing resolutions shall be the standing orders of this court, and shall be read every year upon the day of election, and a copy thereof given to every new master.

Henley Grose Smith,
Clerk.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement.
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. Any naturalized British subject may become a member of the Bakers' Company.

There are three classes of freemen, viz., by patrimony, purchase, or servitude. Women may be admitted to the freedom.

2. An applicant for admission to the freedom by purchase is proposed and seconded by members of the court at one quarterly court for election at the next quarterly court. If the applicant applies for his freedom by patrimony he should produce a copy of his father's certificate of his admission, and a certificate of birth or baptism showing that his father was free of the company at the date of such birth or baptism.

The following table shows the total amount payable in each grade for admission to the freedom:—

Freeman by patrimony—
Company, 4*l.* 7*s.* Clerk, 14*s.* Beadle, 4*s.* Stamp, 1*l.* 1*s.* Total, 6*l.* 6*s.*

Freeman by purchase—
Company, 15*l.* Clerk, 2*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* Beadle, 13*s.* 4*d.* Stamp, 3*l.* 3*s.* Total 21*l.*

Company, 8*l.* Clerk, 1*l.* 1*s.* Beadle, 8*s.* Stamp, 1*l.* 1*s.* Total, 10*l.* 10*s.*

3. Persons using the trade of bakers are required by statute to be free of the company, and are admitted on application, and being proposed and seconded as before mentioned, an action of debt lies against any person carrying on the trade refusing to pay the fees. Such process has not been enforced by the company for very many years. The company do not require admission to the freedom of the City to be a condition precedent to the freedom of the company. It is believed there are several members of the company who are not free of the City of London. Persons exercising the trade of bakers do not commonly become members of the company, there are 69 members of the company connected with the trade.

4. The company are not aware of any liability to disfranchishment.

5. The livery of the company is unlimited.

The qualification is membership of the company by freedom.

The members of the court are the electors.

The elections take place in court on a majority of votes of the members present, the applicant for freedom by purchase having been first proposed and seconded at the previous quarterly court.

The fees payable on election to the livery are as under—

Livery to a freeman by patrimony—
Company, 9*l.* 10*s.* Clerk, 13*s.* 4*d.* Beadle, 6*s.* 8*d.* Total 10*l.* 10*s.*

Livery to a freeman by servitude—
Company, 14*l.* Clerk, 1*l.* 6*s.* Beadle, 9*s.* Total 15*l.* 15*s.*

Livery to a freeman by redemption—
Company, 50*l.* Clerk, 2*l.* Beadle, 10*s.* Total 52*l.* 10*s.*

Liverymen are liable under the byelaws to removal from the livery for misconduct, on being proved by two or more witnesses to be a drunkard or notoriously guilty of any other foul, odious, or notorious crime or offence.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) There are about 250 freemen of the Bakers' Company.
(2.) There are 216 liverymen of the company.
(3.) There are no other members.
(4.) and (5.) During the last 10 years ending November 1880, the following number of freeemen and liverymen were admitted, viz. :—

	Freemen by Servitude.	Freemen by Patrimony.	Freemen by Purchase.	Livery.

Return E.—Profits and Privileges :—

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages to freemen of the Bakers' Company consist of their eligibility for the livery and the company's almshouses.

The advantages to the livery consist of their eligibility for election on the court of assistants and for the company's almshouses, also, if resident within 25 miles from the city boundary, to a vote for the election of members of Parliament for the City of London, and on sundry meetings of the livery when convened to attend at the Guildhall.

The livery are invited to dine with the court of assistants once in each year.

The advantages of the master and wardens and court of assistants consist of their being entitled to attend the court meetings, when the sum of 2*l.* 2*s.* is paid to each gentleman for attendance on each court when the names are called over; the number of meetings in the current year at which fees are paid being five.

Dinner is provided after court meetings or committees.

The master and wardens have the privilege during their term of office to a limited number of invitations for visitors as directed by the standing orders, viz., the master two visitors on quarterly courts, on election day, and one visitor on monthly courts. The wardens are each entitled to one visitor on quarterly courts and election day.

2. The sums paid on an average for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members of the court of assistants for their attendance on the courts amounted to 163*l.*

No fees are paid to other members of the company.

The Commissioners are referred to the returns of the charities of the company for the pensions paid to the tenants of the almshouses.

3. The poverty of applicants in each grade, coupled with their being freemen or liverymen, or widows of freemen or liverymen is held to constitute their claim to a pension. Applications being taken generally in order of date as vacancies occur.

There are 12 inmates of the almshouses, who receive a quarterly allowance of 5*l.* each, and a donation of coals and bread, which last year amounted in value in the whole to 40*l.*

Most of the inmates were formerly members of the trade, the name of which is borne by the company.

4. The members of the court of assistants are generally in business or trade in the City of London, or retired from business; they continue in the court of assistants for life; are generally in a respectable position in life, no bankrupt being elected. They average 20 years from election on the livery to coming on the court of assistants.

5. The company carries on no trade or manufacture connected with its title.

PART IV.—M.

RETURN M.—General and Technical Education.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

The company subscribe the sum of 50*l.* per annum to the City and Guilds of London Institute for the Advancement of Technical Education.

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Bakers' Company have no suggestions to offer on this head.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies'
Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
February 15th, 1882.

Sir,

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Bakers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners: but, at the same time, to state that that information is not, in their judgment, quite sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Bakers' Company with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Bakers.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with regard to the following point:—

Part IV. Circular of August 14th, 1880.
The Court have only stated the details of the Company's corporate expenditure for one year.

4, Warnford Court,
Throgmorton Street,
London, E.C.,
12th May 1882.

Sir,

In pursuance of the request of your letter of the 15th February last, I am instructed to forward to you copies of the accounts of the Bakers' Company for nine years preceding the year the account of which has been supplied.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) Henley Grose Smith.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
City of London
Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.

BARBERS' COMPANY.

The following is an EXTRACT from the LETTER from the CLERK of the COMPANY which accompanied the BARBERS' COMPANY'S RETURNS.

WITH respect to such of their property as is not subject to any trust, the company are advised that they might properly as well as legally decline to furnish any information. They are not, however, disposed to insist upon their strict right.

They think it, indeed, their duty to claim before the Commissioners the right which they would be entitled to assert even in legal proceedings before courts having power to enforce discovery, of protecting from disclosure their titles to the private property of which they are in possession, but with this exception they have given such information as they hope will be found sufficient for the purposes of Her Majesty's Commission.

But in giving this information the company desire in the most formal manner to state that their readiness so to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown, or any other jurisdiction, to inquire into their private property, or to deal with it in disregard of their rights.

They desire, also, to record their claim, that if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the company, every such question must be determined only by the courts of law.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting," the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Barbers' Company were first incorporated in the year 1461.

The preamble to the Letters Patent, 1 Edward IV., by which the company were incorporated, recites that the Freemen of the Mystery of Barbers of the City of London, using the Mystery or Faculty of Surgery, had for a long time exercised and sustained and still continued to exercise and sustain great application and labour, as well about the curing and healing wounds, blows, and other infirmities as in the letting of blood and drawing of teeth, and that by the ignorance and unskilfulness of some of the said barbers, as well freemen of the said city as of others being foreign surgeons, many misfortunes had happened to divers people by the unskilfulness of such barbers and surgeons in healing and curing wounds, blows, hurts, and other infirmities, and that it was to be feared that the like or worse evils might thereafter ensue unless a suitable remedy was speedily provided in the premises.

And it was thereby granted to the freemen of the said mystery of barbers in the said City of London, that the said mystery and all the men of the said mystery, should be one body, and one perpetual community, with power for electing two masters or governors, and that the said masters or governors and commonalty and their successors might make statutes and ordinances for the government of the said mysteries. And that the masters or governors for the time being, and their successors, should have the survey, search, correction, and government of all the freemen of the said city being surgeons, using the mystery of barbers in the said city, and other surgeons being foreigners practising the mystery of surgery within the said city and suburbs thereof, and the punishment of them for offences in not perfectly executing, performing, and using the said mystery, and should have the survey of all manner of instruments, plaisters, and other medicines, and the receipts used by the said barbers and surgeons for the curing and healing of sores, wounds, hurts, and such like infirmities. And that no barber using the said mystery of surgery within the said city or suburbs should be thereafter admitted to exercise the same mystery unless he had first been approved of as well instructed in that mystery by the said masters or governors, or their successors sufficiently qualified in that behalf. And the said masters or governors and commonalty of the said mystery of barbers, and their successors, were exempted from being summoned or put upon any assizes, juries, &c., within the said city and suburbs thereof. And it was further granted to the said masters, &c., of the said mystery of barbers, that they might admit persons able and sufficiently learned and instructed in the mystery of surgery, and by them approved of in form and presented to the mayor of the said city for the time being, and other persons, or in any other manner into the said mystery of barbers, surgeons, and liberty of the said city.

The foregoing charters are in Latin, engrossed in court-hand, with great abbreviations, and are only legible by an expert.

The company have no translations of these documents.

C., D., and E.—The Barbers' Company are not aware of any documents referred to in these returns, founding, regulating, or affecting them.

F.—The Barbers' Company, as incorporated by the Act of 1 Edw. 4, referred to in Part I., Return A., continued to exercise the functions imposed upon it by that and subsequent Acts until the reign of Henry 8th.

By the Act of Parliament of 32 Henry 8th, after reciting that within the said City of London there were then two several and distinct companies of surgeons exercising the science and faculty of surgery, the one company called the Barbers of London, and the other called the Surgeons of London, and that the former were incorporated by the Letters Patent of 1st Edw. 4th, but the latter had not any manner of incorporation; it was enacted that the two several and distinct companies, and their successors, should from thenceforth be united and made one entire and whole body corporate, which should thereafter be called by the name of Masters or Governors of the Mystery or Commonalty of Barbers and Surgeons of London, with power to purchase, enjoy, and take lands, tenements, and other possessions whatsoever which the said Company of Barbers then had and enjoyed, and should enjoy all privileges, &c., at any time granted to the said Company of Barbers or Surgeons; and that all persons of the said company should be exempt from bearing of armour or to be put in any watches or inquests, and should have the search, punishment, and correction, as well of freemen as of foreigners, for offences committed against the good order of barbery or surgery; and that no person within the city or suburbs and one mile compass of the said city using any barbery or shaving should occupy any surgery, letting of blood, or any other thing belonging to surgery, except drawing of teeth; and that whomsoever should use the mystery or craft of surgery should not occupy the feat or craft of barbery or shaving.

The Letters Patent of 1st James and 5 Chas. 1st, granted and confirmed to the united companies: All and singular the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, customs, liberties, franchises, immunities, jurisdictions, and hereditaments of the united companies of barbers and surgeons then held by them and enjoyed under any letters patent of any former kings and queens or by colour of any lawful prescription, with power to make byelaws, annual elections, appoint examiners of surgeons, and that no person should exercise surgery within the cities of London and Westminster or within the distance of seven miles of the said cities, unless previously examined; and by the public letters testimonial of the said company, under their common seal, and admitted to exercise the said art or mystery of surgery under the penalty therein mentioned; and that all persons so examined and admitted as aforesaid might exercise the art in any other places whatsoever of the kingdom of England, with power to appoint lectures for instruction in the principles and rudiments in the art of chirurgery.

By the Act of 18 Geo. 2, chap. 15, after reciting the before-mentioned Acts, and that the barbers had for many years past been engaged in a business foreign to and independent of the practice of surgery, and the surgeons being then become a numerous and considerable body, and finding their union with the barbers inconvenient in many respects, and in no degree conducive to the progress of the art of surgery, and that a separation of the corporation of barbers and surgeons would contribute to the improvement of surgery, it was enacted that the said union and incorporation of barbers and surgeons should after the 24th June 1745, be dissolved, and the surgeons were constituted a separate and distinct body corporate by the name of the Master, Governors, and Commonalty of the Art and Science of Surgeons of London; and the barbers were thereby constituted a body corporate and commonalty perpetual, which should be called by the name of the Master, Governors, and Commonalty of the Mystery of Barbers of London, with power to purchase, enjoy, and take to them and their successors any lands, tenements, rents, or hereditaments, not exceeding the yearly rent or value of 200*l.* in the whole, without incurring any of the penalties or forfeitures of the Statutes of Mortmain; and by the same Act, with the exception of a sum of 510*l.* and an annuity of 16*l.*, which was vested in the Surgeons' Company, it was enacted that all the rest and residue of the real and personal estate and effects of and belonging to the united company should, after the 24th June 1745, be vested in the Barbers' Company.

The Barbers' Company, since their separation from the surgeons, have continued to conduct the affairs of the company. There is no special history to record with reference to their proceedings since the aforesaid separation.

G.—The Barbers' Company are empowered by the Act of 18 Geo. 2, cap. 15, to purchase, enjoy, and take lands, tenements, rents, or hereditaments not exceeding the yearly rent or value of 200*l.* on the whole, without incurring any of the penalties or forfeitures of the Statutes of Mortmain; and by the same Act all the real estate of the then previously united companies of barbers and surgeons was vested in the Barbers' Company, and their successors, for their own sole and separate use and benefit for ever.

The licence is now unexhausted to the extent of about 60*l.* per annum.

H.—The Barbers' Company are not aware of any charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, vesting in them any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way their art, trade, or business.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body of the Barbers' Company consists of a master or governor, three other governors now called wardens, and 20 members, who constitute the court of assistants, in accordance with the Act of 18 Geo. 2. cap. 15.

2. The members of the court of assistants are elected from the livery who have served or fined for the office of steward; they are elected for life, or until removed for misconduct. There is no stated time for election, but when a vacancy in the court occurs the vacancy is declared at the first court of assistants after it has occurred, and it is filled up at the next court of assistants; the voters at elections to the governing body are the members of the court of assistants.

3. The master presides over all courts, committees, and meetings of the company, and has the general direction and superintendence of the property and affairs of the company, subject to the orders and control of the court of assistants; the three wardens attend the master at all courts and meetings; they have no specific functions to discharge beyond that of aiding and counselling the master in the discharge of his duties, but the junior warden has the charge of the company's wine cellar; the other members of the court of assistants also attend all courts and such committees as they may be appointed upon, and assist and aid the master and wardens in the management of the affairs of the company.

Each member on election to the court pays a fine of 60*l.* to the company's funds, and receives for his attendance at any meeting of the court which he attends, when the names are called over previous to the commencement of business, a fee of one guinea; there are 13 meetings of the court in the year; no fee is paid for attendance on committee meetings.

4. The business transacted at the courts relates to the management of the company's property, the distribution of the charities, the election of officers, auditing of accounts, &c., and the making of byelaws for the good rule and government of the company and its affairs. All resolutions of the court on matters of business before them are passed by a majority on a show of hands, except on the election of officers, when the votes are taken by ballot. The courts meet on the first Tuesday in every month, and on the election day in the second Thursday in August. The resolutions are not published, but are accessible at all times to the members of the court of assistants.

5. Members of the court of assistants are liable to suspension or removal for absenting themselves, or neglecting or refusing to give aid or assistance to the court, not having a reasonable excuse; and it is considered that any member may likewise be removed for any other reasonable cause; but no case of suspension or removal has occurred for very many years.

6. By the Act of 18 Geo. 2, cap. 15, the byelaws of the United Companies of Barbers and Surgeons, so far as the same did not relate to the art of surgery, were continued and directed to be exercised by the Barbers' Company; the byelaws then in force were those of 13th January 1708, approved by the then Lord Chancellor, &c., and, except as modified by subsequent resolutions, may be considered now in force; in practice, they are seldom referred to; but there are standing orders o the court which are used for the purpose of regulating the transaction of the company's business.

The byelaws of 13th January 1708 are in manuscript, very lengthy, and also comprise the byelaws of the surgeons, in force previous to the separation of the two companies.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. Any naturalised British subject may become a member of the Barbers' Company.

There are three classes of freemen, viz., by patrimony, purchase, or servitude.

2. An applicant for admission to the freedom is proposed and seconded by members of the court. If the applicant applies for his freedom by patrimony he should produce a copy of his father's certificate of his admission, and a certificate of birth or baptism, showing that his father was free of the company at the date of such birth or baptism.

The following table shows the total amount payable in each grade for admission to the freedom.

Freemen by patrimony—
Company, 1*l.* 15*s.*; clerk, 8*s.* 6*d.*; beadle, 3*s.*; stamp, 1*l.* 1*s.* Total, 3*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

Freemen by purchase—
Company, 6*l.*; clerk, 18*s.*; beadle, 9*s.*; stamp, 3*l.* 2*s.* Total, 10*l.* 10*s.*

Freemen by servitude—
Company, 1*l.* 15*s.*; clerk, 8*s.* 6*d.*; beadle, 3*s.*; stamp, 1*l.* 1*s.* Total, 3*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

There is a quarterage payable by all freemen of 2*s.* 6*d.* per annum; this is generally compounded for by a payment of 3*l.* at the time of admission.

3. Persons using the trade of barbers are required by statute to be free of the company, and are admitted on application, and being proposed and seconded as before-mentioned. An action of debt lies against any person carrying on the trade refusing to pay the fees; such process has not been enforced by the company for very many years. The company do not require admission to the freedom of the city to be a condition precedent to the freedom of the company. It is believed there are several members of the company who are not free of the City of London. Persons exercising the trade of barbers do not commonly become members of the company; there are nine members of the company, or thereabouts, connected with the trade.

4. The company are not aware of any liability to disfranchisement.

5. The livery of the company is unlimited.

The qualification is membership of the company by freedom. The members of the court are the electors. The elections take place in court on a majority of votes of the members present; the applicant having been first proposed and seconded.

Company, 15*l.*; clerk, 13*s.*; beadle, 7*s.* Total, 16*l.*

There is also a steward's fine of 10*l.* 10*s.* if paid within five years, and 15*l.* 15*s.* subsequently; this fine is not compulsory, but its non-payment renders a liveryman ineligible for the court.

The company are not aware that liverymen are liable to removal from the livery.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1.) the present number of freemen; (2.) the present number of the livery; (3.) the present number of other members; (4.) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5.) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) There are 147 freemen of the Barbers' Company and two free women.

(2.) There are 120 liverymen of the company.

(3.) There are no other members.

(4.) and (5.) During the last ten years, ending August 1880, the following number of freemen and liverymen were admitted, viz.:—

	Freemen by Servitude.	Freemen by Patrimony.	Freemen by Purchase.	Livery.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

(1.) The following number of apprentices were bound at the hall during the last 10 years, viz.:—

Year ending August 1871	3
,, ,, 1877	—
,, ,, 1880	9

(2.) The following number of apprentices were bound to members connected with the trade, viz.:—

1872	1
1880	2

(3.) In no case have the fees or premiums of apprentices been paid by the company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1.) a freeman; (2.) a liveryman; (3.) master, warden or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1.) fees, and of what nature; (2.) pensions, or (3.) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1.) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2.) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages to freemen of the Barbers' Company consist of their eligibility for the livery and the company's charities for freemen and their widows.

The advantages to the livery consist of the eligibility for election on the court of assistants, and for the company's charities for liverymen, also, if resident within 25 miles from the City boundary, to a vote for the election of members of Parliament for the City of London, and on sundry meetings of the livery when convened to attend at the Guildhall.

The livery are invited to dine with the court of assistants once or twice in each year as the funds of the company permit.

The advantages of the master and wardens and court of assistants consist of their being entitled to the sum of 1*l.* 1*s.* for attendance on each court when the names are called over, the number of meetings in the current year at which fees are paid being 13.

Lunch or dinner is provided after court meetings or committees, and each member of the court is entitled to an invitation for two visitors during the year; the master and wardens have the privilege during their term of office to a limited number of additional invitations for visitors as directed by the standing orders.

2. The sums paid on an average for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members of the court of assistants for their attendance on the courts amounted to 124*l.* 2*s.*

No fees are paid to other members of the company.

The Commissioners are referred to the returns of the charities of the company for the pensions on the several charities paid to poor freemen and liverymen and their widows.

3. The poverty of applicants in each grade, coupled with their being freemen or liverymen, or widows of freemen or liverymen, is held to constitute their claim to a pension or donation; applications being taken generally in order of date as vacancies occur.

The following is a statement of the number of present pensioners:—

	Number.	Pension.
Ferbras' pension -	28	4*l.* per annum each.
Decayed livery -	6	12*l.* ,,
Dunnett's charity -	2	3*l.* ,,
Lawton's - -	2	7*l.* 10*s.* ,,
Michael Jan's -	18	7*l.* ,,
Kiddar's - -	1	3*l.* ,,
Cotterell's - -	22	4*l.* ,,
Long's - -	16	1*l.* ,,
Baker's - -	5	10*s.* ,,

A large proportion of the above pensioners are widows of decayed liverymen or freemen. The Barbers' Company believe that several of the pensioners were formerly members of the trade, the name of which is borne by the company.

4. The members of the court of assistants are generally in business or trade in the City of London, or retired from business. They continue on the court of assistants for life, are generally in a respectable position in life, no bankrupt being elected. They average 22 years from the date of election on the livery.

5. The company carries on no trade or manufacture connected with its title.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company; and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

1 and 2.—The following table shows the income and expenditure of the company during the preceding 10 years ending August 1880.

The company have no reason for expecting any permanent increase or decrease during the next 10 years, other than a decrease in their share of the rents of the Irish Estate received from the Ironmongers' Company, as to which they have no other data for forming an opinion than the decrease from this source for several years past, and the present unsettled state of Ireland.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

1. All questions affecting the management of the company's property are laid before the Court of Assistants, a majority of whom decide the course to be adopted. Matters of detail are referred to committees appointed for the purpose, from time to time, as occasion arises, and where necessary in dealing with the company's house property a Surveyor's Report is obtained.

2. All receipts pass through the clerk, who keeps the company's cash account, and who pays such receipts to the credit of the company's account at the London Joint Stock Bank.

The master and one warden sign all bills payable by the company, and sign cheques for the amounts, which are counter-signed by the clerk. The master and wardens are considered responsible for the correctness of all accounts paid by the company.

The Standing Orders of the Court regulate the expenditure, and no bills, beyond the ordinary expenses of the company, are allowed to be incurred to a larger amount than 5*l.*, without an order of court.

3. The company's accounts are audited annually in January for the year ending the preceding August by six auditors appointed by the court on the election day in August.

4. The company's accounts are not published; they are accessible to members of the Court of Assistants at all times.

Part IV.—H.

Return II.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Barbers' Company have no suggestions to offer on this head.

APPENDIX A.

The Barbers' Company furnished considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. It is stated in the report that, by the charter, the members are excused from serving on juries.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
February 15, 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Barbers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners, but at the same time to state that that information is not in their judgment quite sufficient. I am therefore to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Barbers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, &c.
(Signed) H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

To the Clerk of
The Worshipful Company of Barbers.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with regard to the following point:—

Part IV., Circular of Aug. 14, 1880.

The Court have only stated the details of the Company's corporate expenditure for one year.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
19th June 1882.

SIR,

In a letter dated the 3rd March you stated to the Commissioners that their Circular dated the 15th February would be laid before the Court of the Worshipful Company of Barbers. May I ask on behalf of the Commissioners whether this has been done, and what answer the Court have returned.

I am, &c.
(Signed) H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

H. G. Smith, Esq.,
Clerk to the Barbers' Company.

BASKET MAKERS' COMPANY.

These returns were delivered under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object and foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

Returns A and D.—The Company was established by an order of the Court of Mayor and Aldermen, September 22nd, 1569, and January 10th, 1585.

Return B.—A search having been made in the books, it cannot be discovered that the Company were ever in possession of a charter. An entry in the minute book dated 1666 states that all the books, papers, and documents belonging to the Company were kept in one of the rooms at the Guildhall, and were totally destroyed in the "great and dreadful fire," together with carpets, silver spoons, and other property. It seems very probable that the charter may have met with the same fate.

Returns C and E.—As far as can be discovered, the Company does not possess any documents relating to these returns.

Return F.—The origin and early history of this Company is lost in obscurity. It is stated in the proceedings of the Court of Aldermen on the granting of the livery that the Company have been from time immemorial, and are a Company by prescription, and have been frequently recognised as such, and have from time to time contributed, borne, and paid their full and due proportion and share of the contributions and duties as paid by the other companies this city.

From an examination of the books it does not appear that the Company were ever in possession of houses, lands, or other property, nor does it seem ever to have had trust property under its charge.

For many years the number of members was very small. The Company has now been revived, and as regards the number and standing of its members, is in a prosperous condition.

Returns G. H.—Nil.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

6.—The following rules, orders, and regulations for the government of the Company were made by the Court of Aldermen on the 22nd September 1569; and further orders were made by the same Court on the 18th January 1585, and 27th March 1610.

First. That men enfranchised in the said craft and occupation of Basket Makers of the City of London for the time being may lawfully hereafter, once in every two years, between the Feasts of St. James and St. Bartholomew the Apostle, assemble themselves together in a place necessary to them, and convenient within the said city, and there to choose and elect for themselves two able men, free of the said craft, for the space of two whole years then next following, and the same two wardens so chosen, within eight days next following the said election, shall be sworn in the court to be holden in the upper chamber of the Guildhall, before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the said city for the time being, truly to do and execute such things as shall appertain and belong unto their office, according to the good rules and ordinances to be to them allowed and approved by the same court, like as the usage and custom is within the said city, and as the wardens of other companies do, upon pain of five pounds, the one half there to be applied to the use of the chamber of the said city, and the other half to the common box of the poor within the house of Christ Church, and that if the same wardens, being thus elected and sworn, or either of them, happen to die within the same two years that they should stand wardens, that then the good men enfranchised in the said craft may choose one or two others of the said craft to supply and serve in the stead and place of him or them so deceased for the residue of the said two years.

Item. That within one month next after the choosing of the new wardens at the end of every two years in form aforesaid, the old wardens which occupied and stood in the office the two years then next preceding shall make and yield up their accompts unto the wardens chosen, and to five or four other persons of the said craft such as the said new wardens shall appoint, and shall truly answer, pay, and deliver unto the said new wardens to the use of the same company all that which shall be found to remain in their hands by that accompt upon pain of five pounds, the one half thereof to be paid to the chamber of the said city, and the other half to the common box of the said craft; and if the said accompt be behind and not given up and payment not made as is aforesaid longer than one month, then the old wardens so failing of giving up of their accompt and making of payment accordingly, without they have a reasonable excuse, shall pay for every month so long as their said accompt is not given up after the said new wardens and after the end of the said first month forty shillings, to be divided in form aforesaid.

PART II.—B.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the city of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the city of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The Company consists of—
   1 prime warden.
   1 junior warden.
   Court of assistants.
   Liverymen, freemen.
   Women have been admitted.

2. The freedom of the Company is obtained by patrimony or servitude.

	£	s.	d.
The fees payable are - - - - - - -	2	2	0
Or by redemption - - - - - - -	2	5	0

3. There are at present four members carrying on the trade of basket makers.
To the remainder of this question a negative reply.
4. A negative reply.
5. The livery of the Company is limited to 30.

No one is elected on the livery who is not a freeman of the Company; the electors are the Court of Assistants, the election taking place by vote of the court. The fee payable is 21*l.*

PART II.—C.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

PART II.—D.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall or otherwise, under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last ten years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

Nil.

PART II.—E.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members, according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

Nil.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

The only officer or servant of this Company is the clerk, to whom no salary is paid.

PART IV.—E.

Return E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last ten years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—F.

Return F. (1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease from year to year of the Company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

Return F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1.) The increase or decrease of the income of the Company has been very small during the last ten years: as it is entirely dependent on the subscriptions (annual) of the members, it is impossible to say whether increase or decrease may be expected.
F. (2.) Nil.

PART IV.—G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way and by whom the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any and which of the members of the Company?

3. The accounts of the Basket Makers' Company are audited annually at a meeting of the court by the prime and junior wardens and members of the board.

4. The accounts of the Company are not published, but are accessible to all the members.

PART IV.—H.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judg" ment, expedient and necessary for improving and altering the constitution of the Companies, or
" the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Court of Assistants of this Company beg respectfully to decline making any suggestions on the subject of this return.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834. The Company appeared then to have no property.

BLACKSMITHS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Alderman, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—This company is reputed to have been incorporated by prescription by King Edward the III., in the year 1325.

By charter, and united to the Spurriers by Queen Elizabeth in the year 1571, which charter was confirmed by King Charles the 1st, in the year 1639, under which charter power was given to make bye-laws, which power was exercised, and certain bye-laws so made were confirmed by the Lord Treasurer and by the Chief Justices of the King's Bench, and the Common Pleas, December 1640, and under such charter and bye-laws the company is now, as far as the usages of the present day permit, carried on.

B.—Incorporated by prescription, King Edward III., 1325.

Incorporated by charter, Queen Elizabeth, 20th April 1571.

Second charter,—King James I., 21 March 1604.

Third charter,—King Charles I., 15 February 1639.

Bye-laws approved by the Lord Keeper, 1641.

Fourth charter,—King James II., 18th March 1685.

By the charter of King Charles I, "power to make reasonable laws and ordinances in writing for the good rule, governing, and correcting of the freemen of the said arts or mysteries within the City of London and four miles of the said city.

"Power to overlook and examine the making of spurs, ironwork, or anything concerning the said arts or mysteries within the City of London or four miles of the said city."

C.—None.

D.—None.

E.—None.

F.—This being so large a question, necessitating an examination of the minute books and other documents for three hundred years, the return is made without it, but see preceding replies.

G. By the charter of Queen Elizabeth the company have licence to the extent of 30*l.* By the charter of King Charles I. a further licence of 30*l.*

H.—By charter, as above, the right of search and inspection within the City of London and four miles of the said city. Such power is not now exercised, but why such power fell into disuse the present members have no knowledge.

PART IV.—K.

Position in relation to Universities.

RETURN K.—Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

No.

BLACKSMITHS' COMPANY—continued.

PART IV.—L.

Church Patronage.

RETURN L.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

No.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

No.

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The minutes of the Company from the commencement of the present century show that the business of the guild has been conducted in a most careful manner.

The objects of the establishment of the guild were (1) the promotion of good fellowship; (2) the protection and encouragement of the trade, the name of which is borne by the Company.

The master and wardens do all that is in their power to attain the former object. The latter object is no longer practicable, as the articles, the manufacture of which the Company formerly superintended, have, to a great extent, ceased to be made in London.

The company as a body are thoroughly well satisfied with the rules under which they are governed, and is unable to offer any suggestion as an improvement.

APPENDIX A.

The Blacksmiths' Company gave a considerable amount of information to the Commissioners of 1834. At that date half the company and three-fifths of the court were or had been smiths, and many journeymen were freemen.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission.
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
19 June 1882.

SIR,

Referring to the Circular addressed by the Commissioners to the Court of the Worshipful Company of Blacksmiths, dated the 15th February last, I beg to ask the Court for answers to the two following questions:—

1. Is the Trust Income of the Company to any and what extent included in the detailed statement of income and expenditure with which the Court has favoured the Commissioners?
2. At the end of the year 1879, was the Company indebted to any and what extent in respect of monies lent to the Company?

The Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court and to yourself for answers to the above two questions.

I am, &c.
(Signed) H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

W. B. Garrett, Esq.,
Clerk to the Blacksmiths' Company.

63, Great Tower Street, E.C.,
22 June 1882.

SIR,

Replying to the enquiries contained in your's of the 19th instant, I have to state:—

(1.) The only trust income of the Blacksmiths' Company is four shillings per annum derived from property in the Old Bailey. It is included in the "Income" under the head of Rents, and in the "Expenditure" under the head of Pensions.

(2.) The Company was not so indebted at the time named.

I am, &c.
(Signed) WILLIAM B. GARRETT,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
Secretary,
City of London Livery Companies' Commission.

BOWYERS' COMPANY.

These returns were given under protest.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the courts of common law or of chancery, or of any acts of the courts of aldermen or of common council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the court of aldermen, act of common council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The date of the foundation of the company is unknown. It is believed to have been a fraternity by prescription (see Maitland's History of London, 1739).

B.—The company has a charter dated the 25th May 1621, which was confirmed by another dated the 17th November 1668.

The following is an abstract of the purport of these charters.

1. The style of this company is the Master, Wardens, and Society of the Mystery of Bowyers of the city of London.

2. James I. by his charter reciting that the bowyers of the city of London using the art or mystery of making of long bows, were an ancient fraternity in the city, but who had fallen into decay, and that the king being willing as much as in him did lie to restore the ancient and laudable exercise of archery with the long bow unto the end that the said fraternity might with better encouragement practise their trade grants, that the bowyers of London, and all and every person and persons then using or who shall thereafter use the mystery of making long bows in the city of London and liberties thereof, and being freemen of the said city, and then free of the said fraternity, or hereafter to be made free, should be a body politic and corporate by the before-mentioned name or style.

The charter grants that they shall be governed by one master, two wardens, and 13 assistants, and the first master, wardens, and 10 of the first assistants are thereby named and appointed the first master and wardens, to continue in office until the Thursday next after the feast of St. James the Apostle, 1622, and from thence until others should be elected pursuant to the charter; and the assistants, during their natural lives, or until removed, and for the future election of these officers is granted that the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them from time to time thereafter, upon Thursday next after the feast of Saint James the Apostle, 1622, may nominate and choose one fit person of the assistants to be master and two to be wardens, who are to execute their offices for two whole years thence next ensuing, and in case of death or removal otherwise to be chosen within 14 days.

And it is further declared that in case of the death or removal of any of the assistants (a power of removal being thereby given to the master and wardens, and the rest of the assistants) then and so often the master, wardens, and the rest of the assistants then living or continuing in office, or the greater part of them within three months after such death or removal, shall and may nominate and choose one or more fit and proper persons, freemen of the society, in the place or room of the person or persons so deceased or removed, and that the person or persons so elected shall be assistant and assistants for the term of his or their life or lives unless removed in manner before mentioned.

The charter gives to the wardens and assistants power to elect a clerk and beadle to hold office during pleasure.

The charter further declares that all freemen of the company, and all persons of the mystery within three miles of the city of London and the suburbs thereof, shall be contributory to the company, and shall also pay a quarterage of 8*d.* per quarter or 2*s.* 8*d.* per year. This charter, or the enrolment thereof, was exemplified and confirmed by Charles II.

The charter gives the power of making byelaws to the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them.

They give the following directions for the election of the members of the court:—

It is ordered that upon Thursday next after the feast of St. James the Apostle in every second year, or within 20 days before or after the same, at the pleasure of the master, wardens, and assistants of the company or the more part of them for the time being, the master, wardens, and assistants shall assemble and meet together and elect and make choice of a new master and two wardens out of the assistants of the company, who shall next follow in course to be chosen, who shall hold the same place of master and wardens for the two years then next following until a new master and wardens shall be chosen in their stead (if they or any of them shall so long live), and if it shall happen that the master and wardens, or any of them, shall die or depart this life before the expiration of their two years that then it shall be lawful at a court of assistants to elect and make choice of new master or wardens in the room and instead of him or them.

C.—The only trust instrument affecting the company is the will of James Wood, dated the 1st of August 1625, an abstract of the purport of which is as follows:—

The only charity under the management of this company, arises under the will of James Wood, who by will dated 1st August 1625 devised his manor or lordship of Isley Walton, in the county of Leicester, with certain messuages, lands, and tenements, lying within the territories of Isley Walton aforesaid, Kegworth, and Osgathorp in the said county of Leicester, to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Company of Bowyers and their successors for ever, in trust, that the master and wardens should yearly out of the rents of the said manor and other premises, pay and bestow upon three scholars within the University of Oxford, and upon two more scholars within the University of Cambridge, freemen's sons of the Company of Bowyers if there should be any such, but if not, then upon five other poor scholars, which have come from Christchurch School, in London, or such others as the said master and wardens should think most fit towards their maintenance at the university the yearly sum of 6*l.* each. Each scholar to receive the same for seven years if he should so long continue at the university. And in further trust that they should give and bestow upon six poor men or widows, free of the said Company of Bowyers, at Michaelmas yearly one year unto each of the said persons, three yards of broadcloth of 10*s.* the yard, to make a gown, and another year unto each of them 30*s.* in money, and so on from year to year for ever. And to the further purpose that the said master and wardens and livery should every second year, upon the day when they swear their master and wardens, repair to the parish church of St. Nicholas, Cole Abbey, to hear a sermon, and then to give to the parson 30*s.* for his sermon, and to the clerk and sexton 1*s.* 6*d.* apiece, and to the churchwardens for the use of the poor of the said parish 10*s.*, to the beadle of the company 2*s.*, and unto the poor people they shall meet coming and going 15*s.* in twopences; and should also upon quarter-day to be holden for the said company, give unto the yeomanry of the company 5*s.*, to be by them spent at their discretion; and should also bestow every half year for ever upon the poor of the said town of Walton 10*s.*, to be distributed amongst them at the discretion of the churchwardens, and to the further intent that the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the said Company of Bowyers and their successors, should reserve and keep the residue of the rents, issues, and profits of the said manor, lordship, and other the premises towards the purchasing of a hall, and to be otherwise employed at their discretion, for the use of the poor, and good of the said company.

The testator also gave to the Company of Bowyers 100*l.*, to be lent out to four discreet young men of the said company, by even portions at 3 per cent. for two years, and the interest to be distributed by the master and wardens unto and amongst the poorest of the freemen of the company at their discretion.

An officer of the Charity Commissioners in 1861 investigated the title of the company to the property devised by this will, and the mode in which the trusts created by it are carried out, to which no objection was made. The company acquired by purchase out of their own funds in 1824 a small property adjoining that devised by the will of James Wood for which a licence in mortmain was granted but which is not affected by any trust.

D, E.—The company are not aware of, nor are they affected by, any such Decrees or Acts.

F.—Except as appears by its charter the company is unable to furnish its history.

G.—The company is unable to give any further information affecting its title to its property.

H.—Except as appears by its charter there is not vested in the company any right of exercising superintendence over any art, trade, or business.

PART I.—I. CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

1.—Except under the will of James Wood there are no charities under the management of the company.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. 2. The present constitution of the governing body is according to the company's charter (an abstract of which is given in Part I., B.) which also states the qualifications for membership, the times and methods of election and the qualification of the voters at elections.

3. The governing body administer the charities under James Wood's will, and manage their own property.

No fees are paid on admission to the court, i.e. the governing body, but each member of the court is paid a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* for each attendance to the business of the company.

4. The governing body meets for business purposes five or six times a year. Its decisions are not published but are recorded in the company's books, and are accessible to the members of the company.

5, 6. See the charter.

Part II.—B.

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade if any, the name of which is borne by the company. Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the City of London?

1. The members consist of freemen and liverymen, but at present with one exception all the members of the company are liverymen. No special qualifications are essential for membership, election to which rests with the governing body.

Women have been admitted to membership, but it is many years since a lady has been admitted. The last was Miss Sainsbury in 1813.

2. The freedom and livery of the company may be obtained by patrimony, by servitude, and by redemption (or purchase), and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode are as follows:—

Return M.—General and Technical Education.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The will of James Wood directs that the company shall have five exhibitions of 6*l.* each.

The company now have fourteen exhibitions of 10*l.* per annum each, viz.:—seven at Oxford, and seven at Cambridge, tenable by undergraduates during residence. They are not limited to relations of members. No exhibition is held by the son of a member of the company; they are generally awarded to scholars of small means from the public schools.

The company have built a school on their estate, and contribute towards its maintenance

The company have assisted various charities, &c.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation "or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the company to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The income of this company is almost entirely derived from land, and is under 600*l.* a year; and after paying the charges herein-before specified, there is left a very small balance at the disposal of the company.

APPENDIX A.

At the date of the report of the Commissioners of 1834 the property of the company consisted of realty, the amount of which was not stated, and 1,000*l.* stock. The total income from external and internal sources was stated to the Commissioners to be 600*l.*

BREWERS' COMPANY.

* The Master of the Company in forwarding the Returns stated that those which concerned the private property of the Company were to be regarded as confidential communications.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds, "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Company, under the correct title of "The Master and Keepers or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewers of the City of London," is one of the old City mysteries or fraternities.

This Company was incorporated by a charter granted by Henry VI. on the 22nd of February 1445, being the 16th year of his reign.

This charter was subsequently confirmed by Queen Elizabeth, 29th August 1563.

The great extent of the trade and the large number of persons exercising it in and about the City of London appear to have led to the incorporation of the Company.

B.—The Company have in their possession "A pardon granted to the Company," dated the 3rd of January, 3 Edward IV., 1454.

The charter of Henry VI., February 22nd, 1445.

A charter of 4 and 5 Philip and Mary, 1557.

A charter of November 11, 2 Elizabeth, 1560.

A charter of July 13, 21 Elizabeth, 1579.

Byelaws of the Company, June 23, 22 Elizabeth, 1580.

A charter of April 6, 15 Charles I., 1641.

Byelaws made July 9, Charles I., 1641.

A charter of Charles II., March 18, 1660.

Surrender of the Company's charter to Charles II., 1684.

A charter of October 2, 17 James I.

Copies of the charter of Charles I., and of March 18, 1 James II., 1685.

The original charter of February 22, 1445, granted by Henry VI., after citing the Brewers' Company as one of the ancient mysteries, incorporates the Company into one body, and perpetual community, with the power to elect each year from among the members of the Corporation four persons to be wardens.

The charter granted November 11, 2 Elizabeth, and the charter of August 29, 1563, confirm the previous charter of Henry VI., and ordain that the governing body of the Company shall consist of one master, three wardens, and the commonalty, who might sue or be sued under the title of the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewing.

The charter of July 13, 21 Elizabeth, appears to have been granted owing to the great increase of persons engaged in and practising the trade of brewing. The charter incorporates all persons in or about the City of London or the suburbs, or within 2 miles of the City, and the master and wardens to be a body politic, to consist of one master, three wardens, and the commonalty. The yearly election of master and wardens is ordered to be held, and the brewing trade is brought directly under the supervision and control of the said body, in as far as the City and suburbs of London are concerned, and to the extent of all brewing within 2 miles of the City and suburbs.

The charter of April 6, 15 Charles I., recites previous charters, but increases the jurisdiction of the corporation over the brewing trade in or about the City of London to a limit of 4 miles. It establishes the master and wardens for the time being in their offices for the year. Provides for annual elections to the said posts. Orders the election of assistants to the Court, but limits the number of such assistants to 28. The charter proceeds to appoint 23, and orders that they shall hold office for life, unless removed by any lawful, reasonable, or unforeseen cause.

This charter of Charles I. confers a great deal of power on those in authority over the trade. It allows them to make rules and ordinances, and generally to exercise supervision over all members of the trade in and about the City, and within a 4 miles radius.

Byelaws on the strength of this charter were framed for the Company on July 9, Charles I., 1641.

The charter of March 18, 1 Charles II., after reciting the charter of February 22, 16 Henry VI., the confirmation of the said charter by Queen Elizabeth on August 29, 1563, and a surrender of the right to elect master, warden, or assistant, incorporates the Company again, nominates

* The Company sent with their returns (1) a translation of their original charter, see Appendix B; (2) their charter of James II., their byelaws and forms of oaths; (3) abstracts of their accounts for the years 1872-80, both inclusive, see Appendix A; (4) copies of schemes for the management of the charities of Dame Alice Owen (1878) and Alderman Platt (1876).

William Carpenter to be master till 24th June 1686, further nominates wardens and assistants. Provides for the appointnent of a clerk and of assistants, not to exceed the number of 28. Orders that the master and nine assistants shall form a quorum. Provides for the institution of search and quarterage, and for the binding of apprentices. Gives the corporation the right to inspect brew-houses within certain limits, and to inflict penalties. Contains a power for the Company to purchase lands. Orders that the master, wardens, commonalty, and clerk shall take the oath of allegiance. Orders that every assistant elected shall be a communicant, and allows the commonalty to distil aqua vitæ or spirits.

The deed of July 1, 1684, surrenders the Company's charter, and all rights appertaining to it.

The charter of March 18, James II., after reciting the charter of 16 Henry VI., and 4 Elizabeth, 1563, and the surrender of their charter by the Company, orders all brewers within 8 miles of the City or suburbs of London to be of the corporation. Provides for the election of a master, three wardens, and 22 or more assistants, limiting the number to 28. Ordains the manner of holding the elections. Orders the offices to be held for life, unless such persons as above stated be guilty of misbehaviour, or be obliged to retire from some unforeseen cause. Provides a clerk. Orders that the master, one warden, and nine assistants shall form a court. Orders brewers to be admitted to the Company. Establishes search and quarterage payments according to the number of servants employed. Gives the Company power to make laws or set penalties. Grants a licence in mortmain to purchase lands up to the value of 60*l.* Orders every master, warden, assistant, and clerk to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and to subscribe the declaration. Orders each person elected to be a communicant. Orders the clerk to be approved by the King's sign-manual before election. Sanctions the removal of any master, warden, assistant, or clerk by an order in council. Orders the corporation to be obedient to the lord mayor. Confirms previous privileges. Gives freemen the power to distil.

The Company have a copy of byelaws drawn up in the year 1714, and signed by all the members of the court.

The present constitutions, orders, rules, and conditions, as drawn up by the master, wardens, and assistants, were made on July 13, 1739. They provide for the holding of the courts. The election of masters, wardens, and assistants. For certain penalties for refusing to serve. For the auditing of accounts, for the election to the livery and freedom. For binding apprentices. For making the search and quarterage. For certain restrictions in the case of freemen. For power for the master and wardens to sue for penalties. For the taking of the oaths, and the signing of the declarations.

In February 13, 1857, the byelaws were altered under the Act of 6 William IV., as far as regards the taking of oaths, and an order was made that a declaration should be substituted for the oath.

Forms of the various declarations are appended to the byelaws.

Note.—Copies of the charters of Henry VI. and James II., and of the byelaws of 1839 and 1857, accompanied the returns.

C.—Under Mr. Whitbread's Trusts.—The Great Barford and Whitecross Street estate. The Company have in their possession the abstracts of title to the said estate. The two conveyances, dated 26 March 1794, from Samuel Whitbread to William Trueman Read, the then master, and the wardens and assistants of the Company of the said two estates. A conveyance, dated 4 August, 1812, by the Company to Bury Hutchinson, then clerk to the Company, of the Whitecross Street and also of the Great Barford estate, in trust for the trusteees. The Company have in an old book a great many copies of deeds, wills and leases, from various sources, which affect or charge the Company's various trust estates in certain ways.

D.—A great many of the decrees of Court, and of other jurisdictions that have been exercised over the Company are now obsolete. It is recorded that in the 15th year of the reign of Henry VI., on an application being made for a charter, the Company declared their obedience to the civic jurisdiction of the lord mayor and aldermen, and were prepared to surrender the charter if anything on the face of it appeared likely to be prejudicial to the liberty or interest of the city.

In the 18th year of Edward IV. a decree was published forbidding any meetings being held by the fraternity of brewers, and a fine appears to have been imposed on the wardens in consequence of the publication by them of an ordinance calculated to be prejudicial to the liberty of the city. At the same time it was ordered that the election of the wardens should be vested in the livery of the Company.

In 1475 a case occurred of a member being committed to gaol for disparaging words used of the Company. This Act of the Court of Aldermen was followed shortly after by a byelaw of the Common Council, which enacted that no brewers should be eligible for election to that body on account of their unseemly behaviour.

An Act of Common Council dated Thursday, 7 June 1753, entitled an Act for regulating the Company of Brewers, after stating that the Company was much lessened by persons exercising the art being admitted into other companies, enacted that after 29 September 1753 all persons practising the said trade should be made free of the Company, imposed a penalty of 5*l.* for non-compliance with the order, and further enacted that such persons should not be admitted to the freedom of any other Company.

An order of the Master of the Rolls, dated 3 June 1829, on the petition of the Company, referred the question of the application of the rents of the Dame Alice Owen's estate to the master, whose report of 17 March 1830 sanctioned so much of the rents of the charity estates at Orsett, Islington, and Clerkenwell as, together with the Orsett rents, would amount to two-fifths of the rent of all the said estates, to be applied towards the maintenance of the school and almshouses erected under the conditions of the said trust.

On 29 May 1832 an information was filed against the Company complaining of the administration of the residue of the rent of the Wycombe estate, and in 1833 the information was disposed of by agreement between the solicitor of the Company and the relators, and certain terms arranged under a decretal order.

An information was filed by the Attorney General, at the instance of W. Bromley, which insisted upon the several annual sums left under the trusts of Newman, Potter, Smallman (otherwise Clarke), Yorke, Rochdale, and Jemitt being appropriated to the objects of the several gifts.

E.—The Company have in their possession the licence granted by Queen Elizabeth on February 15th, in the 35th year of her reign, to Alderman Richard Platt, authorising him to found a grammar school and almshouse at Aldenham.

Ordinances of the Company granted under the hand and seal of the Lord Treasurer and of the two Chief Justices, dated 15th July, 22 Henry VII.

A grant of arms to the Company, dated 35 Henry VIII., 1544.

A list of subscribers towards the erection of the Hall, bearing date 1670.

A grant of arms to the Company, dated 8th year of the reign of Edward IV., July 23rd, 1469.

The present arms were registered at the College of Arms on 21st August 1801.

F.—The Company is properly defined as "The Master and Keeper or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewers of the City of London."

The Company, as one of the ancient mysteries or fraternities of the City of London, was first incorporated by a Charter bearing date 22nd February 1445, being in the 16th year of the reign of Henry VI. Among the minute books of the Company that are kept at the Hall may be seen a book entitled Records and Accounts of the Brewers' Company, from 1418 to 1440. The first Charter granted that the freemen of the mystery should in deed, fact, and name be one body and perpetual community, and that they should elect annually out of their body four persons to be keepers or wardens, such officers to regulate the affairs of the Company for a year. Byelaws at the same time were given to the Corporation.

A Charter appears to have been granted to the Company by Queen Elizabeth on November 11, 1560, while she again granted a New Charter of Incorporation on 29 August 1563. This last Charter provided for the Corporation consisting of a master, three wardens, and the commonalty.

In order to increase the power of the Corporation over the brewing trade, and in consequence of a great increase in the number of persons practising that trade in or about the City of London and not coming under the control of the Company, another Charter was granted to the Company by Queen Elizabeth on 13th July 1579, incorporating the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty and all persons exercising the trade of brewing in the City of London or within a radius of two miles of the suburbs. Further powers to regulate the trade were also granted under this Charter.

Charles I., on 6th April 1641, granted the next Charter to the Company, which after reciting the previous Charters incorporated the same body, but increased the radius to four instead of two miles beyond the suburbs. The then master and wardens were continued in their office: yearly elections to offices were ordered. Power was given to elect assistants for the better rule and government of the Company, and for regulating the trade. The number of assistants was ordered not to exceed 28, and 23 were elected and named in the Charter. The appointment of each assistant was for life, though for reasonable and lawful causes such assistant might be removed.

On the accession of Charles II. he granted a charter to the Company, according them much the same powers; a licence in mortmain was granted by the charter and a wide authority over the trade. The Company appears to have surrendered their charter of Charles II. on 1 July 1684, and then obtained a new one from James II. on his accession to the throne, on 18 March 1685. The same powers are continued on in that charter as appear in the Charter of Charles I.

The byelaws at present governing the Company were drawn up on 13 July 1739, and, with the exception that on 13 February 1857 the signing of solemn declarations was substituted for the taking of oaths, they have continued in force from that date without any material alteration. They provide for a yearly election of a master and three wardens by the Court, which must consist of 12 members to constitute a quorum. For the election of assistants. For the penalties to be imposed in cases of persons being elected and refusing to serve. For the order in which the several offices of master, upper warden, middle warden, and lower or renter warden are to be filled. For the holding of Courts and the general carrying on of business connected with the Company; and for the ruling, governing, and ordering by the Company of all controversies, causes, business and other affairs that may affect or concern all persons exercising the trade of brewing in the City of London, the suburbs, or within a radius of four miles of the same.

The Court of the Company, which now numbers 30 persons, consisting of a master, three wardens, and 26 assistants, is entirely composed of persons immediately interested in the trade. They hold courts every month with the exception of August and September. A general purposes committee, which consists of the master and wardens, is held fortnightly, in order to consider any matters that may be pressing or points that may have been referred to them by the Court for further consideration.

The Company have the control at present over the following trusts: Alderman Richard Platt, Dame Owen, Alderman Hickson, Mr. Samuel Whitbread (the Great Barford and Whitecross Street estates), Mr. John Baker, Mr. John Nieman, Mr. Robert Hunt, Mrs. Ann Potter, Mr. Roger Bellowe, Mr. John Potter, Mr. John Newman, Messrs. John York and Richard Rochdale, and Mrs. Susan Clarke. Of these by far the largest are the Alderman Richard Platt and the Dame Owen, supporting as they do large schools and almshouses, while under the schemes other schools have been endowed out of the funds of the said estates.

After the report of the commission of inquiry into the charities of the Company for the poor of London, an information was filed by the Attorney General at the instance of W. Bromley, insisting on the application of the residuary rents and the appropriation of the several annual sums bequeathed by John Potter, John Newman, Ann Potter, Susan Clarke, John Yorke, Richard Rochdale, and Alderman Jemitt, for the beneficiaries under the several gifts. The total amount that is bequeathed by all these separate trusts is a sum of 30*l.*, which is distributed at the first Court held in the year, on which occasion the gifts from the estates of Samuel Whitbread are also distributed.

The accounts of the Company for the past year show the balances of the trusts to be 16,201*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* as against overpaid balances in the cases of Alderman Hickson and Mr. Samuel Whitbread's Great Barford estate trusts of 8,212*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* and 1,243*l.* 11*s.* 9*d.*, showing a balance for the year of 6,745*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* on all the trusts; but it must be borne in mind that the expenses of Alderman Hickson's Trust, which include the keeping up and supporting of the boys' school in Trinity Square, and of the almshouses at South Mimms, have fallen on the Company to so great an extent that there is now a debt to the Company from that trust of 8,212*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

15,000*l.* Three per cent. Consols represents the only amount invested that belongs to the Company in its own right. The account of last year shows receipts up to 3,157*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*, as against expenditure 2,832*l.* 3*s.*, leaving an access of income over expenditure amounting to 325*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*

G.—The charter of 1 James II. grants a licence in mortmain to the Company in the following terms:—

"And further of our more ample and special grace for the supportation and maintenance of the said Master and Keepers or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewers of the said city, we have given and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant, unto the said Master, Keepers or Wardens, and Commonalty of the said Mystery or Art and their successors special and free liberty and lawful power and authority to have, purchase, receive, and enjoy to themselves, and their successors for ever, lands, tenements, and other hereditaments whatsoever within this our kingdom of England or elsewhere as well of us, our heirs and successors, as of any other person or persons whatsoever, so that the said lands, tenements, and hereditaments exceed not in the whole the clear yearly value of threescore pounds of lawful money of England, besides all charges and reprizes, the statute of lands and tenements not to be put in mortmain or any other statute, act, or ordinance made or to be made to the contrary notwithstanding. And we also give and grant for us, our heirs and successors, to every or any subject or subjects of us, our heirs or successors, special and free licence and lawful power and authority that they or any of them may lawfully, and without incurring any penalty, give, grant, sell, or alien to the said Master, Keepers, or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewers of the City of London aforesaid, lands, tenements, and other hereditaments whatsoever, so that all and singular the aforesaid lands, tenements, and hereditaments to the said Master and Keepers or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art aforesaid to be granted, sold or aliened, exceed not in the whole the aforesaid clear yearly value of threescore pounds, besides all charges and reprizes, the aforesaid statute of land and tenements not to be put in mortmain or any other statute, act, or ordinance to the contrary made or to be made notwithstanding."

H.—The Company have powers under their charters and byelaws that may be exercised over the brewing trade within certain specified limits, though of late years such powers have not been put in force. Under the charter of James II. the Company can exact quarterage from all persons brewing in the City of London or the suburbs, or within eight miles, have power to search brewhouses within such limit, and to taste the produce, imposing penalties in cases where such produce be found to be unwholesome; can search and inspect grains, hops, vessels, &c., on land or on the water; and make byelaws and impose penalties.

Under the byelaws of the Company, dated 13th July 1739, the power of search and quarterage is instituted, and certain penalties laid down which may be inflicted upon members for noncompliance with the said byelaws.

RETURN I.—A LIST of the CHARITIES, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the Founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

On February 18th, 1596, the 38th year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, a licence was granted to Richard Platt under letters patent to erect a grammar school and almshouses at Aldenham, in the county of Herts. Under the said letters patent the Master and Keepers or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewers of the City of London, and their successors, were incorporated under the title of the Governors of the possessions, goods, and chattels, and revenues of the Free Grammar School and Almshouses. An indenture of 18th January 1599, granted to the Company in trust for the said School and Almshouses, about 20 acres of property lying in the parish of St. Pancras, and an estate at Aldenham, in the county of Herts. The will of the founder, dated the 28th November 1600, gives a house in Great Knight Ryder Street upon similar trusts, and also charges the estate with a gift to the parish of St. James's, Garlickhithe. The testator laid down rules for the constitution and maintenance of the School, for the election of a head master, and for the class of education to be promoted. Under the scheme for the management of the trust estates belonging to this Charity, which was approved on 13th May 1875, the Company have no longer full control over the School. A separate governing body has been appointed, more than half of which, though, is supplied from members on the court of the Company. The scheme allows a sum of 2,200*l.* to be handed over by the Company to the said governing body. Lower schools have been established at Aldenham and Medburn by the Company, and under the scheme were handed over to the parish authorities, and received an endowment of 8,000*l.* There are six almshouses at Delrow, near Aldenham. The almspeople are elected by the Company. Last year a sum of 103*l.* was paid in allowances and gifts to the inmates. In addition to the sums paid out of the original foundation, a gift of 6*l.* a quarter is received from a redemption of the land tax of the founder's estate by Mr. Harry Charrington in the year 1799: and part of the dividends on the stock left to the Company by the late Mr. John Nieman is devoted to the same purpose. The St. Pancras estate is for the most part let on building leases. By a sale to the Midland Railway Company of a portion of the said estates, a sum of 86,662*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* was realised. Under section 15 of the scheme, 8,000*l.* was transferred to endow the elementary schools; and under section 16. 20,000*l.* was transferred to endow the North London and Collegiate Schools for Girls. A residue of 58,662*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* was left. By a further sale of part of the estate to the said Railway Company, a sum of 2,722*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* was realised; and by a sale of No. 16 Great Knight Ryder Street to the Metropolitan Board of Works, a sum of 1,536*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* was realised. The Company are now in treaty for the sale of Medburn Farm. By section 17 of the scheme, 13,333*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* will be transferred to endow the Watford Schools.

To the almswomen and on property expenses, under the Scheme of 14th August 1878.	An indenture dated 22nd November 1609: Dame Alice Owen, after reciting that a licence had been granted her from the Crown to purchase lands at Islington and Clerkenwell, with a view of building thereon almshouses for poor widows, and reciting the building of such hospital, conveyed that and other hereditaments to the Company, in trust for the use of the said Charity for ever. A rentcharge of 25*l.* from the Charterhouse Closes at Islington and St. Andrew's, Holborn, was also conveyed by another indenture on the like trusts. Under the will of the foundress, dated 10th June 1613, or thereabouts, the government of the school, then stated to have been erected in the parish of Clerkenwell, was devised to the Master and Wardens of the Company of Brewers in London. The foundress also, on 20th September 1613, drew up certain rules and orders for the said school and almshouses, which after her death were to be carried out by the Company. The almshouses were formerly on what used to be called the Ermitage Fields at Islington. These were pulled down and subsequently rebuilt in Owen Street. The school and master's house were also re-erected in Owen Street, opposite to the almshouses. The inmates of the almshouses were selected from poor women not under the age of 50, who had a qualification of seven years' residence in the parishes of St. Mary, Islington, or St. James's, Clerkenwell. The almswomen (14 in number) received with residence 7*s.* a week, and other gifts at Christmas and on the Visitation Day; but since removal from the almshouses under the 1878 Scheme they have received 12*s.* a week. On 14th August 1878, a scheme for the administration of the Dame Alice Owen's Charities was approved. By section 1, the Corporation of the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Brewers' Company are appointed Governors of the foundation. Section 20 provides for the establishing of two schools: 1. For 300 boys, with facilities for future extension, on the site of the present schools and almshouses of the foundation. 2. A school for a like number of girls, with like facilities, on a site to be approved of by the Charity Commissioners. There are at present 120 boys in the school, and the numbers are increasing yearly. Works at an expense of nearly 8,000*l.* are now going on with a view of considerably enlarging the school. The school for 300 girls is not yet started. A sum of 6,000*l.* as a loan to be repaid by instalments has been made from these trust funds to the North London Collegiate and Camden Schools for Girls. A small portion of the ground at the back of the almshouses is rented from the New River Company at a yearly payment of 5*s.*

By the will of 16th February, 1636, John Hickson gave to the Company the Manor of Williotts and parcels of ground at South Mimms. These were charged with certain charitable bequests. He also gave a parcel of ground in Allhallows, Barking, to be converted into a schoolhouse, requiring the Company to pay certain salaries in respect of such school, and to set aside 500*l.* out of the rents for repairs. The residue of the estate was left to the Company. The testator directed that 20 children should receive a free education at the school: 14 from Allhallows and 6 from part of Wapping, every such child to pay 1*s.* admission fee. By deed of the same date a further devise of parcels of land at South Mimms, and of the 5 Almshouses which the testator had built near Potter's Bar, was made to the Company. The following sums were directed to be paid out of the rents:—To poor freemen, 10*l.* For a dinner, 5*l.* To the clerk, 2*l.* To the beadle, 1*l.* Clothes for 15 poor inhabitants of Allhallows, Barking. 1*l.* 5*s.* towards a sermon, and 3*l.* to the poor of Wapping. 24*l.* were to be equally divided among the occupants of the said almshouses; and the residue of such rents, after satisfying such charges, was to form part of the Company's estate. The old almshouses were at Kitt's End, South Mimms. In 1857, the Company built other almshouses at South Mimms at a cost of 900*l.* Six widows, selected by the Company, are the occupants. They receive 7*s.* a week and a gift at Christmas. The school was formerly in Plough Yard, Seething Lane. In 1852, the Company built a new schoolhouse and master's residence in Trinity Square, Tower Hill, at a cost of 4,000*l.* The staff consists of a head master and three assistant masters, and at present the school numbers 90 boys. The salary of the head master is 130*l.* a year. He has also a grantage in respect of certain scholars, and an allowance for coal. The rates and taxes of his residence are also paid by the Company. 50*l.* is generally given every year to the head master as an excursion gift. The rental of this charity is utterly inadequate to keeping up the school and the almshouses, and the expense of so doing has of late years mainly fallen on the Company.

PART II.—A.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing body.

1.—State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2.—State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3.—State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4.—State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company.

5.—State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6.—Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1.—The present constitution of the governing body of the Company, under the name of "The Master and Keepers or Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery or Art of Brewers of the City of London," consists of 1 master, 3 wardens, called upper warden, middle warden, and renter warden respectively, and 26 assistants.

Such constitution is according to a charter of 6 April, 15 Charles I., which, after reciting previous charters, grants power to the then master and wardens to elect one master and three wardens yearly to govern the corporation trade and mystery; further, granting that "the master and wardens may form time to time elect and appoint such and so many able and sufficient persons of the body of the said Company of Brewers to be assistants of the master and wardens for the better rule and government of the same as they shall think fit; such assistants not to exceed the number of 28 persons."

2.—Election to the freedom of the Company, and being raised to the livery and clothed, are conditions preceding the appointing of an assistant. Such assistant must at the time of his election be immediately connected with the brewing trade.

The master and wardens are elected by the Court in rotation from members of the Court. The election is conducted by show of hands. Each newly elected master and warden holds office for a year; but, inasmuch as to become master, an assistant has first to fill the post of renter warden for a year, then middle warden for a year, and subsequently upper warden for a year, every master at the close of his term of mastership has held office for four years.

By the Company's byelaws, as made on 13 July 1739, and approved on 25 July 1739, it is enacted that the new master and wardens are to be nominated and chosen by the Court one month before the Tuesday before St. Bartholomew's Feast. It is also enacted that, before any member becomes entitled to be elected master, he must have served as upper warden for a year. Similarly with the upper warden, who must have served his year of office as middle warden, which latter office is not reached till a year's service as lower or renter warden has been completed. A fine may be imposed on any member of the Court refusing to serve, unless such member have a good and sufficient excuse, or be exempted by the Court from taking office. Assistants are elected as vacancies occur. Every vacancy is reported by the clerk at the next Court, and filled up at the following one, so that a period of about two months elapses between the vacancy and the election. Notice of every election is given to the members of the Court in the summons requesting their attendance at the Court; but no other public notice is given. Every candidate must be proposed by a member of the Court, and seconded by another. The election is usually by show of hands, although it may be conducted by ballot. Every assistant elected holds office for life.

3.—The governing body meet together as a Court to regulate, apportion, and distribute the rents and profits arising from the trust estates, legacies, and other charitable bequests that are under their control. Matters connected with the trade of brewing may also be brought under discussion. The master presides on every such occasion. In his absence the chair is taken by the senior ex-master present. To constitute a Court the presence of 12 members is necessary. The master and wardens for the time being are selected to form a General Purposes Committee, to meet fortnightly before every Court. Matters in discussion before the Court may be referred to such Committee.

Every assistant on election pays a fine of 20*l.* to the Company, 1*l.* 1*s.* to the clerk, and 7*s.* to the beadle. On being elected master or warden no fine is imposed, but each master or warden contributes a certain amount towards the expenses of the annual livery dinner. Every master, warden, and assistant on election has to sign the solemn declaration, in lieu of an oath, as set out in the constitution, orders, rules, and ordinances made and approved on February 13, 1857.

In regard of service at a Court or a Committee, each member is entitled to a fee of 1*l.* 1*s.* for every such attendance.

4.—All questions affecting the interests of the Company or of any and all their trust estates are brought before the Court. These include the regulating of schools and almshouses, the letting of the various farms, houses, and properties, the distribution of charitable bequests, and the general arrangement of their real and personal estates.

The Courts are held monthly at the hall of the Company. Every assistant receives notice of the holding of every Court a week before. Any special matters of business that are to come before the Court are detailed on the summons paper. It is the duty of the clerk to bring all matters of importance to the notice of the Court. Such matters are then considered and decided. Any member is at liberty to give an opinion on any point. Minutes of the proceedings of every Court and Committee are taken by the clerk, and entered by him in duplicate in books kept for the purpose. At the following Court the minutes of the preceding one are read and confirmed, and the report of any Committee that may have been held in the interim is read, adopted, and ordered to be placed upon the minutes. Any member is at liberty at any time to inspect the minute books for any information he may require.

5.—In the event of any assistant absenting himself from the Court for the period of one year, power is granted under the byelaws of the Company, bearing date July 13, 1739, to the master and wardens to dismiss such member and to elect another in his place.

6.—The byelaws of the Company, as made on July 13, 1739, were approved in Chancery by Right Hon. Philip Lord Hardwicke, Lord Chancellor, Right Hon. Sir Wm. Knight, L.C.J. of the King's Bench, and Right Hon. Sir John Wills, L.C.J. of the Common Pleas.

They provide inter alia for the formation of the Court, the election of the master, wardens, and assistants. The election to the freedom and livery of the Company. The penalties to be paid by persons refusing to serve. The auditing of the accounts. The search and quarterage to be paid by the freemen and members of the Company on their brewing. The binding and instruction of apprentices. The duties of a master to his apprentice, and other minor rules for the regulation and guidance of the freemen of the Company.

By these byelaws, every freeman master, warden, assistant, clerk or beadle of the Company had to take an oath of fidelity on his election.

This custom was altered by byelaws made February 13, 1857, and approved in Chancery by Lord Cranworth, Lord High Chancellor, Lord Campbell, Lord Chief Justice, and Sir Alexander Cockburn, Bart., L.C.J. of the Common Pleas, which, after reciting the oath to be taken under the byelaws of July 13, 1739, enact that by an Act of 6 William IV., to abolish oaths and affimations, and substitute declarations, such oaths as heretofore were taken should be abolished, and declarations substituted, forms of which are appended to the byelaws.

PART II.—B

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1.—State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2.—State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3.—State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? State also (if the Company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the Company.

4.—Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5.—Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

6.—State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last ten years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company? Has the Company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last ten years?

7.—Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the Company? Are there any and how many members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

1.—No especial qualification is required of persons desirous of becoming free of the Company so long as their respectability of character is sufficiently guaranteed and recognised; yet applicants for the freedom are not indiscriminately admitted. There are two grades of membership, viz., freemen and liverymen. Women have been admitted to the freedom of the Company for the special purpose of obtaining admission for their sons to the Aldenham Grammar School. This by the 1875 scheme has now become unnecessary.

2.—The freedom of the Company may be obtained in three ways, by patrimony, by servitude or apprenticeship, and by redemption. There is no instance of a gift of the freedom. To establish a right to be elected to the freedom by patrimony, it is necessary for the applicant to have been born in lawful wedlock after the admission of his father to the freedom. In the event of the person so claiming not being known to the Company, documentary evidence, or the evidence of parties acquainted with the applicant, must be adduced in support of the claim and to satisfy the Court that such application is in every respect well founded. It is in the power of the master and wardens alone to admit a person to the freedom in right of patrimony.

In respect to the freedom by servitude or apprenticeship, the indentures of the claimant must be produced and the master must attend in person in order to certify to the Court such service. As in the case of the freedom by patrimony, the freedom by servitude may be granted by the master and wardens alone.

In cases of applying for the freedom by redemption, the applicant has to be proposed and seconded by members of the Court. It is then at the discretion of the Court whether such applicant be admitted or not. If the Court be divided, the question is decided by vote. There is no record of an application to purchase the freedom not being entertained and granted by the Company. No person can become free of the Company by redemption except before the Court.

The following tables of fees are charged by the Company in respect of the three above-mentioned modes of admission to the freedom:—

By Patrimony.

Company	3	3	0
Beadle	0	4	0
Stamp	1	0	0

By Servitude.

Company	0	10	0

By Redemption.

Company	10	10	0

All freemen by redemption enter into a bond in 500*l.* with the Company against any expenses that may incur in the event of their being elected to the office of Sheriff or Lord Mayor of the City of London.

3.—By the Charter of April 6, 15 Charles I., brewers were required to belong to the Company; and in the byelaws of the Company, which were founded on that charter, appears a similar enactment. Some 14 or 15 years subsequent to the framing of the said byelaws an Act of Common Council, bearing date July 7, 1753, enacted that all persons carrying on the trade and occupation, art, or mystery of brewers within the City of London should take upon them the freedom of the Company, under a penalty for non-compliance. There is no process to compel a person to take up his freedom, and the Company in its own interests would object to any compulsory measures being adopted in regard to the admission of members.

The freedom of the City of London is not a condition precedent to being elected a member of the Company. After election by the Company, a certificate is granted to the newly elected member, which on presentation at the Guildhall, and on payment of a fee at a reduced scale, entitles such member to the freedom of the City.

There may be members who are not free of the City of London, but there is no bar to their becoming so.

As a rule, those persons who become free of the Company are directly or indirectly connected with the trade of brewing.

There are at present 320 freemen of the Company, of whom 79 are brewers and 241 non-brewers. Most of the last-mentioned took up their freedom for the purpose of obtaining the admission of their sons to the Aldenham Grammar School.

4.—There is no record of a member of the Company being disfranchised. The byelaws are silent on the subject.

5.—There is no limit to the livery of the Company. No especial qualification, with the exception of good character and repute, is required of a person desirous of being raised to the livery. Such person must be proposed and seconded by members of the Court. No freeman has a right to insist on being raised to the livery, it being entirely a question for the Court, in whom the election vests, whether he be so raised or not.

An election to the livery may take place at any court held by the Company.

No instance appears of a liveryman being deprived of his rights.

The sums payable on election to the livery are:—

Livery fine	21	0	0

6.—There is only one instance of an apprentice being bound at the Company's hall during the last 10 years, which occurred in the year 1874.

In this case the apprentice was bound to a member who was following the trade of the Company.

The fees of the apprentice in question were not paid by the Company.

There is no limit fixed by the byelaws of the Company to the number of apprentices.

In case of defective service, an apprentice may be admitted by paying the proportion of the redemption fine that would be taken off the city fine at Guildhall.

An apprentice may be bound out of Court by special order of the Court.

Turnovers are allowed and effected by an indorsement of the indentures.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.)—There are at present 320 freemen of the Company.

(2.)—There are at present 75 persons on the livery of the Company. Of these 16 have served on the Court of Assistants, and have subsequently retired.

(4), (5.)—The following is a list of the numbers of admissions to the freedom by servitude, patrimony and redemption, of the election to the livery, and of the election on the Court during the last 10 years.

	Freedom.			Livery.	Court.
	Servitude.	Patrimony.	Redemption.
1871 -	2	0	9	2	2
1872 -	0	1	4	1	0
1873 -	0	1	8	2	2
1874 -	0	1	11	4	5
1875 -	0	0	2	1	1
1876 -	0	1	1	2	1
1877 -	0	0	5	5	3
1878 -	0	1	1	2	0
1879 -	0	0	1	1	2
1880 -	0	3	1	3	2
	2	8	43	23	18

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—Profits and privileges.

1.—State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2.—State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3.—What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company.

4.—(1) What is the average standing of a member of the Company when he is made a member of the governing body? and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?

5.—Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last ten years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last ten years.

1.—(1.)—As a freeman of the Company, a person has a right to a vote for the City of London. He has also the opportunity of sending his children to schools which have been started out of various trust funds which have been left to the Company to be applied to purposes of education; in one of these schools sons of freemen are educated at a lower charge, or have an allowance made them in respect of their school fees. In the event of a freeman becoming disabled to work through illness or any unforeseen circumstance, the fact of his being a member of the Company entitles him to apply for relief from sundry trust funds of the Company, or for admission to almshouses which are under the control of the Company. In the event of his death his widow, if left unprovided for, is entitled to apply for similar assistance.

(2.)—The advantages of a liveryman are identical with that of a freeman, with this addition, that election to the livery is a condition precedent to election on the Court of Assistants. None but liverymen may dine at the livery dinner held annually at the hall.

(3.)—The pecuniary advantages incident to the position of master, warden, or assistant consists solely in the 1*l.* 1*s.* to which they are entitled for their attendance at each Court or Committee; the amount received in respect of such fees is considerably less than the amount they have to pay in respect of fines on election and subscriptions towards the livery dinner. There are no pecuniary advantages incident to any of these three positions.

2.—The following sums by way of donations have been paid by the Company to freemen or to their widows during the last 10 years—

1871	335
1872	195
1873	210
1874	320
1875	290
1876	320
1877	370
1878	370
1879	400

or 3,175*l.* in 10 years. Average, 317*l.* 10*s.*

The average amount paid in respect of Court and Committee fees annually, during the last 10 years, is 185*l.*

For the last five years, since the publication of the scheme for the management of the Alderman Richard Platt's estate, which is one of the trust estates of the Company, a pension of 400*l.* a year has been paid to Mr. Leeman, the late head master, and two pensions of 75*l.* a piece to Mr. Dutton and Mr. Fairman, late under masters at the elementary school. These pensions are allowed to be paid by special clauses in the scheme. In addition to the pension of 400*l.* a year, Mr. Leeman has a further pension of 100*l.* a year from the Company.

A pension of 600*l.* a year has been voted to the late clerk to the Company, on his retirement after 32 years' service, the pension to commence from the year 1881.

3.—A claim to a pension would be recognised in cases of officers and servants of the Company who, after long service, retire from illness or cause beyond their control.

The donations given by the Company are mostly given in pursuance of bequests made to the Company for special gifts, such as Mr. Samuel Whitbread's Trust towards the support and relief of poor freemen of the Company and their widows.

There are at present four pensioners as stated above.

In all of these cases the recipients are directly or indirectly connected with the trade.

4. (1.)—The average standing of members at the time of their election to the Court cannot well be stated. There are many cases of members taking up their freedom being elected on the livery and afterwards to the Court, at the same time, while other cases show a considerable period elapsing between election on the livery and election to the Court. As at present constituted:—

5.—The Company does not carry on as a body any trade or manufacture whatsoever.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—At present the officers of the Company consist of a clerk and an under clerk. The duties of the clerk are to attend at the office daily; to be present at the Courts, Committees, and every other meeting of the Company. To keep minutes of all the proceedings. To collect and receive rents on behalf of the Company, and generally to manage the trust estates of the Company, and to keep their accounts. He has a fixed salary of 600*l.* a year, and in the present instance he is not a member of the Company.

The under clerk assists the clerk in the performance of these duties. His salary is 325*l.* a year; and in the present instance he is not a member of the Company.

B.—The servants of the Company consist of a beadle, at a salary of 90*l.* a year, which salary is augmented by free residence at the hall, small emoluments, such as payments from persons becoming free of the Company, or elected on the livery and Court, and from other small receipts for collection of the search and quarterage, &c. The sending out of Court and other summonses, care of offices, and minor office work, and attendance in the hall on Court days, form part of his duties.

And of a clerk's boy, at a salary of 15*s.* a week, who is engaged in the office with copying, posting, and minor office work.

C.—The officers and servants of the Company are appointed by the Court; such appointments only hold good for a year, at the end of which period every such officer and servant has to be re-elected. On the election of a new clerk, the vacancy is advertised, and persons desirous of obtaining the post are invited to send in their names and testimonials. The final selection is by votes; every member of the Court is entitled to vote. The officers of the Company have each to sign a solemn declaration, and the clerk to give security in 2,000*l.*

The head bands are dated 1628.

The Company have only seven pictures in the hall, and two old banners of the Company.

The hall itself is insured to the value of 7,000*l.*

PART IV.—C.

RETURN C (1.)—A list of any properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C (2.)—A list of any properties of which the Company is cestui que trust, with names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same during each of the preceding 10 years.

C (1.)—The Company are trustees for the late Mr. Whitbread's estates at Great Barford, and in Whitecross Street, particulars of which have already been given under Return I. The sums received have been expended on poor freemen and their widows, as required by the trust, on repairs to the said properties, on rebuilding the farm house at Great Barford, and on purchase of stock. The accounts for the last 10 years appear under the said Return I.

The Company also manage the trust estates of Alderman Hickson and Mr. John Baker, details of which estates have appeared before. In the former case the receipts of rental and other sources are expended on the management of the estate; the school for boys in Trinity Square, Tower Hill; and the almshouses at South Mimms. In the case of the trust estates of the late Mr. John Baker, the chief expenses are on the management of and repairs to the estate and the almshouses at Mile End Road.

The Company are trustees for the Alderman Richard Platt's trust estates. The sums received are expended on the management of and repairs to the estate; on a gift to the Company for eleemosynary purposes, under which head are included the almshouse at Aldenham; on parish gifts; on pensions to retired masters; on a donation to the North London schools; and on the management of the schools at Aldenham. These payments are regulated by the scheme of May 13, 1875.

The property at present held by the Company under this trust comprises a farm at Medburn, of about 97 acres, let on a lease from Michaelmas, 1870, for 14 years, to William H. Wise, at a rent of 230*l.*; the almshouses for men and women at Aldenham; and the St. Pancras estate in London. The school at Aldenham has now a separate governing body.

The St. Pancras estate consists of 73 houses in Aldenham Street, 36 houses and some ground and buildings in Pancras Road, 67 houses in Barclay Street, 84 houses in Charrington Street, 11 houses and a chapel in Goldington Crescent, 11 houses in Goldington Street, 40 houses in New Goldington Street, 30 houses in Medburn Street, 18 houses in Penryn Street, 22 houses and the Police Station in Platt Street, No. 1, 2, 3, Stanmore Place, 45 houses in Stanmore Street, 8 houses, a cottage, and some additional buildings in Werrington Street.

The houses on this estate are let on building leases for terms varying from 60 to 99 years at ground rents. Certain portions of the original freehold have been sold to the Midland Railway Company, and two distinct batches of houses have been sold to the School Board for London.

The Company are trustees for the estate of the late Dame Alice Owen. The rents received in respect of this estate are expended on the management and on the repairs incidental to the property; on supporting the existing and on the erection of schools at Clerkenwell; on certain retiring pensions to the late masters; and on the support of the almswomen, as provided for by the original trust and the scheme of 14th August 1878.

The property at present held by the Company under this trust consists of a farm of about 40 acres at Orsett, in the county of Essex, which was last let on a lease for 14 years from Michaelmas, 1866, to Hannah Stevens, at a rent of 48*l.* 18*s.*, and of the Clerkenwell and Islington estate.

The school for boys at Clerkenwell is also managed by the Corporation.

The Clerkenwell estate consists—

Of 49 houses in Goswell Road.
Of 62 houses in Rawstorne Street.
Of 16 houses and a warehouse in Owen's Row.
Of 58 houses in St. John Street Road.
Of Brewer Street and Brewer Street North.
Of 70 houses in Buxton Street.
Of 4 houses in Alfred Place.
Of No. 22, Buxton Street.

There is also a rent-charge of 25*l.* on Charterhouse Fields.

Ground rents are received in respect of part of this property. Other portions are let at leases of from 5 to 14 years. Some houses are let on yearly tenancies, while in respect of others weekly rents are received.

C (2.)—The Company are not cestui que trust of any property. The only money they receive is paid them by the Ironmongers' Company in respect of the Company's share in the estates in the manor of Lizard, an account of which will appear hereafter.

PART IV.—D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

The only property which belongs to the Company other than that mentioned before is the Company's hall in Addle Street. The site of the hall was originally the property of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and, in the reign of Charles II., a lease for 40 years was granted by the Dean and Chapter to Mr. Needham, which said lease he assigned to the Company in the 20th year of Charles II.

By conveyance, dated 5 June 1860, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, with the sanction of the Church Estates Commissioners, conveyed the reversionary interest in fee in the messuage and premises, No. 18, Addle Street, with the gateway and garden attached, to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the mystery or art of brewers of the City of London, in consideration of a payment by the Company of 2,496*l.*

The present value of the hall would be hard to ascertain, but it is insured up to 7,000*l.*

An inscription in the court room of the hall, over the fireplace, states that "The Right Wor^{ll}· S^{r}· Samvel Starling "Knight and Alderman of London a worthy Member of "the Brewers Company did wainscott this parlovr in the "yeare 1670 the said S^{r}· Samvel Starling being then Lord "Mai^{r}· of the Cittie of London."

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on the Court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

(1), (2), (3).—The following amounts have been received by the Company during the last 10 years in respect of fees paid on admission to the freedom, livery, and Court of the Company:—

The Search and Quarterage account falls under the head of an Internal Source of Income. It is levied by virtue of the byelaws of the Company, and paid by freemen of the Company engaged in the trade of brewing. It was originally levied according to the number of servants kept in the brewery, afterwards on the amount of beer brewed, as returned by the Excise, and subsequently on the amount of malt used. Ten shillings may be collected from liverymen and freemen not in the trade. The amounts received in respect of this account for the last ten years are—

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F (1).—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F (2).—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F (1).—As far as it is possible to judge there does not appear a probability of the income of the Company being increased for the next few years or so. The amount of property held by the Company is small and let up to its full value, while in the case of the upper portion of the Company's property, at 18 and 19, Addle Street, there seems to be but little chance of getting a tenant to occupy them. During the present year the Company have to pay a pension to the late clerk, which pension will in a great measure be a charge on the Company's private income; a donation to the late clerk, and a promised donation to the Aldenham grammar school. An increase to the income of the Company might accrue in the event of the Alderman Hickson's trust being made self-supporting and able to pay off its debt to the Company, but such a contingency appears to be a very remote one.

F (2).—There does not appear to be any likelihood of the property of the Company increasing much in value. It is probable that the Company may offer their unlet premises at a lower rental, in order to secure their occupation and free the Company from the sum they have to pay at present for rates, taxes, and repairs. On the falling in of the leases there will not be any great increase of rent asked on the renewal of the leases. The Company are now abating some of their rents.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any of the members of the Company.

1.—The Company's estates and property are managed in the office at the hall. The income of the Company is mainly dependent on rents. Most of these are paid quarterly at the office of the Company, but in case of weekly tenancies a collector calls weekly at such houses to receive payment. The legal work of the Company is carried on by the solicitor. The house and land property is under the direct supervision of the surveyor to the Company. Any repairs or alterations required are mentioned to him; on receipt of such notice he inspects and reports on the premises in question at the next Court. In case of small repairs, &c. he authorises the work to be done and certifies to the Court as to the cost of such repairs.

All matters of importance are brought before the Court, who decides the course to be pursued.

2.—The signature of the clerk is alone required to a receipt. Such receipts are in a printed form.

In cases of payment by cheque, the signatures of the master for the time being and the clerk, or the signatures of one of the wardens and the clerk, are sufficient.

3.—The accounts of the Company are audited at the end of every year by a public accountant at the Company's hall.

The accountant signs the book of the Company and of the several trust estates, and certifies that they are correct at the audit Court. The said books are subsequently signed by any member of the Court who may be present at the said audit Court.

4.—The accounts are printed and a copy sent to every member of the Court.

The accounts may be inspected by any member of the Court at any period.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years; and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of such 10 years.

The return sent in under the head of Part IV., Return B., supplies particulars of the income of the Company for the last 10 years.

The sources from which the income of the Company is derived may be enumerated as follows:—

No. 18 and 19, Addle Street, at rents of 240*l.* and 360*l.* per annum.

No. 4, Shoe Lane, let on lease at a yearly rent of 75*l.*

Nos. 5, 6, 7, Shoe Lane, let on lease at a yearly rent of 600*l.*

Nos. 141, 142, Bishopsgate Street Without, let on lease at a yearly rent of 350*l.*

The proportion of the Irish estate, of which the income is variable; last year it was 392*l.*

No. 145, Houndsditch, let on lease at a yearly rent of 100*l.*

No. 145, Houndsditch, warehouse at the back. 30*l.* a year.

Land and cottages, Little Totteridge, near High Wycombe, let on lease at a yearly rent of 24*l.*

BALANCES accruing to the account from the poor box, fines, and search and quarterage payments.

The liabilities consist in repairs to the property, subscriptions, donations, gifts, pensions, Court and Committee fees, salaries of the officers and servants, solicitor's, surveyor's, and auditor's charges, rates, taxes, and insurance, printing, stationery, &c., expenses connected with the livery and audit dinners, and the dinners after the visitation to the Tower Hill, and Dame Alice Owen's schools.

The donations go chiefly to assist poor freemen of the Company and their widows and children.

The subscriptions are given to hospitals and other charities, as selected from time to time by the Court or a Committee appointed for that purpose.

NOTE.—The Company sent an abstract of their accounts for each of the years 1872 to 1880. These abstracts are printed in Appendix A.

PART IV.—K.

RETURN K. (Position in relation to Universities).—Has the Company any relation with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company has no direct relation with the universities or with any of the colleges; though under the scheme for the management of the estates of Richard Platt, dated 13th May, 1875, section 76 provides that the governors of Aldenham grammar school, which is an offspring of the said estates, shall, from and after the date of this scheme, apply the annual sum of 450*l.* towards the establishment and maintenance of not less than three exhibitions, to be awarded annually, and to be tenable at any university or other place of liberal education.

Section 75 of the said scheme also provides that the governors of the said school shall, by degrees, make provision for and establish 20 scholarships, tenable at the grammar school at Aldenham, whereof 10 shall be called Platt Senior Scholarships, and 10 Platt Junior Scholarships. Each senior scholarship shall entitle the holder to such an annual sum as will altogether or nearly provide for his maintenance and education in the school free of expense, and each junior scholarship shall be of about half that annual value.

The school itself, by the Scheme, has a separate governing body now, but that body is so largely composed of members of the Court of the Brewers' Company, that the conduct and welfare of the school may be said in a great measure to depend on the Company.

The Company, as governors of the Dame Alice Owen's school, have by the Scheme to set apart certain sums for scholarships and exhibitions.

In both these cases of exhibitions and scholarships, a system of competitive examination is adopted. The exhibitions are tenable for three years, and vary in their amounts.

The Company have promised 60*l.* to the School Board for London for one scholarship for a boy and one for a girl.

The Company in January, 1880, gave a sum of 100*l.* to Girton College, Cambridge.

PART IV.—L.

RETURN L (Church Patronage.) 1.—Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company?

2.—Give a list of such benefices, stating—

a. The county where situated.

b. The name of the parish or place.

c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.

3.—Has the Company granted any augmentation of income to the incumbents of such benefices, and, if so, to what extent and out of what funds?

4.—Has the Company during the last 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building, of any churches or chapels, and when and out of what funds in each case respectively?

1 and 2.—There are no ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company.

3 and 4.—The Company has from time to time, in addition to the gifts to churches as fixed by the various trusts, granted further sums out of the funds to incumbents of certain parishes, and towards the restoration of churches. During the last 10 years, among others, the following sums have been given:—

PART IV.—M.

RETURN M (General and Technical Education).—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company, as govenors of the schools established under the Dame Alice Owen Trust at Clerkenwell, and of the school in Trinity Square, Tower Hill, under Alderman Hickson's Trust, has the full management of the said schools. In the case of the Alderman Richard Platt's school at Aldenham, although the said school has now a separate governing body, consisting of 15 members, yet the Company have great interest in the school's welfare, and supply eight members from the Court to fill the post of governors. The large amounts for gifts in the years 1872, 1874, 1875, and 1880, were not entirely devoted to educational purposes, consisting as they did, in a great measure, of donations to various charities.

Owing to the smallness of the income and rental of the Alderman Hickson Trust, the boys' school in Trinity Square, Tower Hill, has been carried on and kept up to its present high standard almost entirely out of funds provided by the Company.

The Company are offering two scholarships of the value of 30*l.* a piece to the School Board of London for the present year.

The Company have promised to assist the Aldenham governing body with a donation of 500*l.* during the present year, to meet the expense of carrying on the Aldenham grammar school, the amount that will be paid out of the Alderman Platt Trust estate to the governing body being insufficient to cover the outgoings.

They are also prepared to lend the said governing body a sum of 2,500*l.*, free of interest, for additional buildings at the said school.

For the further information of the Commissioners, the Brewers' Company beg to forward herewith copies of all their accounts for the last 10 years, together with copies of the schemes of the Endowed Schools Commissioners for the Alderman Platt and Dame Alice Owen Trusts of 1875 and 1878 respectively.

Note.—The Company sent copies of the schemes (1) for the management of the estates belonging to the charity founded in 1597 by Richard Platt, and (2) for the management of the schools and almshouses founded 1609 by Dame Alice Owen.

APPENDIX (C.)

The Brewers' Company gave information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX D.

Brewers' Hall, Addle Street,
24th June 1882.

DEAR SIR,

I am in receipt of your letter of 21st June, and will endeavour to afford the Commissioners such information as they require. I may perhaps first be allowed to refer you to my letter to you of 28th June 1881, which accompanied the report sent in by this Company, with which were also sent copies of all our accounts for the last 10 years. I am forwarding for the use of the Commission another copy of our accounts for the year 1880, in case the former one may have been mislaid.

In answer to the questions in your letter, I may state,—

I. That the General Account of the Company for the year 1880 shews a receipt of 3,157*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* On reference to the printed statement, this will be seen to include the balances of sundry trusts, which amount in all to 1,184*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*, so that the actual receipts of the Company were 1,972*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.*

II. (1) The Total Amount of the Trust Income received by the Company from all sources for the year 1880 was 15,482*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.* Of this amount the following sums were received in rents :—

(2) Platt	1,694	1	1
Owen	9,515	5	2
Hickson	381	10	8
Great Barford	293	15	0
Whitecross Street	346	4	6
Baker	51	5	0
Bishopsgate Street	433	11	11
Shoe Lane	618	15	0
John Potter	119	15	10
	£13,454	4	2

The Rent Charges received were—

Newman	1	0	0
York and Rochdale	7	0	0

III. (1) The following sums were paid to alms people :—

Owen's Almsfolk	335	3	1
„ „	7	0	0	Lovejoy's Gift.
„ „	2	0	0	Potter's Gift.
Hickson's Almshouses	133	18	0
Baker's Almshouses	274	1	6

And a sum of 27*l.* 12*s.* 0*d.*, Newman's Gift, to the Platt and Hickson's Almsfolk.

In pensions to decayed members a sum of 300*l.* was granted.

(2) In Education—	£	s.	d.
Aldenham Grammar School	2,200	0	0	Scheme.
Dame Owen's School	957	19	9
North London Schools	600	0	0	Scheme.
Hickson's School	669	8	7
St. Mark's National Schools	20	0	0
School-board Scholarships	60	0	0
Cripplegate Schools	2	2	0
St. Mark's School Fund	5	5	0
Horton Schools	2	2	0
St. Pancras National School	5	0	0
St. Mark's Infant School Building Fund	100	0	0

I may add that Hickson's School is maintained almost entirely by the private funds of the Company, since the income of the trust is wholly inadequate to support the foundation.

(3) A reference to the accompanying printed copy of accounts will shew what other sums have been spent in miscellaneous ways.

I may state that the Company gave a sum of 409*l.* 15*s.* in donations to various charitable institutions.

IV. The rateable values of the several schools and almshouses under the management of the Company are as follows :—

Owen's School and Playground, 434*l.* (lately increased from 234*l.* on account of additional building).
Aldenham School, 184*l.* 10*s.*
Hickson's Almshouses, 10*l.* 10*s.*

V. At the close of the financial year the Company was not indebted in any sums in respect of monies lent to the Company.

I hope that a reference to the statement of the Company's accounts which I am forwarding with this letter may afford the Commissioners all the information which they may require on these and other points.

I am, &c.
WILLIAM C. HIGGINS,
Clerk to the Brewers' Company.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

BRODERERS' COMPANY.

The Company sent the following memorandum with the annexed returns :—

In the annexed returns the company have furnished full particulars of their trust property.

With respect to such other property as is not subject to any trust, the company have anxiously considered what answers it is their duty to make to the Commissioners' interrogatories, having regard, on the one hand, to the respect which is due to Her Majesty's Commission, and, on the other hand, to their duties to the society which they represent, and whose rights and interests they are bound to protect. They are advised that, from a legal point of view, the Commissioners have no power to compel the required returns to be made, and that the companies would be acting within their clear constitutional and legal rights if they declined to submit to any examination. The court of the company, however, do not wish to stand upon the ground of mere legal right, they have furnished the required information, reserving only such privileged matters relating to their own private and corporate property, as in all courts and cases every public or private body or person is universally held entitled, if not bound, to uphold and protect. The company, at the same time, wish to place on record that, in furnishing the foregoing replies, they do so, without admitting any jurisdiction on the part of the Crown or the right of any power in the State, to enquire or examine into the company's private affairs and property, or to deal therewith in disregard of the rights and interests of its members. In respect to their own property, however acquired, they claim the rights which every individual, as well as every corporate body according to English law, possesses for its protection and preservation, none the less and à fortiori, because their rights and privileges have existed for centuries past, and have been handed down to the present members of the company from a long line of predecessors, and they therefore formally claim that the returns hereby made shall be deemed to be, and they are, made without prejudice to the rights, privileges, and franchises of the company and its members, as absolute owners of all property vested in them, and not subjected by a donor or founder to any specified trust for the benefit of others.

The company maintain that their corporate estates and property are as fully and unquestionably private property and as little liable to interference in its management as the funds of the numerous commercial companies or associations which have been incorporated by various methods, possessing a capital provided by the subscriptions of their constituent members, past or present; and they further claim and insist that if the private and beneficial rights, interests, and privileges which they so maintain and assert, and which for centuries they have exercised without any question or dispute, are now or hereafter to be disputed, the question shall be decided by the ordinary tribunals of the country in due process of law.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being especially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list which dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a license in mortmain? When was such license granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A. The first charter of the company is dated in 1561, and this is the first definite evidence now in the possession of the company of the date of its existence as a company. But in an indenture of conveyance of certain of the company's property in Gutter Lane, dated 5th Henry VIII., one Thomas Foster (the grantee) is described as a citizen and broyderer, and "The wardens of the mystery of broyderers within the city of London" are described as a definite body in the will of the same Thomas Forster, dated 19th Henry VIII.

B. 25th October, 3rd Eliz., 1561.—Original Charter of Queen Elizabeth.

Incorporates the freemen of the mystery or art of the broderers of the city of London and the suburbs by the name of Keepers or Wardens and Society of the Art or

Mystery of the Broderers of the City of London to have perpetual succession and a common seal, to bring and defend actions, and especially in the city of London to hold lands of the annual value of 30*l.*, for the assistance and support of poor men and women of the mystery.

Grants powers to the keepers or wardens from time to time to make good and salutary statutes and ordinances for the good regulation and government of the mystery and the freemen thereof, which shall be inviolably observed.

Grants to the keepers or wardens power to overlook and govern the art and all using the same in the City and suburbs thereof, the city of Westminster, Saint Katherine's in Middlesex, and the borough of Southwark, and to punish all men for not truly working or selling.

20th April, 7th James the I., 1609.—Original charter of James the First.

Contains only a recital and confirmation of the Charter of Queen Elizabeth without any alteration or addition.

The above is an abstract of the subsisting charter of the company. It was surrendered to King James the Second in the year 1684, and that monarch in 1686 granted another charter in lieu thereof. But this surrender and charter are not thought necessary to be here set out. All surrenders and grants of charters in the time of Charles the Second, and James the Second, having been rendered void by Statute 2nd, William and Mary, sec. 1., cap. 8.

C. The company have no such trust deeds as here mentioned in their possession, and no evidence that there ever have been any such.

D. The company have no evidence of any such decrees of courts of common law or chancery, nor of any such acts of courts of common council or aldermen in council as are here referred to.

E. The company have no such other documents as here mentioned.

F. The scope of this enquiry seems so extended that the company think it better to confine themselves to the documentary evidence in their possession bearing upon the subject mentioned in the latter part of the enquiry. The first document in the possession of the company bearing on the subject of the state of the trade is the charter (dated 1561) above abstracted, to which the Commissioners are referred for a list of the objects for which the company was incorporated.

The next document which the company have in their possession bearing on the above question is a petition to King Charles the First, dated 1634. Praying for a license in mortmain, the recitals in which state that the trade "is now so much decayed and grown out of "use, so that a great part of the company for want of "employment are so much impoverished as they are "constrained to become porters, water-bearers, and the "like." This quotation is made as illustrating the state of the trade at the date last referred to.

Bearing upon the question of their control over the trade, the company have a case and opinion of counsel (Mr. Northey), dated 29th August 1707, as to persons carrying on the trade not having been apprenticed. In which the opinion states that the company can recover the penalties by information or indictment at the sessions.

Subsequently to this, the company seems to have continued to lose its hold upon the trade, until in the year 1709 there were but few working embroiders members of the company; for a controversy was raised in that year, and case submitted for the opinion of Mr. Common Sergeant Dee on the question whether the byelaws then in force, providing as they did that "working members should be preferably eligible to "office in the company, did not make the election unfree "and fettered, and were not therefore void." The company have in their possession the opinion of Mr. Serjeant Dee on this case, which goes to show how far the objects for which the company was founded were then carried out, and a portion of the opinion on this case, which may afford information to the Commissioners, is given below.

"As long as the ordinance (providing that working "members only should be master and warden) remains "in force, elections must be made accordingly or the "election will be void; for the byelaw at the time of "the making of the same was in all probability of use "to the company, though by length of time and the "alteration of the company, it may now be grown in-"convenient and fit to be repealed. I do not think the "penalties are in this case recoverable, for it cannot "be said that any one particular person was the occasion "that the election was not made according to the "byelaws."

On the 19th December 1710, the wardens of the company wishing to keep alive their control over the trade according to their power contained in the charter, seem to have made a general search of workhouses of embroidery, "whereupon they found many foreigners, and "many were refractory and used scurrilous language, "and none appeared on being summoned to the hall." The quotation is from another case put to Mr. Serjeant Dee representing these facts, whereupon the learned serjeant gave his opinion as follows:—

"Any persons exercising the trade that hath not "served an apprenticeship for seven years are liable to "be sued on the Statute 5th Elizabeth, but I do not "think a journeyman that works only for wages can "be prosecuted on that Statute, but the person that "employs him may if such person is not qualified to "exercise the trade. The company cannot set fines for "the breach of their byelaws, nor do their byelaws bind "any but the members of the company; and if any of "their members do break any of the byelaws that are "just and reasonable, the penalty inflicted by such "byelaws may be recovered against them by action of "debt. As to the matter of search, the charter will "not justify them, but within the city of London such "searches may be justified by the Customs, but the "goods seized must be brought to Guildhall, and a jury "empanelled to try whether the same made deceiptfully, "and according as their verdict is found, the same may "be destroyed or restored." And in the margin of this case Mr. Common Serjeant states the following byelaws to be void. That the keepers may four times a year search. That all illworkers be fined 2*s.* 6*d.* That all persons making resistance shall forfeit 20*s.* That all persons within the limits shall come to the hall to be sworn. That no person shall set to work any foreigners until presented to the wardens to be examined, who shall appoint the master and assess the wages.

It appears by this opinion that the powers expressly conferred on the company by the charter had, at this time (if such powers ever in fact had any legal force), so long fallen into disuse, that the company were not able to enforce their privileges in relation to the trade, which on its part seems altogether to have ignored the company so soon as the protection of the trade was ensured by change of customs of the times without the company's aid. In the face of this opinion of Mr. Serjeant Dee and of the opposition offered by the trade, it is believed that the company have not attempted to exercise their ancient privileges since the date last referred to. But in regard to their duties mentioned in the first paragraph of the charter, no application for the assistance and support of poor men and women of the mystery has (so far as the present members of the court, whose recollection extends back to 1848, are aware) ever been refused or ignored.

G. The company holds a license in mortmain, by virtue of its charter above abstracted, to the annual value of 30*l.* per annum.

In 1635 the company obtained from the King Charles the First a grant of license (dated 10th February 1635) to hold lands to the extent of 100*l.* per annum.

The company's right to hold lands is believed to be exhausted but not exceeded.

H. There is vested in the company by their charter above abstracted the power of making good and salutary statutes and ordinances for the good regulation and government of the mystery and the freemen thereof, and the power to overlook and govern the art, and all using the same in the city and suburbs thereof—the city of Westminster; St. Katherines', Middlesex; and the borough of Southwark; and to punish all men for not truly working and selling. These powers are not now exercised, because the company were advised in the year 1710, as stated above (Return F.), that they could not even then enforce them, and because the attempted exercise of these powers was resented, and the company's authority repudiated, as stated under head of Return F., to which the Commissioners are referred for further answer to this Return.

PART I.—CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

MEMORANDUM.—The above Returns apply to each of the ten years, 1870 to 1880; and under the circumstances it is not thought necessary by the company to set out in detail the Returns for each year.

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

A.

Return A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body of the company, that is to say, the master, wardens, and court of assistants, is according to byelaws of 1562 as amended by those of 1582, 1609, and 1710. It consists of a court of assistants of the number of 12 and the clerk. Among the 12 members of the court are included the master, the warden, the renter warden, and two auditors, who, with the clerk, are the officers of the company.

2. The only qualification required for membership of the court is, that the person elected be at the time of his election a member of the livery. As regards the time of election it occurs at the first court after the vacancy arises by death or resignation of any member.

The method of election of each new member of the court is by vote of the majority of the existing members of that body. The only qualification of a voter at elections to the court is that he should himself be at the time of his voting a member of the court, present at the court of election.

3. The functions of the governing body, as between it and the livery and freemen and as between the company and other persons, are to transact and by vote of the majority decide upon every sort of business or matter concerning the company or its rights, liabilities, or property whatsoever including the admission of freemen and liverymen. The members of the court pay a fine of 40*l.* on their election. No salary is paid, but there is an honorary fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* paid to each member of the court for each actual attendance made by him at court, payable at the conclusion of the business.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the court is varied. In order to illustrate it to the commissioners two chance cases are selected:

(1.) At a court held 29th September 1874, the minutes of proceedings at previous court were read and confirmed. The pass book and rough cash book laid on the table. A report was presented of an investment made pursuant to an order of a previous court. Certain trustees of the company were ordered to attend at the bank and make a transfer to certain new trustees. Lists of the liverymen entitled to vote at the election of members of parliament for the City presented. A letter from the town clerk of the city of London read thanking the company for donation of a scholarship of 50*l.* per annum for three years at Oxford or Cambridge, such letter ordered to be placed on the minutes. Death of two members of court reported. Resolution of condolence passed. Death of a pensioner reported. Two new members of court elected. Resolution passed that yearly gifts of sweetmeats to members of court be purchased for presentation at Christmas.

(2.) At a court held 15th December 1879, previous minutes confirmed. Bankers' pass book and cash book presented. Report made of a sale of stock. Reply to a letter of sympathy with a widow of a member of Court, laid on the table. Donation voted to poor of a country parish. Register of persons made free, presented, duly stamped as to admission of last freeman. Letter read from head master of school at which the company have a scholarship, presenting name of selected candidate. Resolution made that such candidate be accepted on the certificate of such head master that his selection was made according to the conditions of the gift. Order made as to postponement of courts of the company ordinarily held on Saturdays. Order altering the hour of one of the company's meetings. Report by the clerk as to omission of certain members of the court to exercise privilege of nominating some charity for a gift. Resolution thereon. Three nominations of charities made. Report of clerk as to production of company's plate to Lords of Committee of Council of Education, and application of such Lords for loan thereof for purpose of making casts thereof. Order made thereon. Admission of a liveryman. Admission of a freeman.

These two cases are given as fair instances of the nature of the business transacted at courts of the company. The court meets for business purposes on St. Gregory's day, 12th March. The last Monday in April (nomination day). The Monday after Whitsun Monday (election day). Saint John Baptists day (24th June), St. Michaels day (29th September) and St. Lucys day (13th December). The opinions of the members are taken by open vote. The master having a casting vote. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published or accessible to any of the members of the company. Such publication is expressly forbidden by the byelaws of 1582 and 1609 under a penalty.

5. By the byelaws of 1582 any warden who shall have taken a copy of any ordinance of the company out of the hall and neglects upon warning to bring same in again, is liable to a fine and dismissal until such copy be returned. By the same byelaws, if a renter warden be chosen and refuse to take office and be therefore fined and refuse to pay the fine, he may be dismissed until he shall submit. This byelaw seems however to be repealed by a subsequent byelaw of 1610. And except as above mentioned it does not appear that any member of the governing body, after having actually taken his seat on the court, can be dismissed on any ground soever.

6. The company has four sets of byelaws dated respectively 1562, 1582, 1609, and 1710. The first set dated 1562 was approved by William, Marquis of Winchester, Lord Chief Justice Cattlyn (Queen's Bench) and Lord Chief Justice Dyer (Common Pleas). These byelaws are 35 in number and to the following effect:

(1.) As to election of new keepers or wardens, court of assistants to select six honest and credible persons and declare their names to the livery for election. Proviso that the same keepers or wardens may remain for two years "for the better finishing and "ending of such matters as they have begun in "their time."

(2.) The new keepers or wardens to be sworn at the hall the next day after their election.

(3.) Form of the oath of keepers or wardens.
(4.) Power for any keeper or warden if he shall be sick to choose a deputy.
(5.) Old keepers or wardens to bring in their accounts seven days after the election of new keepers or wardens.
(6.) Imposition of a penalty upon keepers or wardens who are found not to have done their duty, but to have connived at any offence for "need, favour, "affection or dread."
(7.) Provision as to time for admission to the livery. Penalty upon any liveryman who being called upon refuses to come.
(8.) No person to leave the company (except to be alderman or sheriff) without the consent of the court of assistants.
(9.) No keeper or warden to grant or demise the company's lands without the express authority of the court.
(10.) Power for the keeper or warden and two or more discreet persons of the court to search all workshops in city of London or Westminster, borough of Southwark, and parish of St. Katharine, and see whether the work good or bad. If the latter to bring same to the hall. Expose on the next court day and burn same. Proviso exempting embroidery works not for sale.
(11.) Provision for taking and disposal of fines. Powers for the wardens and court to "mitigate "demynyshe or defalke" the same. Power for the court to distrain for the amount of fees, and if they can find no distress to imprison.
(12.) All embroidery work to be brought to the hall and sealed before sale.
(13.) The auditors to examine the accounts and make a list of all defaults, and present same to court and livery. Upon payment by the old wardens of all defaults. The new wardens to release them, and the old wardens to hand over the company's property in their possession. Provision as to keeping of valuables in "iron chest, &c." Auditors to hand over the books to the new wardens within eight days.
(14.) Form of the oath of the clarke.
(15.) Provision for assembly of freemen and liverymen every quarter day, and reading of the ordinances and payment of quarterage.
(16.) Power to the wardens to summon all persons exercising the embroidery trade in London or Westminster before them and require an oath to observe the ordinances.
(17.) All persons exercising the trade to come to the hall, and hear the ordinances and pay quarterage.
(18.) All persons exercising the trade in the parish of St. Katharine and borough of Southwark to come and be sworn.
(19.) Form of the oath of freeman and foreigners.
(20.) All persons exercising the trade in the places aforesaid to be obedient to summonses, and in default to pay various fines according to degree of offence.
(21.) No man to dispise the keepers or wardens in doing offices, or any of their assistants.
(22.) No man to rebuke, revile, or curse another in the presence of the keepers or wardens.
(23.) No man to entice any apprentice away from his master under pain of a penalty.
(24.) No man to keep any apprentice absent from his master more than 24 hours.
(25.) No man by colour of any commission from the King or Queen, &c., to compel any person to do other work by virtue of such commission than the work specified in the same commission.
(26.) Regulations as to journeymen, their behaviour, wages, &c. &c.
(27.) No journeymen to set up in trade on his own account without license.
(28.) No person to make work or set up any work-house or shop before his master appear before the court, and be examined as to his character and ability, and such persons have made a piece of work to the satisfaction of the court.
(29.) No person to employ any foreigner until such foreigner be sworn and pay a fee.
(30.) No person to teach the art to any except his children before apprenticeship.
(31.) Regulation as to number of apprentices to be taken.
(32.) No person to sell his apprentice except to a freeman and a licensed working-house keeper.
(33.) Provision as to power of the company in case of the death of master of any apprentice during the apprenticeship term.
(34.) Every man not free of the company having any apprentice shall bind him to some person free of the company.
(35.) No foreigner to take work without license.

The second set of the company's byelaws are 12 in number, and are signed and approved by Sir Thomas Bromely, Lord Chancellor, Christopher Wray, Esquire, and Sir Edward Anderson Knight, Justices of both Benches. They are dated 9th October 1582, and are to the following effect:—

(1.) Provides that in the selection by the court of six honest and credible persons for election by the livery to the offices of master or warden, four of such honest and credible persons shall be working broderers. That one of the wardens shall always be a working broderer. If any warden die in office the livery to choose another.
(2.) All apprentices to serve one year with such a master as the court appoint for one year after the expiration of their apprenticeship.
(3.) Every apprentice to give a spoon to the company before he be made free.
(4.) No journeyman working by the day shall absent himself more than one hour in the day.
(5.) If any journeyman absent himself for two days, notice to be given to the wardens.
(6.) None to set over his apprentice without license. All apprentices to sleep in their masters home.
(7.) No person of the company shall arrest another without license from the wardens.
(8.) All apprentices to be enrolled within two months after binding.
(9.) No warden or other person to make any copy of the roll or book of ordnance.
(10.) If such be made and be not brought back on warning penalty imposed. In default of payment of penalty power to company to dismiss.
(11.) If upon the expiration of apprenticeship, the apprentice is incompetent, he is to take work by the day or week until he has become competent.
(12.) Mode of elections of reuter wardens and their duties mainly in relation to livery dinners. Power to company to dismiss him if the renter warden refuse to take office or pay the penalty.

The third set of the company's byelaws are 13 in number, and are signed by the Earl of Salisbury (Lord High Treasurer), Sir Thomas Fleming, and Sir Edward Coke, justices of both benches. They are dated the 20th May 1609, and are to the following effect:

(1.) The keepers or wardens may not grant leases for more than 21 years in possession, nor without the consent of eight of the court of assistants.
(2.) Specification of the covenants to be contained in such leases.
(3.) Lessee to enter into a bond with a surety to perform covenants.
(4.) No member of the Court to divulge any secret or disclose any speech uttered by any member of the Court in court.
(5.) As to the election and duties of renter warden providing for five dinners a year to the livery. If renter warden refuse to take office, penalty imposed, after payment of which he shall be free.
(6.) No apprentice to set up on his own account till he has worked as a journeyman for three years after the expiration of his apprenticeship.
(7.) After such three years the apprentice may apply to make the piece (of embroidery), and shall be permitted to do so when it is certified that he is a householder and of good character and worth 40 marks.
(8.) The piece once made, to be adjudged upon, and if accepted, presented to the Court, and the apprentice admitted a working housekeeper. No woman to be taken as an apprentice.
(9.) Forfeit imposed upon an apprentice who, when working as a journeyman, shall accept work on his own account.

(10.) Increases the fee on admission as a working housekeeper from 3*s.* 4*d.* to 4*s.*

(11.) If any young working housekeeper have not enough work he could work for someone else.

(12.) No person to set over any apprentice without special license of the keepers or wardens whereof five to be working broderers.

(13.) No journeyman to work for any save approved workhouse keepers.

The fourth set of the company's byelaws are three in number. They are signed by Lord Chancellor Cowper, and Parker and Trevor justices. They are dated 26th May 1710, and are to the following effect:

(1.) Any members of the Court, whether working broderers or not, may be made wardens.

(2.) The Court may choose out of the freemen, at such times as they think fit, any such persons to be the livery as shall seem meet and be convenient for the honour of the City and the worship of the company. If any liveryman declares he is not worth 100*l.* he may be excused.

(3.) Renter warden to provide three good and sufficient dinners for the livery each year and no more.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the city of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement.
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the City of London?

1. The qualification for membership of the company is either patrimony (i.e. right of birth), apprenticeship, or redemption.

The grades of membership are (1) freemen, (2) liverymen, (3) members of the court of assistants.

Women are not now admitted to membership (see byelaw 1610.)

2. The freedom of the company may be obtained (1) by servitude (2) by patrimony (3) by redemption.

In order to be entitled to admission by servitude the apprentice must have bound himself to some freeman of the company with the consent of the parent or guardian for a term of seven years.

Before his admission to the freedom, his master and some member of the Court must certify on their oath of freedom that the apprentice had duly served according to his indenture, and according to the custom of the City. The fee payable on apprenticeship is 10*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* (exclusive of government stamp), and on admission to the freedom by servitude 21*l.* (including government stamp). In order to entitle any person to admission by patrimony it is requisite that such person be of the age of 21 years and have been born in lawful wedlock after the admission of his father to the freedom of the company. Prior to admission either the person to be admitted must produce certificate of his father's marriage and his own baptism, and an affidavit of his father or some other competent person verifying the certificates and identifying him; or some member of the Court must certify on his freedom oath that he knows the person applying to be admitted, and that he is the son of his father, and is of full age. The fee payable on admission by patrimony is 21*l.* (including stamp).

In order to entitle a person to admission by redemption it is necessary that he be proposed and seconded by members of the Court, and resolution made by a majority of votes that he be admitted. The fee payable on admission by redemption is 52*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*, including stamp.

3. The charter gives power to the company "to make "good and salutary statutes and ordinances for the "good regulation and government of the mystery of "the freemen thereof," and "to overlook and govern "the art and all using the same, and to punish all men "for not truly working and selling" (see abstract of the charter set out in return A.) The company made byelaws as above set out duly certified in manner specified by Act of Parliament of the 19 Henry VII. These byelaws certainly require persons exercising the embroidery trade to become free of the company. There is process compelling such persons to procure admission by means of summons before the Court and imposition by the court of penalties, and even imprisonment (see byelaws 1562, 1617–18 and 20). No person by reason of his being an embroiderer only has any process by which he is enabled to procure admission even by redemption if the Court do not choose to admit him. Such processes have not been enforced either way for a very great number of years. The company have no record of any such process ever having been enforced.

Persons exercising the embroidery trade do not commonly become members of the company.

There are five members of the company who are connected with the embroidery trade.

4. Nothing can be found to show that freemen are liable to disfranchisement, and it is presumed that such is not the case.

5. The livery of the company is unlimited in number. The qualification for admission to the livery is that the person wishing to be admitted be a freeman of the company. The Court elect. The livery by resolution. There is a fee of 36*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.*, payable on admission to the livery, in all cases, except in cases where the person applying for the livery was born free, or admitted to the freedom previously to the 30th April 1877, in which cases the fee would be 30*l.* It does not appear from the byelaws, or otherwise, that liverymen are liable to removal.

Year.	Number of Apprentices bound.
1870	None.
1871	None.
1872	None.
1873	None.
1874	None.
1875	None.
1876	One.
1877	One.
1878	One.
1879	None.

None of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade. The company has not in any of such cases paid the fee of such apprentices.

7. The freedom of the City of London should follow admission to the freedom, and is a condition precedent to the admission to the livery. Every member of the livery and Court is free of the City; but it is not known whether the freemen that belong to the company who are not liverymen have been made free of the City.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The present numbers of the company are—

4 freemen.
31 liverymen.
12 members of Court and the clerk.

The following table will show the number of admissions and calls to the livery in each of the last 10 years.

Year.	Freedom by Servitvde.	Freedom by Patrimony.	By Redemption (R).	Livery.
1870	—	—	—	One
1871	—	—	—	—
1872	One	—	(R) Two	Three

1879	—	One	Two	Two

The company presented the livery to one member in the year 1879 in recognition of his successful career as Broderers scholar at Cambridge. This member is included in the list above given.

PART II.—D.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freemen, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages in the present day of being a freeman of the company are not apparent.

The practical advantages of being a liveryman are (1) the right to vote in the election of Lord Mayor and Sheriffs for the City and in the election of members of Parliament for the City, (2) the right of voting at election of the company's officers, (3) the right to be present at the company's three livery dinners each year.

The advantage of being a member of the Court beyond those enjoyed by the livery, is the right of sitting in Court and voting on every question affecting the company and thereby taking an active part in the government of the company.

With the exception of the honorary fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.* paid to each member of the Court for each occasion of his attending Court, there are no pecuniary advantages whatever attached to any sort of position in the company except as mentioned in Part III., Return A. (Infra).

Each member of the company has in the event of misfortune or poverty a claim upon the benevolence of the company according to his needs or merits in addition to his claim upon the charitable funds administered by the company herein otherwise referred to.

2. The average amount of honorary fees paid to members of the Court for 10 years has been 140*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* per annum (about 12*l.* each per annum). Pensions to liverymen 41*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* per annum. To relations of members and other persons 47*l.* 6*s.* 0*d.* per annum. No payments have been made to freemen beyond the above. One liveryman has for the last four years received from the company a donation of, on the average, annually 12*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*

3. The following are the circumstances held in practice to constitute a claim to a pension or donation.

(1.) Poverty, temporary or otherwise.

(2.) Direct membership of the company, or relationship to the company by near connexion (as wife, child, brother, sister, father, or mother of a member of the company). The number of present pensioners is four, one of whom is a liveryman. His pension is 30*l.* per annum. The pensions of the other three pensioners are respectively 20*l.*, 12*l.*, and 10*l.* per annum. In all 72*l.* per annum. There is one donee a liveryman to whom a donation varying from 10*l.* to 20*l.* per annum has been given for the last few years. None of such pensioners or donees are working embroiderers.

4. The average standing as liverymen of members of the company when they are made members of the court would seem to be about 11¾ years. The members of the court remain on the governing body for life.

5. The company carries on no such trade or manufacture as here referred to.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

1. The master presides at courts and dinners. There is no emolument attached to this office, but each master pays a fine of 4*l.* to the company on his election for the first time as such.

2. The warden acts as the masters deputy in his absence. There is no emolument attached to this office, but each warden pays a fine of 4*l.* to the company on his election for the first time as such.

3. The Renter warden.—This officer's duties are to receive the dividends of the company's stock in the court of chancery. To order all dinners, keep an account of the wines, examine the bills, and once a year to visit the company's premises in London. He also in conjunction with the clerk signs cheques against the company's banking account. There is no emolument attached to this office.

4. The auditors (two in number). Their duty is to audit the company's accounts once a year, for which they receive a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* each.

5. The clerk whose duties are to collect the company's income; sign cheques in conjunction with the Renter warden, keep the company's accounts, pay all pensions and donations, charitable or otherwise. Draw minutes of proceedings at court, issue all summonses to court and livery, receive on the company's account all fees on admission of any member to freedom, livery, court, or office of master or warden. The clerk is also custodian of all the company's records and title deeds. He is a liveryman of the company, and receives 105*l.* a year as salary, and in lieu of all payments directed to be made to him by the founder of any charity or by any ancient custom.

B. The Beadle and Porter.—His duties are to deliver all summonses to members of court and livery. To attend all the courts of the company; to attend at Guildhall on the days appointed for the election of members of Parliament and Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London, there to admit only the liverymen of the company. To collect quarterage fees from members of the company (2*s.* each). His salary is 30*l.* per annum, exclusive of fees payable to him on admission of new members, and on various other occasions.

C.—The officers, except the clerk, are appointed annually on Trinity Monday by election of the livery. The clerk is appointed by the court, and holds his office during good behaviour for life. The beadle is annually appointed by the court.

PART IV.—A. and B.

External and Internal sources of Income, value of Property, Administration, and Expenditure.

The enquiries under these headings are understood to relate to the company's private property, and Her Majesty's Commissioners are therefore respectfully referred to the company's introductory remarks.

Part IV.—C.

Return C. (1).—A list of any properties of which the company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

Return C. (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

C (1).—The company is not trustee of any property, save so far as is mentioned under head of charities.

C (2).—This enquiry is understood to relate to the company's private property, and Her Majesty's Commissioners are therefore respectfully referred to the company's introductory remarks.

Part IV.—D., E., and F.

Return E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last ten years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

See Introductory Remarks.

Part IV.—G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

1. The estates and property applicable to any charitable purpose are except as to the collection of the rents managed immediately by the court before whom all questions are brought, and who decide thereon by open vote in the usual way.

2. The company's receipts in respect of the estates and property above referred to are paid by the payers directly to the clerk who keeps the company's accounts, and pays all moneys received by him into the company's banking account. All payments made by the company in respect of the above estates and property are made by cheque signed by the Renter warden and the clerk.

3. The company's accounts relating to the above estates and property are audited yearly about the second week in February up to the 31st December then last preceding. They are audited by the company's auditors. All payments are checked by vouchers, and all receipts by the bankers pass book in the ordinary way.

4. The accounts above referred to are presented to the court duly audited once every year, and are sent to the Charity Commissioners pursuant to Act of Parliament, and are open to anyone interested.

Part IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

This enquiry is understood to relate to the company's private property, and Her Majesty's Commissioners are therefore respectfully referred to the company's introductory remarks.

Part IV.—K.

Position in relation to Universities.

Return K.—Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gifts? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The company has no relation with the universities or any of the colleges in them. Some years since (in the year 1874) the company established a scholarship of 50*l.* per annum for a scholar of the City of London school upon the nomination of the head master tenable for three years during the residence of the scholar at the university of Oxford or Cambridge. The competition is open to all boys of the City of London school taken alternatively from the classical and modern side. The relations of members were not contemplated when the scholarship was established, and they have no sort of preference whatever.

Part IV.—L. and M.

These enquiries are understood to relate to the company's private property, and Her Majesty's Commissioners are therefore respectfully referred to the company's introductory remarks.

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company have no measures of reform to suggest. The company with all respect wish to state distinctly that they are quite competent to conduct their own affairs and are entirely satisfied that those affairs could not be better conducted than they are now.

APPENDIX A.

This company furnished the Municipal Commissioners of 1834 with copies of their charters, ordinances, and byelaws, but gave no information respecting their property or expenditure.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.

Sir, February 15, 1880.

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Broderers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners, but at the same time to state that that information is not in their judgment quite sufficient. I am therefore to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Broderers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

The Clerk of
The Worshipful Company of Broderers.

Schedule.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with respect to the following points :—

Part IV., Circular of Aug. 14, 1880.

The Court has given the Commissioners no information as to the corporate property, the corporate income, and the corporate expenditure of the Company.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission.
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

Sir, June 19, 1882,

I must beg to remind the Court of the Worshipful Company of Broderers that the Commissioners have not yet received an answer to the circular addressed by them to the Company, dated the 15th February last.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

C. E. Freeman, Esq.
Clerk to the Broderers' Company.

The Worshipful Company of Borderers.
(Clerk's Office), 20, Gutter Lane, Cheapside,

Sir, London, June, 30, 1882.

In answer to the circular of Her Majesty's Commissioners to enquire into the City of London Livery Companies, referred to in your letter of the 19th instant, I am instructed, on behalf of this Company, to inform you that the Company "anxiously considered "what answers it was their duty to make to the "interrogatories" of Her Majesty's Commissioners, dated 14th August last, when preparing these answers, and this fact is stated in the Company's remarks which preceded their answers; and they beg respectfully to intimate to Her Majesty's Commissioners that the Company have nothing to add to the answers already made, and the Company's remarks as to Part IV. of the enquiries, and the preliminary remarks there referred to.

I am, &c.
C. E. Freeman,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.
&c. &c.

BUTCHERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A—H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The date of the foundation of the Company is not known, but it was prior to 1180 (26 Henry II.), as in that year the fraternity or guild of Butchers of the City were fined in the King's Exchequer as "an adulterine guild," not being duly licensed.

The following is a list of the charters which have been at any time in the Company's possession:—

B.—Charters, 16th September, 3 James I. (Latin).
19th August 1608, 5 James I.
31st July 1638, 13 Charles I. (Latin).
7th November, 1 James II. (Latin).
10th October 1749, 23 George II.

The charters are all to be seen at the Public Record Office, Fetter Lane, and as different constructions may be put on them by different persons the Commissioners are respectfully referred to them at such office.

C.—The Company is not aware of any trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the Company.

D.—The Company is not aware of any decree, and of only one Act of Common Council, regulating or affecting the Company. That is an Act of Common Council, dated 20th June 1754, for compelling every person carrying on the trade of butcher, and not being already free of the city, to take upon himself the freedom of the company.

E.—The only other documents which found, regulate, or affect the Company are the byelaws dated 27th December 1752, but see answer to question 6, Part 2, Return A.

F.—The Company sent a printed history of the Butchers' Company, by Joseph Daw, from which the following is an extract:—

"WE find that the trade of butchers, so necessary for the due provision of food for man, had taken an important position within the old city of London at a very early period of our city's history, and in common with other trades had assumed the functions and constitution of a guild or gild. I suppose we may consider this as one of the consequences of living in troublesome times. Under an arbitrary or a disorganised government it was reasonable for men to seek protection in the society of their fellows, and especially with those who had a common interest, and so they banded together for purposes of mutual help, as well as of exercising a controlling power over those who practised their trade. This was largely done by the wardens and officers of the Associated Trade of Butchers, from the earliest periods, and their faithfulness in the discharge of this important duty to the community is shown from the few passages which follow, extracted from documents in the possession of the Corporation of London, and from the books of the Company:

"As early as the year 1180 (26 Henry II.) the fraternity or guild of Butchers of the City, then and long after called 'bochers,' were found to exist, but not by due legal right, and were accordingly fined in the King's Exchequer as an 'adulterine guild,' they not being duly licensed. William la Feite was then master, or, as then called, 'alderman' of the Company, which title continued to be so used down to the time of Edward III. Seventeen other companies were fined at the same time and for the same reason.

"The butchers of the city had, in those days, three markets whereat to sell their meat; one at 'Stokkes,' the site of which was near that of the present Mansion House; another in Eastcheap; and another at 'St. Nicholas' Shambles,' now called Newgate Street, and until lately Newgate Market. And in the year 1277 (5 Edward I.) the mayor, aldermen, &c. ordered 'that there shall not be 'kept a market on London Bridge, nor in any other place, 'except those appointed,' which seems to show that some had tried to form a market in other places.*

* "Order of mayor and aldermen, &c. (illustrative of the practice then), 1375:—Foreign (not free) poulterers who enter by Newgate and Aldrichesgate shall sell their poultry on the pavement before Friars Minors, near the Fountain. Freemen poulterers to stand before the church of Saint Nicholas' Fleshambles, and there sell their poultry, so as not to meddle with foreigners, i.e. (non-freemen) in selling and buying."

"In 1414 (1 Henry V.) inquisition was taken before the mayor and aldermen on the 14th March 'to enquire on 'oath as to the boundaries and limits where flesh meat was 'sold from of old—and ought to be sold in the street 'called Estchepe,'; and the decision was that the same was wont to be sold of old in the said street from north to south in breadth, on both sides of the street, from the house called the 'Pye on the Hope' straight to the tenement called the 'Sareshinshed,' and in length 'on both 'sides of the street from the east corner of Croked Lane to 'the tenement which William Ivor now inhabits on the 'west.'

"These markets probably consisted of a number of stalls and pents with places for slaughtering attached, and in some instances had dwellings for the owners. That slaughtering was done contiguous to these stalls is shown from the orders on that subject hereafter quoted. The refuse from 'East Chepe' passed down Pudding Lane, through ground assigned to the Butchers' Company by the Corporation of London, to the Thames; from 'Stokkes Market,' probably, by the 'Wallbrook,' then an open river; and from 'St. Nicholas' Shambles' to the Thames, by the Fleet river, and doubtless by the town moat or ditch, which was close to it, surrounding the city wall, which stretched across from the west end of the present Newgate Street to Ludgate, opposite the Old Bailey, and northwards to Aldersgate, by the site of the present Christ's Hospital and Little Britain. This part of the Town Ditch, extending from Ludgate to Cripplegate, is called (1371–2) in the city records 'the Foss of Houndsdiche.'

"Many orders and regulations for the conducting of their trade were made from time to time by the King, and by the mayor and aldermen of the city; and the offence of bringing to the city markets diseased or putrid meat was regarded with as much sense of the mischief that would arise from its sale to the health of the people as now; and offenders, upon conviction, were punished with peculiar severity. Thus, as early as 1266 (51 Henry III.) an Act of Parliament was passed for preventing the sale of infectious meat, or meat which had died of the murrain. The following extracts from the records of the Corporation will further illustrate this:—

"'1319. 13 Edward II. Nov. 1. The sworn wardens of flesh meat brought to the shambles called "Les Stokkes" seized two beef carcasses, putrid and poisonous, taken from William Sperlyng, of West Hamme, he intending to sell the same at the said shambles. The said Sperlyng, being taken before the mayor and aldermen, acknowledged he intended to sell the beef, but insisted that it was good, clean, and fit for human food, and demanded inquisition thereon. And a jury of twelve say on oath that the said carcasses are putrid and poisonous, and have died of disease.

"'The mayor and aldermen order the said Sperlyng to be put in the pillory, and the said carcasses to be burnt beneath him.

"'1320. 14 Edward II. July 25. One William le Clerk, of Higham Ferrers, was brought before the mayor and aldermen with certain putrid and poisonous meat unfit for human food, and the same being found to have died of disease, the said William le Clerk, in whose possession it was found, was sentenced to the same punishment as the above.

"'1320. 14 Edward II. Nov. 25. The pork and beef of certain non-freemen were seized, they having, against the custom of the city, exposed the same for sale by candle light at "Les Stokkes" after curfew rung at St. Martin's-le-Grand; it being enacted that no non-freeman at his stalls shall cut any meat after none rung at St. Paul's, and all meat he has cut before none* he may sell up to the hour of vespers,† without keeping any back or carrying any away. One of the accused proving he was free of the city had his meat returned to him.

"'1320. 14 Edward II. 10th August. One Nicholas Schyngal accusing another man of bringing putrid meat to market, and it being found that the accuser had himself committed the offence which he falsely charged on another, he was ordered to be put in the pillory, and the meat burnt beneath him.'

"The butchers of 'Stokkes Market' seem to have carried on their business with more care and attention as citizens than others. Thus we find the following course taken by them for the protection of their interests:—

"'1331. 5 Edward III. The butchers of 'Stokkes' presented a petition to the mayor and aldermen, asking that the trade of the market may be amended:—

"'1. That no butcher sell his wares after he has once or twice failed in his payment, until such time as he shall have paid up all that he is in arrear. This in order to destroy the bad repute of the trade.

"'2. That no "foreigner"* sell his wares there by retail.

"'3. That no one shall take another man into his employ until such man shall have accounted and paid up all his debts.

"'4. That many butchers who have bought their freedom and sworn of the franchise, do rent their houses at and around Stretforde, and never come at any summons, nor bear their part in the franchise of the city, but shut out the citizens in divers markets when they go out to buy their wares, so that through them no wares they can get, to the great undoing of the citizens. The petitioners ask that it may be ordained that such butchers must dwell within the city, &c.

"'5. And that such as infringe any one of the said points shall be bound to pay 40*s.* to the Chamber.'

"It does not appear what was done with this petition.

"But the traders appear to have been called to account for infractions of the laws and customs of the city, and obstructions in the city highways were even then regarded as grave offences. Thus we read:—

"'1345. 19 Edward III. It being represented by the common serjeant to the mayor and aldermen that the King's highway between "The Stokkes" and the Conduit in the Ward of Chepe was so occupied, on flesh days, by butchers and poulterers with their wares for sale—and fishmongers on their days—that persons could not pass through but with great hindrance, and he asked for some remedy to be applied.

"'It was ordered,—That, for the future, butchers should sell their meat on flesh days within the enclosed place called "The Stokkes" and not in the King's highway; and the fishmongers, on the fish days, within the like enclosure, and not on the King's highway, and on flesh days beneath the pent houses adjoining such enclosure, on pain of forfeiting their goods.'

"Thus early we see the right to seize things placed on the public way enforced, and thus it appears that the same market-places were used on different days for the different trades. As at this time the streets and lanes of the city were not paved—pipes from the gable roofs of the houses pouring water on to the roadways—and all the filth of a crowded town running on to the surface, we may fancy the condition of the markets under such circumstances. Indeed no serious attempts to pave the streets were made for nearly two centuries after this date.

"The following are matters of interest as illustrating the state of the trade at the time to which they refer:—

"'1363. 37 Edward III. Proclamation of prices by the mayor:—

"'Best goose shall be sold for 6*d.*
Best sucking pig, 8*d.*
Perdriche, 5*d.*
Spaude or shoulder of roast mutton, 2½*d.*
Best carcass of mutton, 2*s.*
„ loigne of pork, 3*d.*
„ loigne of beef, 5*d.*
„ pestelle (leg) of ditto, 3*d.*'

"[Any one withholding victuals from sale was made liable to a fine, or to the pillory—'Forestalling.']

"'1363. 37 Edward III. In this year divers trades sent presents to our lord the King. The butchers of St. Nicholas sent 9*l.*, the butchers of the Stokkes 6*l.*, the butchers of Eastcheap 8*l.* (sums of no small importance in those days).

"'1378. 2 Richard II. Proclamation 19th November. No person coming to the city with lambs to sell shall sell the best lambs at a higher price than 6*d.* between now and the beginning of Lent. No one of the city shall go into the country to buy lambs but only those to whom the lambs belong.

"'All butchers, freemen, and foreigners in the city shall close their shops before candles are lighted, and shall sell no meat by light of candle.'

* "Query. The ninth hour of the ancient Church. About our 3 p.m."
† "About the sixth hour in the evening."

* "That is, one not free of the city."

"Most probably this latter order was made to prevent danger from fire; all pents, stalls, &c., and most houses being built of wood only.

"The non-removal of the refuse consequent on the slaughtering of cattle, sheep, &c. from the city seems to have been the cause of much complaint and difficulty, even in the early days we are considering; and from the frequent visitations of the plague and other terrible diseases, it is evident that a necessity existed for the enforcement of greater cleanliness.

"The butchers of Eastcheap used the lane leading therefrom to the Thames (now Pudding Lane) and a piece of ground leading down to the river, granted to them in the reign of King Henry IV., 12th May 1402, by John Shadworth, mayor, with leave to make a bridge or jetty therefrom to the Thames, as is shown in the following extract from the corporation records, which I find among the Company's papers, as a place down which the refuse of slaughtering, scalding hogs, &c. was to be carried by little and little at the rifting of the tide, and voided to their dung boats on the Thames, so says Stow. And not unfrequently came orders from the authorities for amending the same. It would seem, therefore, that considerable amount of accommodation for the butchers in the city of London was provided, even in these early days. And in this lane there were tenements for their use. This was no doubt the origin of the user of that piece of ground, which in late years, reduced to a very limited space by Fresh Wharf, is frequently mentioned in the Company's minutes:

"'1402. 3 Henry IV. To all Christian people by whom these our present letters shall be seen or read, John Shadworth, mayor, alderman, and citizen of the city of London greeting in the Lord, always know ye that we with unanimous assent and free will have granted, demised, and by this our present writing indented for us and our successors, have confirm'd to John Bromsbury, Henry Sampson, Thomas Martyn, jun., Henry Edwards, Elye Brown, Robert Edwards, Lawrence Bolde, and Richard Langford, citizens and butchers of Eastcheape, in the said city, and their successors butchers there a certain lane called Katherine Lane, situate in the parishes of Saint Magnus and Saint Botolph, London, between a tenement formerly belonging to Gilbert Maughfeilde on the part of the east, and a tenement of Henry Bosworthe on the part of the west, and the King's highway called Thames Street towards the north, and the River Thames towards the south, and contains in width two roods and one quarter, and in length forty-five roods and one half; and we also license the aforesaid John Bromsbury, Thomas Sampson, Thomas Martyn, jun., Henry Elye, Robert Lawrence, and Richard Langford, at the end of the said lane to make a bridge upon the Thames, and to build houses on the same, and the intestines of beasts, and the filth and offal of the said beasts, to carry by little and little at the reflux of the tide, and not otherwise, and there to throw the same into the river, according to the statute made at Winchester in the time of our Lord Richard the Second since the Conquest, late King of England, TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the aforesaid lane, with the bridge and the houses so as aforesaid to be built, to the aforesaid John Bromsbury, Thomas Sampson, Thomas Martyn, Henry Elye, Robert Lawrence, and Richard Langford, citizens and butchers, residing in Eastcheape aforesaid for ever, yielding and paying therefor annually in the chamber of the said city, which shall be for the time being to the use of the said city, thirteen shillings and fourpence sterling, at the feasts of the Nativity of our Lord and Saint John the Baptist, by equal portions, and if the aforesaid annual rent of thirteen shillings and fourpence shall not be paid at either of the periods aforesaid, then it shall be lawful for the chamberlain of the said city (for the time being) the aforesaid lane, with the bridge and houses built thereon, to retake into the hands of the said city, and the aforesaid John Bromsbury, Thomas Sampson, Thomas Martin, Henry Elye, Robert Lawrence, and Richard Langford, and their successors, making default to expell this present indenture notwithstanding in testimony whereof to our part in the possession of the said John Bromsbury, Thomas Sampson, Thomas Martyn, Henry Edwards, Elye Brown, Robert Edwards, Lawrence Bolde, and Richard Langford, butchers and citizens aforesaid, the common seal of the said mayor, aldermen, and citizens is affixed, and to another true part thereof in the possession of the said mayor, aldermen, and citizens, the aforesaid John Bromsbury, Thomas Sampson, Thomas Martyn, Henry Elye, Robert Lawrence, and Richard Langford have affixed their seals. Delivered in Guildhall Chamber, in the city aforesaid, the 12th day of the month of May, in the third year of the reign of King Henry the Fourth since the Conquest.

"'(Entered a true copy in the Guildhall Chamber, in the city of London, in the book (H.), folio 337.)'

"But the butchers of the shambles of St. Nicholas (Newgate) appear to have given the most annoyance in these respects, as the following extracts show:

"'1342. 17 Edward III. The mayor, aldermen, and commonalty, for "the deceney and cleanliness of the city," leased to the butchers, in the parish of St. Nicholas' Shambles, a piece of land in the lane called "Secollane" (Seacoal), near to the water of Fleete, for the purpose of there, in such water, cleansing the entrails of beasts. The said butchers were to repair a certain quay therein, and keep it in repair, and to pay to the mayor, &c., at the feast of our Lord's Nativity, yearly one boar's head.'

"Here we find the river 'Fleete,' then an important means of water conveyance for corn, &c. to the mills by 'Turnmill Brooke,' Clerkenwell, turned into a place for cleansing the entrails of beasts.

"The King again interferes:

"'1369. 43 Edward III. The King having received grievous complaints from divers prelates, nobles, and other persons of the city, having houses and buildings in the streets, lanes, and other places between the shambles of the butchers of St. Nicholas, near to the mansion of the Friars Manors of London, and banks of the water of Thames near to Baynard Castle, in the said city . . . . of the slaughtering of beasts in the said shambles, and the carrying of entrails and offal, &c. through the streets to the river, at the place called Bochersbrigge, so that no one, by reason of the corruption of the same and filth, can hardly venture to abide in his house. We considering, &c., &c., order the said brigge, before the feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin (15th August), to be entirely pulled down, and such slaughtering of beasts shall be done without the city, and this to be done on a penalty of 100*l.*'

"'1371. 45 Edward III. The King again issues similar orders against slaughtering in the city, carrying blood, offal, &c. through the streets; and directs that slaughtering of beasts, sheep, swine, and other large animals for the sustenance of the city, shall be taken to the village of "Stretteforde" on the one side, and of "Knightsbrigge" on the other, and the entrails of beasts shall there be cleansed, and any butcher offending against this was to forfeit the flesh and be imprisoned for one year.

"'Severe reproof of the mayor and sheriffs for their neglect in not enforcing his ordinance in this matter follows, having previously expressly excepted the butchers of Eastcheape and of Stokkes Market from the charge of this offensive practice.'

"It is singular to remark the orders by which the (now aristocratical) neighbourhood of Knightsbridge was proposed to be turned into a place for slaughtering and cleansing the entrails of animals.

"As to the market of 'St. Nicholas' Shambles,' which thus early caused so much excitement amongst the distinguished nobility, prelates, and gentry who then lived in its immediate vicinity, it deserves a little more attention; and especially as, after having long survived its brethren at 'Stokkes' and 'Eastcheape,' it has just, in our own day (1869), ceased to exist.

"'St. Nicholas' Shambles' seem to have been situate in Newgate Street (with stalls and pents in the middle of the street,—the country people using the centre of the roadway), and probably extended a little to the south, the natural incline of the ground to the Thames being convenient and attractive, and, as we have seen, affording means for getting rid of the filth, &c. into that river, and by 'Secollane' into the river 'Fleete.'

"In a map of the city of London, date 1560, Newgate Market is marked as being on the same site as at present, or near about the same. 'St. Nicholas' Shambles' are marked as running down the centre of Newgate Street. Adjoining north to the old monastic church of St. Nicholas is shown a quadrangular building with a courtyard or garden in the centre—which, or part of which, was probably the 'Mansyon House' mentioned in the lease hereafter described.

"The Shambles derived their name from the above church of St. Nicholas, contiguous to or forming a part of a very large monastic institution settled on the north side of Newgate Street, called the 'Grey Friars,' originally on land given 'for the goode of his soule,' by John Iwyn, or Ewin, a physician* of London, who became a lay brother of the Order.

"Afterwards this monastery was much enlarged by the Mayor and other citizens of London, and by Margaret, the queen of Edward I., in 1306. At the dissolution of monasteries in 1538, by Henry VIII., it fell, with others, into the hands of persons who appear to have applied the buildings to very different purposes; but for some years after the church continued to be used as a parish church (named St. Nicholas' Shambles, St. Ewin, &c.), and subsequently, after the Fire of London, on the destruction of the ancient building, the present 'Christ Church' was erected thereon, though it is said that, large as the area of this existing parish church is, it only covers the site of the nave of the former church.

"Prior to the period of the Reformation, the members of the Butchers' Gild appear to have held their meetings in their house at 'Scalding Lane,' on or about the site of their present hall, although it is not certain whether they had any hall, in the modern meaning of the word, at that period.

"In the year 1548 (2nd of Edward VI.) a lease was granted by the governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, then newly founded in West Smithfield, in the then suburbs of the city, to the wardens of the craft and fellowship of Butchers, of a 'Mansyon House' in this place, from which the following is an extract:—

"'Indenture made betwen Thom^s Hayes, goldsmith, chambleyn of the cytie of London, and Augustyne Hynde, and as^t Will^m Garrarde, aldren. and Will^m Rawlyns, grocer, and Thom^s Barthelett Stacyon, cytezens of y^e said cytie, and foure of y^e governors of the house of the poore lately called Saint Barthylmewes Spyttle, sett and being in the West Smithfield, in the suburbs of ye said cytie, according to an order by the Lorde Mayre and Aldren. of the cytie aforesaid, lately taken for the same, on the one parte. Benedict Jackson, Roger Norris, Will^m Herde, Thomas Jeffryes, and John Dodge, cytezens and bochers of London, and Wardeins of the crafte, occupacon or felowship of the bochers of the said cytie on the other parte Witnesseth that by the assent, consent and agreement of the Ryght Honorable Syr John Gresh^m Knyght, Lord Mayer, &c. . . . . they do dymyse, grante, and to ferme lette unto the said wardeins, &c., all that the Mansyon house with cellers, solers, and all other thappleines, called the psonage. or dwellg. house, of late belonging to the poore of the late pyshe church of Saint Nichas in the flesh shambles . . . . beng nere unto the late desolved house somtyme called the Greyfryers, nowe called Crystchurche w^n Newgate, together w^t all scytuacon, enfrees, cloyster and pambulacons being right under and beneth the edyfycacon or buyldinge of the said mansyon house or psonage. and also a pcell. of grounde taken oute of the late churchyarde of the said pyshe of Saint Nychas, containing from the stone wall on the south to the garden toward the northe 38 feet 9 inches of assyse [here follow other dimensions] to have and to hold, &c., &c., for the terme of fourscore yeares from the feast of Saint Michael the Archangel last past. Yelding and paying therefore yerely unto the said Chamblein and Governors of the poore and their successors sixe pounde of good and lawful money of England [here follows leave to the lessees to pull down the said mansion house, &c., &c.], or of new to erect edyfie, buyld, and to sett up such edyfacacons or houses as to them, from tyme to tyme shall be thought meete and convenyante. [Other covenants follow.] In witness, &c., dated 4th October, in y^e yere of our Lorde God, 1548, in the 2^d yere of the reygne of our most dread sovaygn Lorde Edward the syxth by y^e gce. of God Kyng of England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Feythe and of the Churche of England, and also of Ireland, on erthe the supme. hed. Signed and Sealed.'

"This 'Mansyon House' then became the Butchers' Hall, and the suggestive but disagreeable name of 'Stinking Lane' was dropped, and the place became known as Butcher Lane, or Butcher Hall Lane—although the sense of annoyances and injury to health, from the consequences of slaughtering, still continued; and Stow tells us that in the reign of Elizabeth, on occasion of the plague, an Italian physician considered the smells from the blood and garbage of butchers killing of cattle one great cause of it—and this chiefly in Eastcheap and St. Nicholas' Flesh Shambles. He suggested that the Queen should build slaughter-houses in the suburbs—specially there being an Act of Henry VII. for this purpose.

"This Act 4 Henry VII. cap. 3, recites a petition from the parishioners of St. Faith's and St. Gregory's by St. Paul's Cathedral, complaining of 'corrupt airs' engendered in the vicinity of that cathedral by reason of the slaughter of beasts, &c. at St. Nicholas' Shambles—and 'whose 'corruption and foul ordure, &c., is borne down through the 'said parishes and compasseth the palace (Baynard's Castle, 'I presume) where the King's most royal person is wont to 'abide when he cometh to the cathedral, to the jeapordous 'abiding of his most noble person'—on which it is enacted that no beast shall be slain within the walls of London upon certain penalties—and this law is to be observed in every walled city or town in England.

"I have been at some trouble to ascertain certainly whether the Company retained possession of this hall in Butcher Hall Lane, after the Fire of London.

"It is clear that the lease above referred to must have expired in 1628. It is equally clear that it must have been renewed by the Governors of Bartholomew Hospital, as I find the master, wardens, and commonalty granting, on the 20th June 1655, a lease to one Michael Shipway, of 'all that roome or chamber situate and being underneath 'the Common Hall of the said Company, in the parish of 'Christ Church, and now in the occupation of one John 'Mitchell, for the term of 15 years,' &c., &c.

"And in an endorsement allusion is made to a lease dated 2nd September, 1651,* by president and governors of Bartholomew Hospital to the Company, in which is a covenant binding the lessee to do certain things 'in case 'the said master, wardens, and company, or their successors, 'shall have occasion to take another lease of the old Hall 'called Butchers' Hall, whereof the within mentioned pre-'mises are parcel.'†

"In 1674 the Court of Common Council prohibited stalls being placed in the streets, and would not allow meat or other provisions to be sold anywhere but in the markets, or in market houses. Newgate, Honey Lane, and 'Woolchurch Market' are mentioned at this period by Maitland. The latter, I conclude, must have been identical with 'Stokkes.' Leadenhall was originally a place for public weighing of wool and other wares, and in the early part of the 14th century was occasionally used as a court of justice. But the vicinity appears to have been from an early period used as a place for the sale of poultry—as an order of the Mayor as early as 1357 is to be seen regulating the place whereat persons who are free may sell their poultry, and requiring those vendors who did not stay within their own houses to sell them 'along the wall towards the west of the church of St. Michael, in Cornhill.' After the Fire of London it became used as a market for provisions, meat, &c., as well as poultry, and shortly after for hides and tanned leather. 'Stocke's Market' is mentioned in the Court Minutes as late as 1702, and about the same date the Court sought to suppress all 'bye-day' markets, and to put the laws in force against all persons keeping markets on Tuesday and Thursday in the city.

"The clerk being ordered (23rd June, 1702) to take steps accordingly and 'the Court engaging to stand by and justify him in so doing.'

* "Maitland calls him a mercer. Probably this was the company of which he was a member."

* "Through the kindness of the clerk of Saint Bartholomew Hospital, I am favoured with the annexed extract from their Journal on this point:—

"'Curia tenta 22d die Junii, Anno Dni, 1650.

"'It is thought fitt and ordered upon the petition of the M^r. and Wardens of the Company of the Art or Mistery of the Butchers, London, that they shall have a Lease of their Hall, situate in Butcher's Lane, for 21 yeares from Midsomer Day next, for the ffine of lxx^li to be paid in manner and forme following, viz^t.:—xx^li thereof before Michas. next at their sealing of the Lease: xxv^li at Xmas then next and imediatly following and xxv^li at Midsomer Anno dni, 1651; and for the yearely rent of vi^li now paid. And to be bound to p.forme such covenn^ts as are used.'"

† "Since the above was set up in type, the clerk has obligingly sent me the further extract from the books of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, which settles the question:—

"'Curia tenta 22d die January, Anno Dni, 1668.

"'Wardens of Butcher Remissed for Rent vi^li x^s—Whereas the Wardens of the Company of Butchers, late tennants to this Hospital for theire Hall, which was lately burned down in Butchers' Hall Lane, in the p'ish of Christ Church, made theire request to be remitted the rent they owe in arreare, due since the ffire, for that they had paid all the rent untill the ffire, and had surrendered theire lease for several yeares in being, and they alledging that the Company was in very great povertie, thereupon it was ffurther taken into consideration by this Court, that the said ground is leased to a good tennant, who hath already built, and will p.forme his agreement with this Hospital, and that the yearely rent of vi^li formerly paid is improved to ix^li. Hereupon it is ordered that all the rent the said Company owe and in arrear shall be forgiven and remitted, and that Mr. Tre'r. shall be discharged thereof in his accompte for the same.'"

"It would seem, however, that the endeavour of the Court to put down hawkers of meat, and all attempts at suppressing what was then called 'forestalling the markets,' were met by great opposition (as might be expected as the population of the city and suburbs increased) and caused the Company great expenses, so that in 1711 the Court being applied to by residents to prosecute such offenders, informed the applicants that 'if they will pay 'all costs the Company will prosecute such offenders; and 'on the same conditions will prosecute all persons carrying 'on trade as butchers in the markets on bye days.'

"The oldest book of records in the possession of the Company, rescued with others from the disastrous fires which have destroyed their premises and property, dates from 1592. It is a book of accounts, and I quote here the following headings of one year's accounts.

"'The accompte of Gamaliel Pye, Richard Bingham and others, Wardens of the Mistery of Butchers w^n the Citty of London for one hole year (that is to say), from the then ffeast of St. Luke, anno. "ORIGIN OF THE LIVERY.

"At an early period of our history subsequent to the Conquest, the city of London necessarily became the great centre of the national commerce. Situate as it is, most advantageously for that purpose, on a great tidal river of easy access to the sea and its very shores affording the most tempting advantages to all persons to engage in shipping pursuits, we are not surprised that historians tell us of the great wealth of our London merchants even in the early periods of civic history. But then, as now, this great wealth was centered in a comparatively few individuals—the whole of the foreign and wholesale trade was confined to a few; but they were the founders of many of the noble families of the land—indeed more, for we find that Queen Elizabeth's great grandfather by her mother's side was Geoffrey Boleyn, a mercer in the Old Jewry, and Lord Mayor in 1457,† Anne Boleyn, the Queen's mother, being a descendant from that Lord Mayor.

"Hence it is easy to understand that in the various civic guilds in those days there would arise a desire to form a separate class of citizens, who might assume a superior station and position, and should be distinguished from the commonalty, as was then the fashion, by their dress or robe.* Thus these merchants, associated in their companies, had considerable influence; and the Corporation of London, who from an early period exercised a ruling power over them, appointed unto certain of them an authority to grant a livery to such of their members as they selected, and required of such companies that, upon all civic solemnities, such members should appear in their proper livery,† which custom is, indeed, continued even to the present day, in the forms and notices issued from the Town Clerk's Office, convening common halls, &c.

"In Herbert's History, we read of a circumstance that occurred illustrating the spirit which actuated the citizens in the early days of their existence.

"'In 1226, a great quarrel had arisen between the Goldsmiths' and the Merchant Taylors' Companies. They met at night to the number of 500, completely armed, and proceeded to settle it by blows. Many were killed and wounded, and they were ultimately separated only by the interference of the sheriffs and the posse comitatus.'

"In the year 1415, 3rd Henry V., an order of the mayor and aldermen is found to this effect; it appearing that it had long been the 'venerable usage' for the mayor, aldermen, and other officers, 'in support of the honour of 'the city, to receive either a hood or a vestment each year 'from the different crafts of this city, the custom is hardly 'now able to get a good word even said in its behalf.' It was ordered 'that no mayor, alderman, or sheriff, or any 'other officer or servant of the said city, shall take any 'livery or vestments from any craft or fraternity within the 'said city, save only that one craft of which he has been 'made free, on penalty of 100s. from any mayor, alderman, 'or sheriff, and any other officer of loss of office.'

"Many of the companies, there is reason to believe, instituted their body of livery of their own will and authority; and there is no doubt that the Butchers' Company have had their livery from a very early date, and that without any special order or decree of the Court of Aldermen. Formerly the Common Council were elected by the livery companies, and in 50 Edward III. the Butchers' Company sent four members.

"The position of the Company, in relation to the other companies, may be judged of by the following circumstance. In a precept by the 'maior' (1573), the various companies were called on to pay certain sums to buy corn with, to lay up in store at the Bridge House, for use, fearing much want in consequence of 'perceiving by the harvest past and the unkind season of the year.' In this list the Butchers' Company are assessed at 25*l.* 10*s.*, the highest being 500*l.*, the lowest 6*l.* 5*s.*

"In the early charges there are entries of fines being paid by members of the Company for not attending at 'Paule's' on special occasions, and on Lord Mayor's Day in their place. Barge money was also levied, which seems to have been a fixed charge on every member to pay the costs of hiring a barge and attendants to accompany the Lord Mayor on the river to Westminster to be sworn, a custom began in 1451.‡

"I find from the records of the Company that they had 'a stande' for their use on occasion of civic pageants, which was accustomed to be placed in the main line of street through which processions passed. Thus—November 15th, 1697, the livery are ordered to be at their 'standes' in Cheapside by 9 o'clock the next morning, on occasion of the King coming through the city from Flanders. Again, in 1714, I find a charge made for the Company's expenses on occasion of King George entering the city, 69*l.* 17*s.* 6½*d.* And in 1726, the Company's like expenses on Lord Mayor's Day, including the stand, were 69*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.* And in 1763, March 28, a new livery stand and trappings are ordered to be ready for the next Lord Mayor's Day; 50*l.* was subscribed by the members toward the cost, which amounted

A curious illustration of this is given in the case of one John Sely, alderman of Wallbrook, who, on the Feast of Pentecost, attended the mayor and aldermen to Divine Service at St. Paul's, without being habited in the robes which the mayor or aldermen had agreed they 'for the dignity of the city should be arrayed in, viz., a cloak of green lined with green taffeta' (or thin silk). He being a man, I suppose, of no taste for dress, appeared 'in a cloak that was single without a lining.' Whereupon, by advice of the mayor and aldermen, it was adjudged and assented to that they should all dine with the offender at his house, at his proper cost, on the Thursday following: and ordered him also to have a proper cloak made at once. And moreover this punishment was to be inflicted on all aldermen hereafter who should have the temerity to act in like manner."

to 60*l.* This stand existed until the year 1805, when it was ordered to be sold for 20*l.*

"The Lord Mayor, it is to be remarked, was chosen from one or other of the 12 chief livery companies. This custom continued till the year 1742, when Sir Robert Wilmot, a cooper by company, was elected Lord Mayor.

"THE FIRST CHARTER—JAMES I.

"The time was now come when the butchers of London assumed their proper position in the city, and, applying to the Sovereign for a charter, they obtained one from King James I. (16th September 1606), who thereby incorporated all the freemen of the art or mystery of Butchers, and gave to the Company powers of controlling all persons exercising the trade living in the city or within one mile thereof.

"It was during the reign of James I. that the connection of the Corporation and the municipal companies of London with the estates in the north of Ireland was formed, which merits a brief outline of the proceedings. The King was desirous to tranquillise the turbulent and lately rebellious people in that country, and after the defeat of their leaders whose lands were forfeited to the Crown, James applied to the Corporation of the city of London to help him in his difficulty by raising money to colonise these lands with Protestants from London, hoping thereby to bring them into cultivation, to extend the Protestant religion, and so promote the general interests of the nation.

"The Corporation were induced to accede to this request of His Majesty, and they appear to have raised about 20,000*l.* out of the city funds for this purpose; this sum, however, not being sufficient, they applied to the 12 chief companies to assist, who again applied to the minor companies for subscriptions; the result was that among them a further sum of 40,000*l.* was raised in equal sums of 3,333*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*—(Anno 1612.)

"Of these the Grocers' and Merchant Taylors' Companies raised the required quota without aid, the other companies were assisted by the minor companies in various proportions.

"The Butchers' Company appear to have subscribed the sum of 150*l.*, and joined the Clothworkers in their contribution. This is distinctly stated in the published history of the Irish Society, wherein it is set forth that the Clothworkers' Company subscribed 2,260*l.*, and the rest of their quota was contributed by six other companies.

"Thus the Irish Society of London was formed, their style and title being 'The Society of the Governor and 'Assistants of London of the new plantation in Ulster, 'within the realm of Ireland.'

"The society was the means of procuring large numbers of English to emigrate to the north of Ireland (thence called Londonderry) on the lands assigned to them by the King, which appear to have included an area of about 20 miles in length, bounded on the north by the sea, on the east by the River Bann, on the west by the River Derry or Lough Foyle.

"This proceeding of the King, however, appears to have produced considerable jealousy in the minds of many persons in Ireland and at home, and the complaints of people brought the matter before the Court of Chancery (1618—1637); and, after considerable disquietude, a new charter appears to have been granted by Charles II. in 1662.

"The 12 companies of London at this time, as is well known, derive considerable revenues from their Irish estates, largely increased in value as they are from the enterprise and industry of their tenantry, aided by the judicious management of the landlords.* But I do not find that the Butchers' Company have ever derived any benefit, in any shape, from their investment of 150*l.* in the adventure of the Clothworkers' Company. The destruction of their books and papers by fire has left us in doubt and ignorance upon this as on many other matters.

"THE SECOND CHARTER—CHARLES I.

"The powers granted by the first charter of King James were soon found ineffectual, as divers persons (so runs the preamble of the charter of George II.) exercising the art aforesaid did resist and oppose the said master and wardens in their inspections and examinations, and exposed to sale unwholesome and corrupt flesh fraudulently and basely butchered and deceitfully dressed, which said offenders escaped with impunity because the said master and wardens could not by virtue of the said letters patent proceed according to law against such offenders, &c., &c. and the company applied for and obtained another charter (31st July, 1637) from King Charles I., giving them extended powers of jurisdiction to all persons exercising the trade, and living within two miles of the city: and 'they for 'many years exercised the powers so granted to them, to 'the great advantage of all persons residing in or near the 'said city;' and thus the Company remained incorporated, and acting under the authority of their charters.

"Among the numerous orders made by the Company under the charter of Charles I., and approved by the lord keeper and judges—is one for raising a tax from every butcher towards the maintenance of the 'two Barrow-'houses,' situate on the Thames, belonging to the Company —to which by Act of Parliament they were bound to have all such garbage and offal of all beasts as were killed within the city carried; and it appears from the same order that the beadles of the Company had 'time out of 'mind' been accustomed to carry their offal to these houses in the night time. Many other orders were also made, by which the Company sought to put down forestalling, 'discommending other men's meat,' conspiring together of men not to sell meat under a certain price, and other practices, which orders must of necessity have been in many cases altogether neglected, and from the altered state of society have long since become obsolete.

"After the Fire of London the lane in which their old hall was situate became improved, and we are told that 'many faire houses were built therein;' but the Butchers' Company had found it necessary or expedient to remove their residence from Butcher Hall Lane to its present site,* the ground (formerly called 'Scalding Yard,' from their practice of scalding hogs there) having long been their property.

"I have shown that one of their markets was in Eastcheap, and hence the use to which this ground was applied. Frequent mention is made in old books of this. Maitland says, 'It was anciently called "Rother Lane" or "Red 'Road Lane," from such a sign there.' Stow says, 'It was 'afterwards called "Pudding Lane," because the butchers 'of Eastchepe had their scalding house for hogs there, 'and their puddings, with other filth of beasts, were voided 'down that way to their dung boats on the Thames.'

"It appears that the Company built their hall by subscription, and by loans raised on bonds or other securities. At a court held on 16th August 1688 a subscription list of the members of the Company was opened to pay off a balance of the cost due.

"Among the remarkable things of his time existing in Billingsgate Ward, Maitland mentions Butchers' Hall, in which he says are three handsome rooms finely adorned with fretwork and wainscot, viz., an upper and lower hall and a parlour.

"About this time I find the following entry in the Company's minutes of the name of one very familiar to all of us from our childhood, the author of 'Robinson 'Crusoe,' who was the son of a butcher living in Fore Street:—

"'12th January 1687. At this court Daniel ffoe, son of James Foe, a member of this Company, came desiring to be admitted a member by virtue of his father's freedom, which was granted; and he further desired to pay a fine to this Company, and be discharged from all offices, which was also granted—he paying 10*l.* 15*s.* fine for that purpose.

"'5th March 1687. A great commotion in the city by the interference of the King (James II.) with the rights and privileges of the city. An order from the Lord Mayor to the Company, consequent upon an order of the King in Council, directing certain members of the court and livery who had been removed from their office to be restored, and others displaced.

"'15th October 1688. The King (James II.) revokes the proceedings in quo warranto, and orders the various members to be replaced. He having restored the city charters on the news of William's intended landing, the Court of Common Council had met on the 7th October, and made an order to all the companies to the above effect.'

"The Company continued to act on their old powers until the year 1749, when difficulties occurred which resulted in the

* "At a court of the Clothworkers' Company in 1769, their estate in the county of Londonderry was let by public auction on lease of 61 years and three lives, for a premium of 28,000*l.*, and an annual rent of 600*l.* (Herbert's 'Livery Companies, vol. 2, page 648.)"

* "See page 2 10."

"CHARTER OF GEORGE II.

"The Company again applied to the Crown in the year 1749-50 for fresh powers, and the King George II., in the latter year granted them a new charter, which, however, is essentially to the same effect as the preceding one. The preamble of this charter recites, inter alia: 'And whereas 'the said body corporate and politick, for many years after 'the making the said letters patent, exercised the powers 'granted to them to the great advantage of all persons 'residing in or near the said city.'

"BAD MEAT.

"The Company had continued to exercise the powers of seizing and destroying unwholesome meat, as the following proceedings show:—

"In 1672, three cases are mentioned in which the Company appear to have seized 'casualty and unwholesome 'meat and carried the same before a magistrate, and in 'one case Mr. Justice Quarrile is stated to have ordered 'the same to be burnt as near to the house where it was 'seized as possible,' which appears to have been done; but, in 1764, I find in similar cases the meat seized was cut in pieces and thrown into the Thames.

"These and like proceedings from time to time taken by the court caused very large costs to be incurred, which induced the Company in 1774, Feb. 3, to present a petition to the Court of Aldermen, 'to pay their costs for seizing and 'destroying unwholesome meat, and for carrying on pro-'secutions for selling unwholesome and corrupt meat 'within the city of London and two miles thereof, as it is 'for the public service of the city; and as such prosecu-'tions are too great for the Company as a private body to 'support, and without a continuance of which there will 'be no end to such wicked and evil practices now daily 'carried on in the city of London, the liberties and 'suburbs thereof, to the great damage and prejudice of 'His Majesty's subjects, &c.'

"I do not find any note of how this petition was received, if the court presented the same. However, they seem to have discovered their want of more distinct legal powers to enforce their orders therein, as in 1776 they agreed, January 4, to present a petition to the House of Commons praying for leave to introduce a bill into Parliament to give them further powers to enforce payment of costs incurred from persons so offending. In the following year a bill was introduced to the House accordingly, but was negatived on its second reading, and the Company had to pay the parliamentary costs, amounting to nearly 100*l.*"

G.—The Commissioners are respectfully referred to the charters.

H.—There is vested in the Company by their charters a right of exercising control and superintendence over the trade or business of a butcher within the City of London and two miles thereof. And by 48 Geo. III. c. 71 (27th May 1808), commonly called the Flaying Act, the Company in concert with the Cordwainers' and Curriers' Companies was empowered to impose and recover fines from persons wilfully, negligently, or carelessly gashing hides or skins in the flaying thereof, and the surplus moneys after payment of expenses of carrying Act into execution were to be paid one-fourth to the master of the Butchers' Company to be applied to the use of the poor of the said Company as should be directed by the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said Company. The Act was repealed in 1824.

By the 18 & 19 Victoria, cap. 121 (the Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855), and the 26 & 27 Victoria, cap. 117 (the Nuisances Removal Act for England (Amendment) Act, 1863), the Commissioners of Sewers of the City of London are authorised to inspect and examine any animal, carcase, meat, or flesh exposed for sale, and, in case of same being diseased or unsound or unwholesome or unfit for the food of man, to seize it in order to have it dealt by a justice.

PART I.—I.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

I.—The following is a list of the charities which are under the management of the Company:—

1. The poor fund.
2. Miss Bayley's fund.

1. THE POOR FUND.

Founder.	Date.	Nature of Benefaction.
James Leverett -	1662	A small copyhold estate held of the manor of Lambeth. The rents are devoted to the relief of poor freemen and widows of freemen of the Company. The estate was enfranchised partly 15th December 1870 and remainder 24th April 1873 out of private funds of Company. The original value is unknown. The present value is 150*l.* a year. The funds have been strictly applied for each of last preceding 10 years to the relief of poor freemen of the Company and their widows.
The Flaying Act -	48 Geo. III. c. 71. (1808)	One-fourth of the fines recovered under the Act after payment of expenses of carrying Act into execution. The fund gradually grew. The sum now in the hands of the Company is 2,969*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* new 3 %. The income for each of the last preceding 10 years has been strictly applied to the use of the poor of the Company.

2. MISS BAYLEY'S FUND.

Founder.	Date.	Nature of Benefaction.
Ruth Bayley -	Will dated 23rd March 1839. Testatrix died 25th June 1840.	Residue of property, which consisted of 11,674*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.* originally invested in 12,935*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* reduced 3 % annuities, and 1,000*l.* 3 % consols, set aside to meet annuities under will. The residue was given to the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Worshipful Company of Butchers in trust for the benefit of the poor widows and freemen of the said worshipful Company for ever. "My wish is, that each "widow or freeman that may "hereafter partake of the same "may be allowed 15*l.* per annum "according to the discretion of "the said Worshipful Company "of Butchers." The income for each of the last preceding 10 years has been strictly applied to the relief of poor freemen of the the company and their widows.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present governing body of the Company is constituted of the master, 5 wardens, and 15 assistants. The constitution is according to the charter.

2. The only qualification in each case is to be a liveryman of the Company. The usual time of election is the first Monday in September in every year when the governing body is elected. In the case of the death of a member a special court is held to elect a liveryman in his place. The court nominate a liveryman to the livery, and the election is made or not by show of hands or poll if demanded.

3. The functions of the governing body are to admit to the freedom and livery of the Company and bind apprentices. To elect pensioners upon the charity funds, and pay the pensions. To manage the charity property and private property of the Company. The renter assistant receives the income of the Company and expends so much of it as he may be ordered, and is the treasurer of the Company. The providitor manages the food department, and the wine warden manages the cellar. The members of the governing body pay a fine of 40 guineas on admission thereto. They are not paid any salaries, amounts, or remuneration of any description in respect of their services.

4. The business which comes before the governing body is admission to the freedom and livery and binding of apprentices. The election of pensioners, applications for assistance, the management of the charity, and private property of the Company. Notice of the business to be transacted is contained in the notice convening the court.

The governing body meets as a rule on the first Thursday in each month, but occasionally special courts are called. The opinions of the members are taken by show of hands. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are recorded in a private minute book, but are not published or accessible to any members of the Company other than the governing body.

5. The charter of 10th October 23 Geo. II. provides that the master, wardens, and assistants shall be removable for malgovernment or any other reasonable cause by the master, wardens, and commonalty, but the method of such removal is not defined. As the election takes place annually the question of removal has not arisen.

6. The Company has byelaws dated 27th December 1752, sanctioned by the Lord Chancellor and the Lords Chief Justices of the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas. The following is the effect:—

1. The first Monday in September in every year to be called election day.
2. The livery in common hall to give their voices, votes, and lots who shall be master, wardens, and assistants for ensuing year.
3. Master, &c. to appear in court with livery gown and hood.
4. Master and wardens' oath.
5. Assistants' oath.
6. Election of renter assistant.
7. Renter assistant to give security, and to render his accounts as therein required.
8. Renter assistant to receive rents, &c.
9. Master, &c. to choose stewards.
10. To choose clerk.
11. To choose beadle.
12. Forfeit on master refusing to act.
13. Forfeit on wardens refusing to act.
14. Forfeit on assistants refusing to act.
15. Master's fine.
16. Warden's fine.
17. Assistant's fine.
18. Election of livery.
19. Livery not attending to forfeit.
20. Master, &c. dying.
21. Master to appoint deputy.
22. Master or deputy to have a casting vote.
23. No leases, &c. to pass under seal but by order of a majority.
24. Not to sell lands or lease for longer than 21 years.
25. Old master, &c. to account within 10 days.
26. Forfeit for abusing the Company.
27. Forfeit for ill-behaviour at the court.
28. Freemen to bind apprentices within six weeks.
29. Apprentices to be turned over by the clerk.
30. Apprentices to be bound to the real master.
31. Masters to bring apprentices to take up freedom.
32. Forfeit on apprentice neglecting to take up his freedom.
33. Freeman admission fee and oath.
34. Admission by redemption.
35. Non-inrolment.
36. Forfeit on hawkers of flesh.
37. Forfeit on killing mainlings.
38. Forfeit on combination to fix prices.
39. Forfeit on regrating.
40. Forfeit on cutting hydes.
41. Forfeit on killing calves under five weeks old.
42. Forfeit for selling ewe or wether for lamb.
43. Forfeit for selling flesh on Sunday.
44. Forfeit for driving or killing on Sunday.
45. Forfeit for buying of engrosser.
46. Forfeit for selling stinking victuals.
47. Forfeit for selling pork between 20th May and 24th August.
48. Master, &c. to inspect weights.
49. Master, &c. to view slaughterhouses.
50. All butchers to be entered as yeomanry.
51. Quarterage.
52. When courts to be held.
53. Forfeit on members not attending.
54. Not to come into court with apron, &c.
55. Forfeit for non-attendance when summoned.
56. Forfeit on refusal to pay assessments by the Company.
57. Forfeits to be to the use of the Company.
58. Monies received by master, &c. to be for Company's use and for defraying their costs.
59. Penalties recoverable by action in courts at Westminster.
60. Quakers', &c. affirmation.
61. Orders to be read four times a year.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company?—If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? State also (if the Company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the Company.

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

6. State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company. Has the Company in any, and what, cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the Company? Are there any, and how many, members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

1. The grades of membership of the Company are (1) freemen, (2) liverymen. No qualification is necessary for freedom, but only freemen can be admitted to the livery. The daughters of freemen of the Company born in wedlock after the father was made free are admitted to membership.

2. Freedom may be obtained by servitude, patrimony, redemption, and gift.

By servitude by being bound for seven years to a freeman and duly serving the time.

By patrimony by being the child of a freeman and born in wedlock after the father was made free.

By redemption by purchasing the freedom.

By gift by the vote of the master, wardens, and court of assistants.

The fees payable are:—

	£	s.	d.
Freedom by servitude - -	3	4	2
Patrimony - - -	3	4	2
Redemption - - -	9	17	6

3. By Act of Common Council, dated 20th June, 1754, it was provided, that every person carrying on the trade of a butcher and not being already free of the City should take upon himself the freedom of the Company, and that any person carrying on the trade and not being free of the Company should forfeit 5*l.* for every such offence, and that the forfeitures should be recovered by action of debt in the name of the Chamberlain of the City of London in the Lord Mayor's Court. The process for compelling persons carrying on the trade of a butcher to procure admission is not now enforced, and there is no process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission. Persons exercising a particular trade do not commonly become members of the Company, but the members of the Company are usually butchers, cattle or meat commission salesmen, or hide and skin salesmen, and the sons or other relations of persons who carry on or have carried on such trades. There are about 115 members of such trades at present members of the Company.

4. The Company is not aware that freemen are liable to disfranchisement.

5. The livery is unlimited in number; the qualification for election to the livery is possession of the freedom of the Company. The electors are the master, wardens, and assistants at a court. The elections take place as follows: A member of the court gives notice of his intention to move that a particular person be admitted to the livery of the Company. If the motion be carried in the affirmative the person attends at the next court and makes and subscribes a declaration in the terms of the ancient oath, and is clothed with the livery gown. The fee on election to the livery is 42*l.*

The Company is not aware that liverymen are liable to removal.

6. The number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years is three.

And the Company has not paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices.

7. The freedom of the City of London is not in any way a condition precedent or subsequent of membership of the Company, it is believed that the liverymen are all free of the City, but it is not known whether all the freemen of the Company are free of the City.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

(1.) The present number of freemen is 228.
(2.) The present number of the livery is 145.
(3.) There are not other members.

(4.) The number of admissions to the freedom by each mode during each of the last preceding 10 years is as follows:—

—	By Servitude.	Patrimony.	Redemption.	Gift.	Total.
1871	—	5	2	—	7
1872	—	1	4	—	5
1873	—	4	8	—	12
1874	1	6	2	—	9
1875	—	3	8	—	11
1876	—	2	6	—	8
1877	—	3	—	—	3
1878	—	2	2	1	5
1879	—	2	5	—	7
1880	—	3	7	—	10

(5.) The number of admissions to the livery during each of the last preceding 10 years is as follows. No calls to the livery have been made during the period:—

1871	2
1873	12
1874	6
1875	8
1877	0
1878	3
1879	6
1880	9

Return D.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company.
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member of the Company when he is made a member of the governing body, and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any, and what, trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1. There are no pecuniary advantages incident to the position of a member of the Company. And the freemen have no advantages whatever beyond being eligible, if in distressed circumstances, for election as pensioners upon the charities of the Company.

The liverymen, if free of the City, have the advantage of being entitled to vote at all elections of Members of Parliament for the City of London, and of the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain.

The master, wardens, and assistants have no advantages.

2. The Company has not for the preceding 10 years or at any time prior paid any fees to the members. It has on an annual average for that period paid pensions to the poor of the Company and their widows amounting to 675*l.*

3. The circumstances which constitute a claim to a pension are being a freeman or freewoman or widow of a freeman of the Company, and being aged and in distress, and unable to get a living; and with respect to a donation, being a freeman or freewoman or widow or child of a freeman, and being in distress. The number of present pensioners are:—

On the poor fund	18
On Miss Bayley's fund	31

The amount paid to each of the poor fund pensioners is 15*l.* per year, and that to each of Miss Bayley's pensioners is 15*l.* per year.

Each pensioner upon Miss Bayley's fund, who is a liveryman or widow of a liveryman, receives 5*l.* a year in addition out of the general funds of the Company.

The Company makes donations from time to time, but there are no donees receiving fixed sums at fixed periods.

The number of present pensioners who are members of the butchers' trade, or connected therewith, is 49.

4. (1.) The average standing of a member of the Company when he is made a member of the governing body is about 15 years upon the livery.

(2.) And the number of years on an average for which he remains on the governing body is about 20.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

A, B, and C.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A. The officers are the clerk and beadle.

The duties of the clerk are:—To personally attend every meeting of the court, livery, and committee, keep minutes of proceedings, and enter them in minute books. To prepare lists of the livery entitled to vote in elections of Members of Parliament for the City of London. To attend before the revising barrister in support of such lists. To administer the declaration in the terms of the ancient oath, and to discharge all secretarial duties in connection with the business of the Company.

The clerk's salary is 75*l.* a year. He has no other emoluments, and he is not a member of the Company.

The duties of the beadle are:—To summon the court, and every committee of it, and the livery when directed by the court, and personally to attend every meeting. To attend upon the revising barrister, and at the Guildhall upon all elections of Members of Parliament for the City, and of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs.

To prepare and post notices of elections of pensioners. To collect the quarterage. To report names of deceased liverymen, and generally to do all such things as the master or court directs.

The beadle's salary is 30*l.* a year, and he is entitled to a commission of 5*l.* per cent. upon the quarterage collected by him, and to the following fees, viz., 6*s.* 6*d.* for every liveryman admitted; 5*s.* 4*d.* for every freeman admitted; 2*s.* 6*d.* for every apprentice bound.

He is a freeman of the Company.

B. The Company has only one servant, who acts as housekeeper. Her duties are to look after the Company's hall and furniture. Her wages are 40*l.* a year, with coals, gas, and candles, and residence at the hall. She is not a member of the Company, but is the widow of a liveryman.

C. The officers and servant of the Company are appointed by the court.

PART IV.—EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL SOURCES OF INCOME, VALUE OF PROPERTY, ADMINISTRATION, AND EXPENDITURE.

RETURN A.—Landed property.

The landed property of the Company consists of the hall and two houses in Pudding Lane hereinafter referred to.

2. The Company has no estates let at rack rent besides the small freehold property (formerly copyhold) referred to in the answer to Return I., Part I., the legal estate in which is vested in the official trustee of charity lands, and the accounts relating to which are sent by the Company every year to the Charity Commissioners.

4. The Company has the following houses let at rack rent:—

No. 33, PUDDING LANE.

It has no garden or orchard. It is used as a grocer's, and is let to Messrs. Newman and Uphill, as quarterly tenants.

The rent reserved is 30*l.* a quarter.

The fixed deductions are: police, ward, consolidated, sewers, Board of Works, and water rates, and they are all paid by the Company and amount to about 24*l.* a year.

The poor rate valuation is l. gross estimated rental, and 75*l.* rateable value.

The present tenants are not members of the Company.

No. 35, PUDDING LANE.

It has no garden or orchard. It is used as business offices which are let to Messrs. Church and Son, Tatham and Co., and William Byford as quarterly tenants.

The gross rents reserved amount in the aggregate to 195*l.* a year.

The fixed deductions are police, ward, consolidated, sewers, Board of Works, and water rates, and they are paid by the Company and amount to about 50*l.* a year.

The poor rate valuation is l. gross estimated rental, and 125*l.* rateable value.

The present tenants are not members of the Company.

RETURN B.—Personal property.

B 1. A list of moneys invested in Government or other stocks, funds, shares, or securities, showing in each case—

a. The amount of stock, &c.
b. The description of the stock, &c.
c. The sources from whence the stock, &c. arises (i.e., a statement of the manner in which the Company became possessed of the moneys invested).
d. The name in which the stock, &c. is standing, whether that of the Company or some other person.
e. The account (if any) to which the stock, &c. belongs.
f. The net annual receipts.

B 1.—The Company has—

9,000*l.* 3*l.* % consols standing in the name of the Company.

11,633*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* India 4*l.* % standing in the name of the Company.

The Company received 1,000*l.* under the will of Peter Mellish, who died on the 19th day of December 1803.

The following is an extract from his will:—

"I give to the master, wardens, and Company of the Corporation of Butchers of the City of London the sum of 1,000*l.* to be applied by the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said corporation or their successors for the time being in and for the benefit of the said corporation."

And 11,666*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* consols, 5,000*l.* sterling, and 4,246*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.* sterling under the will of William Bayley, dated the 4th day of July 1846, and proved the 24th day of December 1851.

The following is an extract from the will:—

"And as to all the rest, residue, and remainder of my personal estate and effects, not hereinbefore disposed of, I give and bequeath the same unto the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the worshipful Company of Butchers of the City of London for the time being. In trust to apply the same, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce to arise therefrom, for the general purposes of the said Company."

These moneys are now represented by the 9,000*l.* consols, and 11,633*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* India 4 %.

The stock belongs to the Company's private account.

B 2. A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B 3. A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the Company or in their possession elsewhere.

B 2. The Company's accounts are made up to the first Monday in September in each year.

4. The Company has not during the last 10 years built or contributed to the building of any churches or chapels.

Part IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company does not do anything to subsidise or encourage education.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Company has no suggestions to make.

The Company respectfully intimates to the Royal Commissioners of the City of London Livery Companies Commission that the above answers are given in confidence, and not for publication.

The seal of the Butchers' Company was affixed (pursuant to a resolution of the court) on the 20th day of May 1881, in the presence of

JAMES KILLBY, Master.
ALBERT BANISTER, Warden.
WILLIAM COLLINGWOOD, Warden.
H. T. V. PHILPOTT, Clerk.

APPENDIX A.

The Company, at the time when the Municipal Commissioners reported, was very large. It contained 1,600 members, including women, all of whom were apparently butchers. No statement was made as to the landed estate of the Company, but the income arising from fees and fines was said to have varied during the past 20 years from 150*l.* to 450*l.*

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
February 15th, 1882.

Sir,

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Butchers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners; but at the same time to state that that information is not, in their judgment, sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Butchers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

The Clerk of
The Worshipful Company of Butchers.

Schedule.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with regard to the following point:—

Part IV. Circular, August 14th, 1880.
The return contains no detailed statement of the expenditure of the Company.

Butchers' Hall, Eastcheap,
6th March 1882.

Sir,

I have been instructed by the Court of the Worshipful Company of Butchers to inform you respectfully that they feel themselves legally bound not to give any answers to the questions as to the expenditure of the Company's own funds.

I am, &c.
H. J. V. Philpott,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
Secretary,
City of London
Livery Companies' Commission.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
June 20th, 1882.

Sir,

Notwithstanding your letter of the 6th March, the Commissioners venture to hope that the Court of the Worshipful Company of Butchers will so far assist the Commissioners as themselves to state (1) what was the total amount of the corporate income of the Company for the financial year ending September 1879; (2) what was the total amount of the trust income of the Company for the same period?

The Commissioners acknowledge that both points are dealt with in the Company's return; but they would be much obliged to the Court and to yourself for a definite statement.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

H. J. V. Philpott, Esq.,
Butchers' Hall.

2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
Butchers' Hall, Eastcheap,
July 8th, 1882.

Sir,

Referring to your letter of the 20th June last, I have been instructed to inform you (1) that the total amount of the corporate income of the Company for the financial year ending September 1879 was 1,389*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*; (2) that the total amount of the trust income of the Company for the same period was 632*l.* 4*s.*

I am, &c.
H. J. V. Philpott.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
Secretary,
City of London
Livery Companies' Commission.

CARMEN'S COMPANY.

City of London Livery Companies'
Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
15th February 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners desire me to request you to draw the attention of the Court of the Worshipful Company of Carmen to the fact that, though about a year and a half has now elapsed since the date at which the Commissioners requested the Court to furnish them with information, the Commissioners have not as yet had the honour to receive any information from the Court.

The Commissioners desire me to add that they regret this delay, and that they must beg that they may be informed definitely within a month from this date whether the Court of the Carmen's Company intends to send in returns, and at what date the Commissioners may expect to receive them.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk to
The Worshipful Company of Carmen.

To this letter no answer was returned.

CARPENTERS' COMPANY.

The returns were accompanied with the following protest:—

The Carpenters' Company, in rendering to the Royal Commissioners the information requested in their communication of the 14th August last, desire, with all respect, formally to enter their protest against the unconstitutional and inquisitorial enquiries made by them regarding that part of their property which is not subject to any charitable or public trust.

They therefore consider it their duty, most distinctly to state, that their readiness to answer these enquiries, is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission of the right of the Crown or any other jurisdiction to insist on such information, or in any way to deal with the property of the company.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to the "objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—A brotherhood or guild of carpenters is believed to have existed in London about 1350, but under what circumstances we have no information. The first charter to the present company was granted in 1477, 17th Edward IV.

B.—Edward IV., by charter (dated 7th July 1477), granted to certain freemen of the mystery of carpentry of the City of London, that they or any of them might establish a brotherhood or guild within the city to remain for ever, to consist of one master, three wardens, and commonalty of freemen of the mystery of carpentry abiding in the City of London, and the suburbs and precincts of the same, and of the brethren and sisters of the freemen of the said mystery, and of all others who of their devotion will be of the same brotherhood or guild; and that the same master, wardens, and commonalty should be one body and one commonalty, incorporated by the name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery of Freemen of the Carpentry of the City of London.

And further, that the said commonalty, that is to say, the freemen of the mystery, might, whensoever they would, choose and make of themselves, according to the ordinance by them to be made, one master and three wardens, to transact the business of the mystery, brotherhood, and guild, and to oversee, rule, and govern the same, and all persons appertaining to the mystery within the City of London; and the wardens and commonalty were authorised to make ordinances for the good rule and government of the same mystery.

This charter was exemplified, ratified, and confirmed by Philip and Mary (a Charter of Inspeximus), and also by Elizabeth; the latter exemplification being dated 8th November, 2nd Elizabeth.

James I., by charter (dated 15th July, 5 James I.), granted to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the mystery of freemen of the carpentry of the City of London, that they should exercise the powers of search, correction, and government of all the freemen of the art or mystery of Carpenters of the City, or using or exercising the said art or mystery within the said City or the suburbs of the same, or within two miles thereof, together with powers for the inspection of timber, and regulation of matters relating to the trade.

Charles I., by charter (dated 17th July, 16 Charles I.), reciting the preceding charters, and that various frauds and deceptions were practised in the trade, granted to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the company, that the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, to the number of 12 or more, of which the master and wardens for the time being to be four, being met together upon summons to be made for that purpose, should have full power and authority to appoint, constitute, and make ordinances, decrees, and constitutions in writing for the good rule and government of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the mystery, and of all other persons being free of the art or mystery, or using the same art or mystery within the City of London, or liberties of the same, and for declaring in what manner the master, wardens, and commonalty, and all such persons as aforesaid, should behave themselves, and use the occupation of the said art or mystery.

Charles II., by charter (dated 20th October, 26 Charles II.), reciting and confirming the preceding charters, granted, upon the humble petition of the master and wardens of the company, the oversight and government of all and singular persons, whether freemen of the said mystery, or using or occupying the same within the City of London, or within four miles of the same, together with very extensive powers and privileges for exercising the oversight, search, and measurement of all and all manner of timber, timber stuff, and materials, and the works and workmanship thereto within the before-mentioned limits.

These powers had been already restricted by Act of Parliament, 1666; for, besides a renewal of the prohibition of timber buildings, backed by such a convincing argument as the Great Fire afforded of its necessity, the City were to appoint surveyors to inspect the buildings; whereas all buildings, at least as far as concerned the timber used in their construction, had previously been under the surveillance of the Carpenters' Company.

James II., by charter (dated 19th March, 2 James II.), granted to the Carpenters' Company upon the surrender of all their powers of nominating and electing the masters, keepers, or wardens, and assistants, and clerk of the company.

It re-incorporated them by the name of Masters, Keepers, and Wardens and Commonalty of the Freemen of the Mystery or Art of Carpentry of the City of London. One master and four wardens were appointed to hold office until the second Tuesday in the month of August then next, and from thence until others should be elected, pursuant to the power therein contained. And it also granted that they should have 22 assistants, named and appointed to continue in office during their natural lives, or until removed for lawful cause. And it is declared that whensoever any masters, keepers, wardens, or assistants should die or be removed from office, that then and in such case another fit person or persons should be elected and chosen into or to the place or places of the person or persons so dying or being removed or displaced by such person and in such manner and form as thereinbefore were used in the company for the space of seven years then past.

The charter is entered in the books of the company, but with a memorandum of its having been revoked by the Statute 2 William and Mary.

C.—The Carpenters' Company have no list of trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company other than those before mentioned.

D.—In 1666 an Act of Parliament was passed ordering brick buildings in place of wood, and all carpenters, &c., not freemen of the City employed in the building were, for the space of seven years, to be allowed the liberty of working as freemen, and all who should so help for seven years were to enjoy the same liberty for their lives. In 1693 an Act of Common Council was passed by which all persons carrying on the trade of carpentry in the City of London were compelled to bind their apprentices to the Carpenters' Company.

E.—The company have no documents other than those above enumerated.

F.—In its origin the Carpenters' Company was a brotherhood or friendly society, and gradually became a trades guild for the protection of the trade, and by its charters had committed to it the overlooking of buildings in the City of London and suburbs in order to prevent bad workmanship and the use of bad materials. In the early part of the 17th century viewers were chosen from the Carpenters' Company for that purpose; but after the Fire of London, in 1666, it was supposed that a bricklayer would be a better judge of buildings then erected than a carpenter, and though others were afterwards appointed, the Building Act of 1774 removed the duties of the viewers to district surveyors, who now do the work originally entrusted to the Carpenters' Company, though as a friendly society or guild it still continues and exercises its functions, and fulfils the trusts committed to its charge.

G.—The company have a licence to hold property in mortmain, "dated the one and thirtyeth day of July, "in the two and thirtyeth year of the reign of Charles "the 2nd." The licence provides that all lands then held were to be considered the property of the company, and they were empowered to acquire land of the additional value of 200*l.* per annum. These powers have not been exceeded.

H.—The company possesses no right of exercising superintendence over, nor has any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any art, trade, or business. As stated in Return F., the Act of 1774 invested all supervision and control of buildings in the City of London and its suburbs in the hands of district surveyors, and deprived the company of all control it formerly enjoyed in such matters.

PART I.—CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. Thomas Gittins, citizen and carpenter, by his Will dated 30th July 1587, left two messuages, five cottages, and one garden in London Wall to the Carpenters' Company, on condition that they should annually pay to three poor freemen of the company 3*s.* 8*d.* each, which condition has been always complied with. Part of this land has now been thrown into the public roadway.

2. Richard Wyatt, three times Master of the company, by his Will dated 12th March 1618, left a small house, with slip of garden, at Henley-on-Thames, to the Carpenters' Company, they giving annually to 13 poor widows of freemen of the company 10*s.* each and a dinner. The house then let at 7*l.* per annum, but has been recently let at 40*l.* The 10*s.* and 1*s.* for dinner are given annually at Christmas.

3. John Day, citizen and carpenter, by his Will dated 27th February 1629, left one messuage in the parish of St. Botolph, Without Bishopsgate, let on a ground rent of 6*l.* per annum to the Carpenters' Company on condition that they pay annually to 10 poor widows of the company 10*s.* each, and expend 20*s.* on a dinner. This property has been sold, and out of the proceeds 200*l.* have been invested in 3*l.* per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, yielding 6*l.* per annum, and is given 10*s.* to 10 poor widows and 2*s.* each in lieu of dinner.

4. John Read, citizen and carpenter, by his Will dated 31st March 1651, left to the Carpenters' Company all his messuages in Naked Boy Alley, Bermondsey Street, in the parish of St. Olave's, Southwark, they disposing of the rents as follows:—

Ten pounds yearly to his brother for life.

To 10 poor freemen of the company or their widows, 10*s.* each yearly and their dinners.

Five pounds yearly to the master, wardens, and assistants to buy gloves.

Fourteen shillings to the clerk, 6*s.* to the beadle annually.

Four pounds to a poor Cambridge scholar.

After decease of brother, 9*l.* to the churchwardens of Penton yearly.

Out of the proceeds of the sale of the above property land was purchased at Stratford. With the exception of the gloves, which have not been given for many years, the above payments are made, but the Cambridge Exhibition has been increased from time to time, and is now 25*l.* a year, tenable for three years.

5. William Pope, citizen and carpenter, by his Will about 1678, charged certain tenements in Coleman Street, with the yearly payment of 3*l.* 10*s.*, to be distributed by 10*s*, each to seven poor members of the company or their widows.

This property was sold, and 116*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* New 3 per Cents. purchased with the proceeds of sale, and payment of the trust made with the dividends.

6. Samuel Burgin (master of the company), in 1736 gave 100*l.* for the poor of the company, and at the same time Colonel John Williams (warden of the company) gave 60*l.* for the use of the poor. These sums are invested in 213*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* New 3 per Cents., and the dividend, 6*l.* 8*s.* per annum, is divided among 16 poor freemen or their widows.

7. William Reynolds, citizen and carpenter, 9th August 1768, gave the company 300*l.* 3 per Cent. South Sea Annuities, now invested in 300*l.* New 3 per Cents., to give nine poor freemen 1*l.* a year each, which payment is always made.

8. Edward Fennor, citizen and carpenter, by his Will dated 29th September 1603, gave a messuage in Bishopsgate Street, after certain life estates, to the minister and churchwardens of the parish church of St. Helen's, and the master and wardens of the Carpenters' Company, to divide the rent in two equal parts, one half for the poor of the parish of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, and the other amongst the poor of the Company of Carpenters. The original rent was 34*l.* The house is now let on lease at 200*l.* per annum, and the Carpenters' Company expend the half, 100*l.*, in paying their pensioners. The remaining half is received by the parish of St. Helen's.

9. Three messuages in or near the Great Almonry, Westminster, were left in trust, first to pay to the master and wardens and commonalty of the Carpenters' Company 145*l.*, which they had laid out in repairs of the said houses, and then to employ the residue of profits for the use of the poor of the company. The property was sold, and about 2 roods 4 perches of land at Stratford were bought, the company charging themselves annually with 26*l.* 4*s.*, which is more than they receive, but which is added to the pension list money.

10. William Higgins, citizen and carpenter, by his Will dated 8th March 1801, bequeathed 100*l.* 5 per Cent. Navy Annuities, now invested in 105*l.* New 3 per Cents., the dividend of which, 3*l.* 3*s.*, forms part of the general charity fund of the company, and is annually distributed.

11. Ann Bowyer, a gift of 2*l.* 10*s.*, paid annually, to the churchwardens of All Hallows, London Wall.

12. Thomas Warham, citizen and carpenter, by his Will dated 15th November 1477, left a charge upon an estate in Lime Street of 10*s.* each, payable yearly to the parishes of St. Dionis Backchurch and St. Andrew Undershaft.

13. Twickenham Almshouses, erected and chiefly endowed by the voluntary subscriptions of members of the Carpenters' Company in 1840 on land purchased by the company for the benefit of decayed liverymen or freemen, or their widows. Ten are in residence, receiving 12*s.* per week each, with coals and medical attendance. The yearly expense borne by the company is about 500*l.*, as reported to Charity Commissioners.

14. Richard Wyatt, three times master of the company, by his Will dated 12th March 1618, devised in trust to the Carpenters' Company 10 almshouses at Godalming, in the county of Surrey, for poor men of that and some neighbouring parishes. The revenue to be derived from the rent of a farm at Shackelford, then let at 70*l.* per annum, now let for 160*l.* This, with other gifts, amounts to 182*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* yearly income, but the annual expenditure on this charity exceeds the income, and the balance owing to the company at Christmas, 1880, was 321*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* Full returns sent to the Charity Commissioners.

NORTON FOLGATE ESTATE.

15. 4,420*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* 3 per Cent. Reduced, purchased with 4,023*l.* received from the North London Railway for property in Norton Folgate. The dividend is 129*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*

4,301*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* 3 per Cent. Bank Annuities, purchased with 4,000*l.* received from the same for other property in Worship Street, Norton Folgate. The dividend is 126*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

8,556*l.* 3*s.* New 3 per Cent., purchased with 8,000*l.* received from the Great Eastern Railway for other property in Norton Folgate and Worship Street. The dividend is 251*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

5,806*l.* 9*s.* 1*d.* 3 per Cent., purchased with 5,400*l.* received from the same for premises in Norton Folgate. The dividend is 170*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*

2,013*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* 3 per Cent. Reduced, purchased with 1,850*l.* received from London and North-Western Railway for other property in Worship Street, Norton Folgate. The dividend is 59*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.*

All the property included in the Norton Folgate Estate was left in the 17th century to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Carpenters' Company in consideration of a payment of 660*l.* out of the general funds of the company in trust that the net rents be expended for the relief of the poor of the company, and the dividends are returned to the Charity Commissioners as part of the general charity funds of the company. Prior to the aforesaid sales the rents amounted to 489*l.* 1*s.* per annum.

16. Mrs. Buhl, widow of John Frederick Buhl, citizen and carpenter, by Will in 1845 left 500*l.* for the poor of the company, with which was purchased 511*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* 3 per Cent. Reduced, yielding 15*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* yearly, and included in the general charity funds of the company.

ROBINSON'S CHARITY.

17. The Carpenters' Company in 1634, in consideration of 500*l.* paid by them, acquired a messuage in Crutched Friars subject to the annual payment to the churchwardens of the parish of St. Helen's of 5*l.* 4*s.*, which payment has always been made.

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and, if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen, or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body of the Carpenters' Company consists of a master, three wardens, and court of assistants, all of whom have served previously the office of master or warden in accordance with the charters, and according to byelaws and ordinances approved by the lord treasurer and justices of either bench on the petition of the master and wardens.

2. The master and wardens are elected by the livery of the company annually on the second Tuesday in August, having been first nominated by the court. The qualifications are, that those nominated must be liverymen of reputable character, and have always paid 20*s.* in the pound to their creditors. In almost every case, if otherwise eligible, the senior warden is elected to be master, the middle or renter warden becomes senior warden, the junior warden becomes middle warden, and the senior liveryman, if eligible, is elected to the office of junior warden.

3. The master presides at all the meetings of the court, and pronounces their decision on all matters which are brought before them and on which a vote is taken. The wardens assist the master in the general business of the company, all of them attending to pay the pensioners. The two junior wardens also attend to receive the rents quarterly, check the vouchers of expenditure, visit the almshouses, and make due inquiries about applicants for relief and for admission to the freedom and livery of the company. No fine is taken on admission to the court; the members are paid no salary, but receive fees for attendance. The master and wardens receive no extra fees for their services, but are only paid the same as the other members of the court.

4. The ordinary business of the court is attending to bind apprentices, admit to the freedom and the livery, to order pensions or relief to poor members or their widows, to discuss all questions as to the letting and management of the property, and to give such orders as may be necessary for the management of the charities committed to their care. They also view the estates periodically, and annually visit the almshouses, both at Twickenham and Godalming, for which attendances no fees are given.

The court meets on the first Tuesday in every month, except September, and at such other times specially as may be necessary from press of business. The votes of the members are taken by show of hands, and minutes of the proceedings are taken and kept by the clerk, which are read at the succeeding court, and are always accessible to ny member of the court.

5. In one of the ordinances, signed by the Lord Chancellor and others, power is given to the master and wardens to expel from the fellowship, but no case of suspension or removal is recorded as having taken place for the last 80 years.

6. There are no byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law, but all orders are made by the governing body, who have full powers to regulate, in all respects, the affairs of the company.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company. Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition precedent or subsequent of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the City of London?

1. There are two classes of members, viz., liverymen and freemen. Females are entitled to the freedom either as widows or daughters of freemen.

2. The freedom may be obtained by patrimony, by servitude, or by redemption. In the two former cases the fee to be paid is 3*l.*, the stamp duty being 1*l.* If admitted by redemption the fee is 15*l.* 15*s.*, the stamp duty being 3*l.* In this latter case a form of application has to be filled up, signed by two householders; inquiries are made by the wardens. The candidate must be proposed by a member of the court and balloted for, and a majority of two-thirds is necessary for election.

3. The company have no power to compel persons using the art or mystery of carpentry in the City of London and suburbs to become free of the company. Anyone entitled, either by patrimony or servitude, can claim the freedom. There are, and always have been, members of the company who are carpenters, and many others indirectly connected with the trade. At the present time the number would be probably nearly one-fourth of the members.

4. There is no rule or process at present in existence for the disfranchisement of freemen.

5. The number of the livery is limited to 150 by an order of the court of assistants. All applicants for the livery have to get a form signed by two householders, similar to that for the freedom. If the warden is satisfied as to the respectability of the candidate, he is proposed by a member of the court and balloted for. The election rests with the master, wardens, and court of assistants, and a majority of two-thirds is required. A liveryman may be removed for gross misconduct. If a liveryman fall into reduced circumstances and petition the court, his livery fine is returned, and he is struck off the list of the livery and becomes eligible for a pension. The fee for admission of a freeman to the livery by patrimony or servitude is 35*l.*, and by redemption 52*l.* 10*s.*

6. In 1871 - - - 1 apprentice bound.
„ 1877 - - - 1 „
„ 1878 - - - 1 „
„ 1879 - - - 1 „
„ 1880 - - - 1 „

No premiums are paid by the company.

7. The freedom of the City of London is not a condition precedent to becoming a freeman of the company, but all freemen of the company must be free of the City of London before they can become liverymen.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. There are no means of estimating the number of freemen; possibly from 150 to 200.
2. The present number of liverymen is 134.
3. No other members.

The following table will show the admissions to the company:—

Year.	Liverymen.	Freemen.			Total Number of Freemen.
		Patrimony.	Servitude.	Redemption.
1871	5	3	—	2	5
1872	5	2	—	4	6
1873	2	—	—	2	2

1877	12	6	—	10	16
1878	6	2	—	6	8
1879	3	1	1	1	3
1880	13	4	—	9	13

RETURN D.—Profits and privileges.

1. State, with fulness, what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company.

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member of the company when he is made a member of the governing body, and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1. In the event of a freeman or his widow or children falling into necessitous circumstances, and applying for assistance, the case is considered and enquired into, and if found deserving, the freeman or his widow is granted 14*l.* per annum, or (if both be dead) his children 10*l.* each per annum. They are also eligible for admission into the almshouses at Twickenham.

A liveryman is usually invited to be present at three entertainments given by the court during the year. If a liveryman fall into necessitous circumstances, his livery fine is returned, and he, or (in case of his death) his widow, would be placed on the pension list at 40*l.* per annum, or his children, if necessitous, at 20*l.* per annum each.

The master, wardens, and court of assistants have a fee of three guineas for attendance at the business courts, which usually occupy three to four hours. A fee of one guinea is given for attendance on any special committee, and the warden, on his monthly visits to the almshouses, receives 8*s.* for his expenses, but no fee for his services.

2. The average amount for the last 10 years paid to the court in fees for managing the affairs of the company has been 807*l.*

3. The court must be satisfied that the applicants' circumstances are such that the pensions granted to them are of great assistance. The present number of pensioners and donees is 52, exclusive of the Godalming almsfolk.

Members, when elected on the court, have ordinarily been members of the company about 33 or 34 years.

They are elected for life, and the average number of years that they remain on the court is 17.

The company does not and never has, from its foundation, carried on any trade or manufacture, and was not founded for that purpose.

PART III.

OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—A clerk who is a liveryman. His duties are as follows:—To attend daily at the hall, and be present at all courts and committees, and take minutes of their proceedings, and enter them fairly in books kept for the purpose; to assist in all admissions to the livery and freedom, and binding of apprentices, and to enter all such admissions in the proper books; to make arrangements for and attend with the master and wardens at their annual visits to the estates, to the almshouses at Twickenham and Godalming, and to assist generally in the management of the almshouses; to receive the rents from the various tenants, giving receipts signed by the wardens and countersigned by himself; to keep a rent book, cash book, and petty cash book, also a duplicate bankers' book, such books to be made up and presented to the court at their monthly meetings; to prepare in detail the annual accounts of the charity estates of the company, and furnish same to the Charity Commissioners every year; to countersign all cheques on the company's bankers as vouching for their correctness; to prepare the quarterly lists of the pensioners; and to attend the middle and junior wardens on the days appointed for the payments; and to be ready to assist in all the general business of the company, which fully occupies his time. Salary, 500*l.* per annum and no fees.

A solicitor who is a liveryman receives no salary, but is paid the usual professional charges for work done. He attends all courts to advise them professionally on their proceedings, and to receive instructions, and his fee for each attendance is two guineas.

An architect and surveyor, also a liveryman, who is paid in the same manner as the solicitor. His duties are to look after the development of the estates, the making of roads, and keeping the properties in repair, and to attend the court on their view days of the estates.

B.—A beadle, a freeman of the company, who resides at the hall as caretaker, and is found in gas, coals, &c. His duties are to assist the clerk in sending out summonses for all meetings, and to be in attendance at all courts and committees. His salary is 105*l.* per annum, and fees about 10*l.*

A housekeeper, also living in the hall, with gas, coals, &c., with a salary of 50*l.* a year, whose duty it is to see to the rooms being kept clean, and to take charge of all the furniture, &c.

A hall porter, who receives 21*s.* per week, and—

A female servant, who receives 10*s.* per week.

The present establishment is found not to be sufficient for the requirements of the hall, and will have to be materially increased.

C.—The clerk, solicitor, architect, and beadle are elected by the court annually at their first meeting in the year.

RETURN F. (1).—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease from year to year of the company's income during the last 10 years; and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F. (2).—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F. 2.—If the estates in London Wall, Lime Street, and Stratford, which the company have developed at a very considerable cost, let well, there is every reason to suppose that during the next 10 years there will be an increase of rental which will enable the company to reduce their liabilities.

The principal estates of the company being let on long leases there is no probability of any change till the expiration of those leases, but the company cannot venture to say to what extent that change will be.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any and which of the members of the company?

1. There is an estates committee before whom the surveyor brings forward all details respecting the estates. These are considered, and the question is brought before the whole court, the surveyor being present, and the court determines as to the letting or laying out the estates.

2. The wardens attend every quarter to receive the rents, and the receipts are signed by two of them and countersigned by the clerk. Payments are made by order of the court, the bills having been checked by the clerk and audited by two members of the court. All cheques are signed by the master and one warden and countersigned by the clerk. The wardens attend also periodically to check all receipts and payments as shown by the clerk in the company's books. No fees are paid to the wardens for such attendances.

3. A professional auditor audits the whole of the accounts, and there is a special meeting of the court in January of each year to receive the report of the auditor.

4. The company's accounts are not published, but are at all times accessible to members of the court.

RETURN H.*—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years; a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years; and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of such 10 years.

RETURN K.—Position in relation to Universities.—Has the company any relation with the universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The company has one exhibition to Cambridge of 4*l.* per annum under the will of John Read, for a poor resident scholar, tenable for three years. In November 1858 this was increased by order of the court to 10*l.* per annum, and again in June 1872 to 25*l.* per annum. When a vacancy occurs public notice is given, and each case is taken entirely on its merits, no favour being shown. The present recipient elected last year was recommended by the Right Hon. H. Fawcett, M.P.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company engaged to contribute annually 150*l.* per annum to the City Guilds Association for promoting technical education, which they have since increased to 250*l.* They have also given several grants of 20 guineas to the Artisans' Institute in St. Martin's Lane.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropria- "tion or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The officers of the company are not prepared to suggest any measures for improving or altering the constitution of the company.

The necessitous members of the company, their widows and children, have been and are duly assisted and provided for, in conformity with one of the main objects for which the guild was originally established.

Every member of the court devotes much time and attention to the duties involved, and great advantage has been secured in the management of the estates and buildings from the fact of members of the court being connected with the building trade and the legal and architectural professions.

They respectfully beg to state that, having full power to make whatever alterations may be thought advisable in the interests of the company and to the advantage of technical education, they have made, and will continue to make, such improvements in the appropriation and administration of the funds of the company as may appear to them from time to time to be desirable.

APPENDIX A.

This company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834. Some account of their property at this date is given under Part IV.—Return H.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
16th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the circular sent by the Commissioners to the Worshipful Company of Carpenters, dated the 15th February, I am directed respectfully to request the Court of the Company to oblige the Commissioners by giving them answers to the following questions:—

1. What is the rateable value of the Company's almshouses, those at Twickenham and Godalming respectively, and what is that of any other buildings (if there are any such) similarly in the occupation of the Company, exclusive of the Company's hall?

2. In the statement of income and expenditure for 10 years, with which the Company has favoured the Commissioners, is the Company's trust income to any and what extent included?

3. The trust income of the Company for the year 1880 appears to have been 939*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*, arising as follows; viz., from rents 126*l.* 4*s.* 0*d.*; from dividends (some of which represent the price of lands sold) 755*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*; from charges on the general income of the Company 57*l.* 16*s.* 0*d.* The Commissioners will be glad to know if these figures are correct.

4. The total rental of the Carpenters' Company according to the tables furnished by the Company appears to exceed 11,000*l.* per annum. The amount given in the statement of income for 1880 is 9,365*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* Will you kindly explain this apparent discrepancy?

The Commissioners will be greatly obliged to the Court and to yourself for replies to these four questions.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

S. W. Preston, Esq.,
Clerk to the Carpenters' Company.

Carpenters' Hall,
London Wall, E.C.,
9th October 1882.

Sir,

I now beg to forward you answers to four questions contained in your communication of 16th July last.

I am, &c.
Stanton Wm. Preston.

H. D. Warr, Esq.

1. The almshouses at Twickenham and Godalming are not rated at all, and the Carpenters' Company have no other property similarly in their occupation.

2. The statement of income and expenditure includes the trust property, full particulars of which appear in the returns.

4. The difference arises from the fact that no rent was received from two of the tenants in the London Wall estate in the year 1880, the first year being a peppercorn. The amount of rent would be 1,718*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

CLOCKMAKERS' COMPANY.

The returns sent by the Clockmakers' Company to the Commissioners were accompanied with the following letter :—

"This company begs to state that it claims its corporate property as absolutely its own, and not subject to any trust whatever.

"This company makes this return, so far as regards such corporate body, voluntarily, and contends that the Crown has no legal right to interfere in any way with the manner in which the company chooses to dispose of it.

"This company claims to have all questions having reference to its right to its corporate property tried and decided by the Courts of Law as established in this country, and by no other authority whatsoever."

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The company was incorporated by charter of King Charles I., dated 22nd August, in the seventh year of his reign (A.D. 1631.)

B.—The company possess the original charter of King Charles I. before mentioned. By it all persons using the art or mystery of clockmaking, freemen of London, or otherwise, within the City, its liberties or suburbs, or within 10 miles thereof, are incorporated by the name of the Master, Wardens, and Fellowship of the Art or Mystery of Clockmaking of the City of London, with power to make byelaws for the government of its own members and the regulation of the art, for the punishment of deceits and offences, to seek for, examine, and destroy faulty and deceitful work of clock and watchmakers or mathematical instrument makers within the same limits.

C.—Nil.

D.—Act of Common Council of the 15th October 1765, grounded on the charter, and also pursuant to the charter, so far as the compulsory clauses therein are legal and effectual, whereby all persons exercising the art or mystery of clockmaking within the City of London, or its liberties, are required to take up their freedom in the company, under a penalty of five pounds.

E.—Nil.

F.—Concise History.—The company have ever exerted their influence for the benefit of the craft with which they have maintained and still preserve a close and as they believe beneficial connection, and although in deference to the altered circumstances under which trade is now carried on they have ceased to exercise their compulsory powers, they have from time to time, when it has appeared desirable, or when appealed to, used their influence and prestige as a rallying point for the trade when it has been necessary to approach Parliament, or the Government, to protest against or explain objections to contemplated legislative enactments or imposts or other matters by which the industries with which they are identified have appeared to be prejudicially affected.

G.—The company have no special licence in mortmain, but by their charter are empowered to purchase manors, messuages, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, &c., in fee and perpetuity, or for terms of lives not held of the Crown in capite or by knight's service, and to sell and alienate the same. They have, however, neither lands nor tenements.

H.—Vide B.—The right of search and control has not been exercised for many years, and appears to have fallen gradually into desuetude.

PART I.—RETURN I.—CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

Founder's Name.	Date of Foundation.	Objects of Benefaction.	Endowments. Personalty. Stock.	Endowments. Personalty. Other Personalty.	Present Income.	Application of Income.	Remarks.
The charitier of the company, other than those specially mentioned below, are represented by a sum of 2,450*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.* Consols, producing net income of 73*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*, the following Bequests and Donations being therein included, viz.:—

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

A.

A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

A. 1.—The governing body consists, in accordance with the terms of the charter, of a master, three wardens, and 10 or more assistants, the present number of the latter being 12.

A. 2.—The governing body is composed of freemen who have been admitted to the livery. Freemen are eligible, but in practice liverymen only are chosen.

The master and wardens are elected from the court of assistants by show of hands annually on Michaelmas day, or, if it falls on a Sunday, on the day following. The assistants are similarly elected from time to time as vacancies are occasioned by death, resignation, or removal, the electors being the master, wardens, and remaining assistants.

A. 3.—The functions of the governing body comprise the general rule and government of the fellowship. The master or deputy master presides at the several courts; the wardens and assistants assist the master in deliberating on such business as may be brought before the court. The renter warden is the treasurer.

Every assistant pays on admission a fee or fine of 52*l.* 10*s.* A fee of 1*l.* is paid to the master, wardens, and each assistant attending at each of the ordinary courts of the company.

A. 4.—The usual business is the binding of apprentices, admitting to the freedom and livery, payment of pensions, &c., and the general regulation of the affairs of the fellowship. The court is convened by summons, on which the business to be transacted is stated. Four quarterly courts, of which every freeman has notice. An election court and an audit court are usually held. Other courts are held as occasion may require and the court or the master and wardens may appoint. The opinions of the members are usually taken by open voting unless otherwise determined.

The resolutions and decisions of the court are recorded in their journals, which are open to all the members of the court.

A. 5.—The master, wardens, or assistants are liable to removal for evil government or misbehaviour, or for any reasonable or just cause; the master, at the pleasure of the wardens and assistants, or the major part of them, whereof one of the wardens to be one; the wardens, at the pleasure of the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them; and the assistants, at the pleasure of the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens to be two.

A. 6.—The company's byelaws were made under the provisions of the Act of Parliament of the 19th Henry VII. and were ratified in accordance with that statute on the 11th August 1632 by the Lord Keeper, the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; and an additional byelaw was made and ratified on the 4th April 1796 by the Lord Chancellor and the two Lord Chief Justices above mentioned.

The effect of such byelaws is to regulate the fellowship, and all persons using, exercising, or trading in the art or mystery of clockmaking within the City of London and liberties thereof, and 10 miles compass of the said city, in all things concerning the said art, trade, or mystery, and to declare after what manner, order, and form the master, wardens, and fellowship, and all persons using the art, trade, or mystery, shall behave, demean, carry, and use themselves in their offices, mysteries, and work for the public good and common profit of the fellowship and the rest of the Queen's subjects, with power to levy fines to their own use and punish offenders.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

B. 1.—Must be of good character, not subject to any legal incapacity, and of the age of 21 years or upwards.

Grades are freemen, liverymen, assistants, wardens, and master.

Unmarried women have been admitted to membership.

B. 2.—The freedom may be obtained by patrimony, servitude, or redemption.

Patrimony.—By right of birth in lawful wedlock after the admission of the father to the freedom of the company.

Servitude.—By an apprenticeship of seven years to a member of the company.

Redemption.—By purchase or gift.

The fees payable on admission are:—

—	Company.	Clerk.	Government Stamp Duty.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Patrimony	5 8 0	0 5 0	1 0 0
Servitude	4 18 0	0 5 0	1 0 0
Redemption	16 15 0	0 5 0	3 0 0
Bonâ fide workmen or persons engaged in the trade or occupation of a clock or watch maker may be admitted by redemption with the sanction of the court at the reduced fee of	4 15 0	0 5 0	3 0 0

B. 3.—Vide Part I., Return D.—No steps are now taken to compel persons to take up the freedom of the company.

The freedom of the City of London is not necessarily a condition precedent or subsequent to admission to membership of the company, but in practice members are admitted to the freedom of the City immediately after their admission to the freedom of the company; only three freemen of the company are known not to be free of the City.

Persons connected with the various branches of the trades embraced within the art or mystery of clockmaking do frequeetly procure admission to membership of the company, nearly half of the existing members being or having been engaged in those trades.

B. 4.—Freemen are liable to disfranchisement by vote of the court, but no modern instances are known.

B. 5.—The livery is limited by orders of the Court of Aldermen of July 1766, 5th December 1786, 15th May 1810, and 11th April 1827, to 250.

Freemen of good character and respectability are upon their applications usually admitted to the livery, the court of the company being the electors. Elections are made and liverymen admitted in open court, the fee on admission being 21*l.*, as fixed by the Court of Aldermen.

Admission to the livery is not granted as a matter of right, it being discretionary with the court to grant or refuse.

Liverymen are liable to removal by vote of the court for just and reasonable cause, but no modern instances are known.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

C. 1.—Number of freemen not accurately known, probably about 100.

C. 2.—Number of liverymen, 73.

C. 3.—No other members.

D. 3.—No premiums were paid on either of the above apprenticeships.

Part II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the ompany to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or deal with?

E. 1.—The only pecuniary payments made to members of the company, except the charities to decayed members and widows of members, mentioned in Return I., Part I, are the fees paid to members of the court of assistants for attendances, as stated in Return A. 3, Part II. Membership of the company confers electoral rights, both as regards the parliamentary and municipal franchise within the City of London.

E. 2.—(1.) The average of the sums paid for attendances to members of the court during the past 10 years, as above mentioned, is 66*l.* 4*s.*

(2.) It is assumed that these questions relate only to the company's corporate income and not to its charities. The company have during the last 10 years contributed out of their own funds an average of 79*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* per annum in aid of their pensions from charitable sources, 20*l.* of this having been paid as pensions to necessitous unmarried daughters (upwards of 55 years of age) of deceased freemen of the company.

(3.) Other payments, none.

E. 3.—Vide Return E. 2, above.

E. 4.—The average standing of a member of the livery when elected on the court, as shown by the existing members, is 14 years; the mean average number of years the existing members have been on the court is 12 years.

E. 5.—The company do not carry on any trade.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The officers of the company are the clerk, who attends all meetings of the court and its committees, and acts as secretary and legal adviser, and takes turnovers out of court.

His salary is 50*l.* per annum, with fees of the average value of about 3*l.* per annum, on the admission of members to the freedom, livery, and court of assistants, and on the binding of apprentices. The clerk is a freeman of the company.

The beadle attends all meetings of the company and acts as messenger or attendant, delivers all summons for meetings of the court and its committees, and also gives notices of all courts for general business to all the freemen and liverymen of the company. He also attends to identify liverymen of the company coming to vote at municipal and parliamentary elections within the City of London.

His salary is 25*l.* per annum, with fees on admissions to the livery and court of assistants of the average value of 1*l.* per annum.

The beadle is a freeman of the company.

B.—There are no other officers or servants of the Company.

C.—The clerk and beadle are annually elected by the court of assistants.

E. 4. and 5. No other fines or fees have been received during the last ten years.

Part IV.—Return F.

Return F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

Return F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1.—This return is answered by the preceding as to the past, and the company have formed no expectations as to the future.

F. 2.—The company have no reason to anticipate any alteration in the income derived from their property other than such increase as may be occasioned by any additional investments they may be enabled to make.

Part IV.—Return G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

G. 1.—The company have no real estate; their income is derived from funded property, which is under the management of the court of assistants.

G. 2.—Receipts are taken and payments made by the renter warden by the direction and under the control of the court of assistants, to whom he gives security for the due performance of his duties.

G. 3 and 4.—The accounts are audited by the court, and are duly entered in the journals of the company, which, as before stated, are open to all the members of the court.

Part IV.—Return H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

Part IV.—Return M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

M.—The company have founded a library, to which additions are from time to time made by them, and also by the gift of their members, containing a collection of works upon the theory and practice of the art of clock and watch making, or connected with horology and general science. To this they have added a museum, which is similarly augmented from time to time, containing a collection of specimens, many of them unique, of watches and watch and clock work, for the purpose of illustrating the progress of the art of watch and clock making from its commencement.

The library and museum have, with the permission of the Corporation of the City of London, been deposited in their free library at Guildhall, under the care of the librarian of the Corporation, and are at all times open to the inspection of the public. A catalogue has been printed and issued to the members of the company, copies of which are also available for the use of the public in the Guildhall Library.

They also contribute annually to the funds of the British Horological Institute, which has been established for the purpose of affording technical instruction by lectures and otherwise to the watch and clock making trade. They have recently, with a view to encourage the highest excellence in the production of the marine chronometer, on which navigation so largely depends, established prizes to be awarded annually to the makers of the two chronometers standing first and second (as testified and certified by the Astronomer Royal) at the annual trials for Government purchase at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation "or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The officers of the company have no suggestions to make to the Commissioners for the appropriation of its revenues, which are the private property of the members, and which have been chiefly the result of investments made during the lifetime of existing members to purposes other than such as the members deem expedient and proper.

COACH AND COACH-HARNESS MAKERS' COMPANY.

The Company annexed to their returns a protest against the legality of the inquiry.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. TO H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A. The date of charter is 31st May, 29 Charles II., 1677, and is for the general protection and supervision of the trade of coachmakers and coach-harness makers.

B. None but the above-named charter.

C. There are none.

D. 12th July 1687, and 13th November 1694, grants of livery by the Lord Mayor for the time being.

E. There are none.

F. In the early days of the Company, the master, wardens, and assistants used to visit all the workshops within the prescribed limits of the Company's sphere of action, but that seems to have engendered bad feelings among the various members of the trade, and so gradually fell into desuetude, but in 1864 the Company granted the free use of the hall for the operative Coachmakers Industrial Exhibition, which was opened under the auspices of the Marquis of Lansdowne and the Very Reverend Dean Milman, D.D. From that time to the present the Company have continuously offered prizes to those connected with the trade, and the following is an epitome, showing what the Company has expended during the last seven years towards technology and charities.

G. The Company has, by the charter above referred to, namely, 31st May 1677, a license in mortmain to hold freehold property of any description not exceeding 300*l.* per annum besides their hall, and which license they did not exceed.

H. By the charter power is given to the master, wardens, and assistants, or any three or more of them. The master or one of the wardens always to be one having previously obtained the warrant of the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench to enter shops and to examine the coaches and harness, and to prosecute all offenders.

The jurisdiction of the Company seems to have extended to the cities of London and Westminster and the liberties thereof, and within 20 miles distance from the same. Formerly this jurisdiction seems to have been carried out, and the jurisdiction was divided into four walks, namely :— Middle Walk, Pickadilly Walk, Out Walk, and Low Land Walk, and to have been visited every quarter. Such control is not now exercised, it being now impossible to exercise same.

PART II.—A.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Return A. Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law or Chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body of the Company consists of the master, the senior warden, the renter warden, and the junior warden, and 23 assistants, as provided by the charter. Formerly there were stewards of the Company who had at their expense to provide breakfast and dinners to the court, and after a time no one would continue to undertake such office ; it has fallen into desuetude. In all other respects the constitution of the Company and the working thereof is according to the charter.

2. A member of the governing body must be of the livery. The election of the master and wardens takes place on the 1st September in every year, unless that is on a Sunday, then on the following day. The election of such officers is with the general court, and from the members of such court; in case of a vacancy in the court such vacancy is supplied by the election of a liveryman, who is usually a senior liveryman.

3. The functions of the governing body are the general management of the affairs of the Company, the renter warden alone receiving and paying all moneys and accounting therefor to the court. An assistant on election to the court has to pay a fee of 30*l.* 7*s.* 0*d.* and 10*s.* to the clerk. Each member of the court is paid 21*s.* if he attends a meeting of the court.

4. The general management of the affairs of the Company, complicated questions of detail, are submitted to the standing committee, consisting of members elected from the court, but they receive no fees for serving on committee. The method adopted is by the vote of the majority. The court meets eight times a year and on election day, namely, 1st September. The opinions of members are taken by show of hands. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are duly recorded in a book, which is not published, but is accessible to all the members of the court.

5. The members of the governing body are not liable to suspension or removal.

6. The Company has byelaws dated 17th July, 29 Charles II., 1677, approved by the then Lord Chancellor Finch, Earl Danby, Treasurer, and Sir Francis North, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and relate to the general management of the Company; such byelaws have been from time to time slightly varied, but in the main they now govern the management of the Company.

PART II.—B.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The qualification for membership of the Company, is good conduct only, and no one is allowed to enter the Company without being introduced by a member of the Company, and upon giving due notice to all members of the court. There are two grades of membership, freemen and liverymen. Women have never been admitted, but there seems to be nothing against admitting them.

2. The freedom may be obtained by patrimony, servitude, or redemption. In the two former cases the fee to be paid to the Company on taking up the freedom is

3*l.* 8*s.*; stamp 20*s.*, and clerk's fee 13*s.* 6*d*; and in the latter case the fee to be paid to the Company is 13*l.* 8*s.*; stamp 3*l.*, and clerk's fees 15*s.* 6*d.* To take up the livery in any case, beyond the above mentioned fees, there has to be paid to the Company 20*l.* 5*s.*, and clerk's fee 10*s.*

3. By the charter no one ought to carry on the trade of a coachmaker or coach-harness maker within the Cities of London and Westminster, and within the circuit of 20 miles, without being a member of the Company, and in early times it was sought to enforce the charter; and the result at first generally was that a person so carrying on trade did become a member of the Company, but ultimately the rights of the Company began to be resisted and having no funds for that purpose the Company did not seek to enforce their rights. Any coachmaker in England would, on application, and being elected, be allowed to take up his freedom and livery. The freedom of the City of London is not in any way a condition precedent. It is believed that all the members of the Company are free of the City of London. The coachmakers of London and some of those in the provinces do become members of the Company. There were on the 1st September 1881 126 members, out of whom 70 are or have been directly or indirectly connected with the trade of which the Company bears the name. The present master, renter warden, and junior warden are all master coachmakers.

4. No.

5. The livery of the Company is not limited in number; good character is the sole qualification, and due notice must be given to take up the livery. The applicant is proposed by a member of the court of assistants, and voted for. The election rests with the master, wardens, and court of assistants, and a majority is required. The fees payable on election to the livery amount to 20*l.* 5*s.*, and clerk's fee 10*s.*, as before stated. Liverymen are not liable to removal.

PART II.—C.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. and 2. The number of freemen on 1st September 1881 was 127, one of whom has not taken up his livery.
3. No other members.
4. and 5. The following tabular statement shows the admissions to the Company for the last 10 years :—

PART II.—D.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

1. The following tabular statement answers this inquiry :—

Year.		Year.
1871	None.	1876	Three apprentices bound.
1872	None.	1877	Two apprentices bound.
1873	None.	1878	Two apprentices bound.
1874	Three apprentices bound.	1879	Two apprentices bound.
1875	None.	1880	Two apprentices bound.

2. Six apprentices to members of the coach trade.
3. The Company has paid no fees or premiums.

PART II.—E.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Return E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the Company.
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. A freeman has now no other advantage.
2. A liveryman is eligible for election on the court of assistants, and if free of the City of London is entitled to its franchise if he resides within the prescribed radius.
3. The master, wardens, and each member of the court receive 21*s.* for each court they attend, but are fined 20*s.* each if absent on election day.

2. On an average 200 guineas per annum in court fees. Each court occupies about two hours.

3. Pensions 43*l.* per annum to two aged members and no other payments. Each case is judged on its own merits; at present there is only one pensioner, who receives 30*l.* per annum, and who has received same for the last 12 years. He was formerly a master coach builder.

4. It is impossible to give an answer to this question. The court consists of 27 members, and they are elected for life. No election can take place unless a vacancy occurs on the court.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

Return A.—A list of the Officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A. The clerk. His salary is 60 guineas per annum and fees, as before stated. He has to keep the books, and generally superintends the management of the Company under the direction of the court, attends all the courts and committee meetings, and to be at the hall once every week. The honorary chaplain and honorary architect receive no payment or emolument. All three are liverymen of the Company.

B. The beadle, at a salary of 47*l.* 13*s.* per annum, with residence, coals, gas, &c. He has to keep the hall clean and to look after the premises generally, and to summon and attend all courts and committee meetings.

C. Election by the court annually.

PART I.—RETURN I.—CHARITIES.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

There are no charities of any description under the management of the Company. But see list of voluntary donations by the Company for educational purposes and charities, under Part I., Return F.

Another voluntary subscription was raised in the year 1843 to furnish the hall, when 257*l.* 10*s.* was subscribed, as appears by another list of donors in the hall. In the year 1867 it was resolved to pull down the old hall and erect the present hall, and to let off the remaining land in Oat Lane at ground rents. Accordingly the hall and premises were built by the Company, and to enable them to do so they had to borrow 5,000*l.* on the security of their real property, and such sum is still owing by the Company.

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

Ever since the Company rebuilt their hall and let their land there has been no increase, but a slight decrease of their income, and there is no reason to anticipate either an increase or decrease of income from that source. The fluctuation of income arises from the number of members joining the livery from year to year.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

1. The property being all let on leases it is simply to collect the rents and to see that the property is kept in repair.
2. The renter warden has the sole control, under the direction of the court, of all receipts and payments. He first gives a bond with two sureties for the due performance of this office.
3. The Company's accounts are audited by three gentlemen annually appointed by the court for that purpose. The audit takes place within 14 days after 1st September (election day).
4. The Company's accounts are not published, but are accessible to all the members of the court.

PART IV.—RETURN H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART IV.—RETURN K.—POSITION IN RELATION TO UNIVERSITIES.

Return K.—Has the Company any relations with the universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company has no relationship with the universities or with any college.

PART IV.—RETURN M.—GENERAL AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

See Return, Part I.—F., and the following :—

Memoranda relating to the recent efforts made by this Company to stimulate skill and ingenuity among those engaged in the trade of coachmaking, and also to encourage technical education.

The Company granted the free use of the hall to the committee for carrying out the Operative Coachmakers' Industrial Exhibition, and which exhibition was opened 1st February 1865 by the Most Noble the Marquis of Lansdowne and the Rev. H. Milman, D.D., Dean of St. Paul's.

They also granted three medals, which were awarded to—

John Adcock, mechanician, 4, Marlborough Road, Dalston, Middlesex.

F. Humphreys, 10, Bell Street, Edgware Road, Middlesex, and

H. Pilbeam and J. Bassett } Coachsmith, 17, Brownlow Street, Middlesex. Viceman, 25, Brownlow St., Middlesex.

1867.

The Company made a grant of money to the Society of Arts in aid of examinations.

1868.

The Company made a grant of money to commence a library of reference for the use of coachmakers. Such library is now open, subject to the regulations mentioned at page 11.

1869, 1870.

The Company made grants of medals and money to the Society of Arts as before.

1871.

Two silver and two bronze medals were granted to the Science and Art Department, for freehand drawing and practical mechanics; and one of such bronze medals, viz. :—

For practical mechanics, was awarded to—

William Henry Lewis, coachbody maker's apprentice, aged 16, Sansome Walk, Worcester.

1872.

The Company voted similar medals as those of last year; and in addition voted two silver and two bronze medals, to be competed for by coachmakers' foremen, workmen, and apprentices, for drawings of carriages or parts of carriages to scale.

In the latter competition a silver medal was awarded to—

George Fleming Budd, coachbody maker, 3, Cumberland Street, Tything, Worcester.

And a bronze medal to—

William C. Bolt, coachbody maker, 18, Georgiana Street, Camden Town, London.

1873.

The Company voted the following prizes, for competition among persons engaged in the trade of coachmaking, viz. :—For freehand or mechanical drawing applicable to carriages, or parts of carriages, or the ornamentation thereof, first prize, the Company's silver medal and 3*l.*; second prize, the Company's bronze medal and 2*l.* For practical mechanics, first prize, the Company's silver medal; second prize, the Company's bronze medal. Each of such prizes to be accompanied with the certificate of the Company.

The awards to be made by the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. No award was made, there being no candidate of sufficient merit.

The Company, in addition, offered prizes to be awarded by judges, being members of the court, for drawings of carriages or parts of carriages to scale, for competition among foremen, workmen, or apprentices.

The judges awarded as follows :—

First prize, viz., the Company's silver medal and 3*l.* and certificate, to Mr. George Fleming Budd, coachbody maker, of No. 3, Cumberland Street, Tything, Worcester.

Second prize, viz., the Company's silver medal and 2*l.* and certificate, to Mr. James Brown, foreman, 18, Kingsmead Street, Bath.

Third prize, viz., the Company's bronze medal and certificate, with 1*l.* added by H. M. Holmes, Esq. (then master), to Mr. George Edward Holmes, foreman, London Road, Derby.

In addition to the above prizes the judges awarded the certificate of the Company to each of the following, viz.—

To Mr. John P. Lake, foreman, 1, Philip Street, Westminster.

The Company also offered the three following prizes, viz. :—3*l.*, 2*l.*, 1*l.* and their certificates, to foremen, clerks, workmen, and apprentices in the coachmaking trade in the United Kingdom, for the best reports on the International Exhibition of carriages at South Kensington.

Such prizes were awarded as follows, viz. :—

First prize to James Brown, foreman, aged 42, 18, Kingsmead Street, Bath.

Second prize to C. S. Ash, clerk, aged 28, Coleman Street, Wells Street, Camberwell.

Third prize to John Robertson, assistant foreman, aged 26, 29, Berwick Street, Pimlico.

In consideration of the care shown by the remaining competitors, the certificate of the Company was awarded to—

William Silk, jun., clerk, aged 19, Long Acre, London.

John Charles King, foreman, aged 40, Regent's Park carriage works, Park Street, Camden Town.

George Fleming Budd, coachbody maker, aged 28, 59, Gartree Street, Leicester.

John Cole, assistant foreman, aged 24, 5, Young Street, Kensington.

Ralph Drewery, bodymaker, aged 27, 60, Lambeth Walk.

William Letchford, bodymaker, aged 40, 56, Allen's Buildings, Finsbury.

1874.

The Company in this year voted similar prizes as last year, to be awarded by the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. No award was made, there being only one candidate, and the examiners did not think him worthy of a prize.

The Company also offered similar prizes as last year for drawings of carriages or parts of carriages to scale, and to be awarded as last year.

The judges awarded as follows :—

First prize to Mr. George Fleming Budd, aged 29 years, coachbody maker, 59, Gartree Street, Leicester.

Second prize to Mr. John P. Lake, foreman, 1, Philip Street, Westminster.

1879.

The prizes, voted by the Company in this year were awarded as follows :—

For freehand or mechanical drawing—

First prize.—Among former prize winners and others, and no limit as to age, to Mr. William Farr, of Castle Street, Salisbury, aged 30 (coach trimmer).
Second prize.—Excluding former prize winners, and no limit as to age, to Mr. George Mundy, of 1, Cambridge Street, Spittlegate, Grantham, Leicester, aged 32 (coachbody maker).
Third prize.—For apprentices and others under 22 years of age, to William Thomas Easton, of 39, Commercial Road, Portsmouth, apprentice to coach painting, aged 16.

Certificates of merit were also awarded to—

Edward Atterby, of Huntingdon, an apprentice to coach smithing, aged 16 (winner of the second prize in the year 1877, and to whom same would have been awarded this year, and therefore ineligible to receive the same prize this year).
Henry Hewer, of 92, High Street, Southampton, coachbody maker, aged 19.
Walter Reynolds, 37, Tulloch Street, Scotswood Road, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, coach-body maker's apprentice, aged 14.
Robert Davies, of 36, St. Julian's Friars, Shrewsbury, apprentice to coach smithing, aged 18.

And for drawings to scale—

First prize.—Among former prize winners and others, and no limit as to age, to Mr. J. P. Lake, of No. 1A, Howick Place, Victoria Street, Westminster (foreman), aged 48.
Second prize.—Excluding former prize winners, and no limit as to age. No drawing of sufficient merit was submitted.
Third prize.—For apprentices and others under 22 years of age, to Herbert H. Mulliner, of Harvey Villa, Leamington, Warwickshire, clerk, aged 18.

The Company also offered similar prizes for technology in carriage building as last year. No award was made.
In addition to the above, special prizes were again offered for "essays or treatises on carriage trimming." One essay only was presented in time for competition, and that not of sufficient merit for a prize. The judges, therefore, asked the Company to offer the same prizes next year.
By the kind consent of the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Charles Whetham, the Company were enabled to have at the Mansion House an exhibition of drawings, books, and models relating to the coachmakers' craft, when many members, both of the court and livery, and gentlemen not connected with the Company, were kind enough to lend many valuable and interesting objects. In order to induce working men to interest themselves in the exhibition, it was opened on Whit Monday, 2nd of June, and remained open till the following Friday. Several applications made by workmen to have it kept open longer, showing the interest they took in it. In consequence of the requirements of the Mansion House it had, however, to be closed on that day, when the Lord Mayor most kindly gave away, not only the prizes awarded by the Company, but also the prizes awarded to the pupils of St. Mark's School, being an Art and technical school, founded for the benefit of apprentices and others in the coachmaking trade.

The prizes voted by the Company for this year were awarded as follows :—

For freehand drawing of foliage or ornaments from nature or models—

First prize.—Among former prize winners and others, and no limit as to age, to Robert Davies, of 36, St. Julian's Friars, Shrewsbury, apprentice to coach smithing, aged 19.

Second prize.—Excluding former prize winners, and no limit as to age, to J. G. Parr, of 48, Lincoln Street, Leicester, aged 20, coach-builder's clerk and assistant.

Third prize.—For apprentices and others under 22 years of age, to Henry Hewer, of 92, High Street, Southampton, coach-body maker, aged 20.

A certificate of merit was awarded to A. Fogwill, 74, Broad Street, Portsmouth, aged 21, coach painter.

And for drawings to scale—

First prize.—Among former prize winners and others, and no limit as to age, to Henry Hewer.

Second prize.—Excluding former prize winners, and no limit as to age, to Herbert H. Mulliner, of Harvey Villa, Leamington, aged 19, clerk.

For the third prize, for apprentices and others under 22 years of age, there was no candidate of sufficient merit.

The second prize would have been awarded to Mr. George Fleming Budd, but as he had been a first class winner in former years, he was ineligible.

The special prize, offered by Mr. Frederic Chancellor, of 10*l.*, for working drawings to inch scale of improved four-wheeled cabs. There was no drawing of sufficient merit submitted.

The special prize of 10*l.*, offered by Mr. George Norgate Hooper, for heraldic designs painted in oil on wooden panels was awarded to Henry Sherratt, 44, Plymouth Place, Leamington, aged 35, clerk.

A certificate of merit was awarded to Richard Durham, 269, Oxford Street, London, herald painter, aged 16.

The special prize of 10*l.*, offered by Mr. George Athelstane Thrupp, for working drawings to inch scale of the side and back of an improved one-horse omnibus, was awarded to Herbert H. Mulliner.

In consequence of there being no competition for the special prizes offered by the Company for "essays or "treatises on carriage trimming" last year, similar prizes were again offered this year, and were awarded as follows :—

First prize to William Farr, coach trimmer, aged 31, of 51, Castle Street, Salisbury.

Second prize to A. E Clarke, coach trimmer, aged 25, of 20, Alington Road, Camden Town, London.

Third prize to Frederick Joseph Sweet, coach trimmer, aged 36, of No. 7, Vernon Street, Hammersmith, London.

The Company also offered similar prizes, as last year, for technology of carriage building, and the same were awarded as follows, namely :—

First prize to William Thompson Casson, Malvern Link, Worcester.

Second prize to Henry Forbes Julian, Bolton, Lancashire.

Third prize to Frederick Charles Pendry. Westminster.

1881.

The prizes offered by the Company for this year were awarded as follows :—

For freehand drawings of foliage or ornaments from nature or models, in pencil, ink, or crayon.

First prize.—Among former prize winners and others, and no limit as to age, to Edward Atterby, of Huntingdon, apprentice to coach smithing, aged 18, for three drawings of foliage in pencil.

Second prize.—Excluding former prize winners, and no limit as to age, to Julius Hiller, of 17, Fernhead Road, Kensal Green, coach-body maker, aged 30, student at St. Mark's School, Grosvenor Square, for a shaded drawing from a carving in wood.

Third prize.—For apprentices and other under 22 years of age, to Walter Reynolds, of No. 29, Tulloch Street, Scotswood Road, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, apprentice to coach body making, aged 16, for four line drawings of busts.

The Company's certificates of merit were presented to Robert Davies, of No. 36, St. Julian's Friars, Shrewsbury, apprentice to coach smithing, aged 19, for a drawing of foliage.

The Company's second prize would have been awarded to him but he was incapacitated, having won the first prize last year, and to A. Fogwill, of No. 74, Broad Street, Portsmouth, coach painter, aged 22, for two drawings, foilage and a bust.

For working drawings to scale—

First prize.—Among former prize winners and others, and no limit as to age, to Julius Hiller, for drawing of a landau and 19 working drawings.

Second prize.—Excluding former prize winners, and no limit as to age, to Walter Reynolds, for a Sparkenhoe car and eight working drawings.

Third prize.—For apprentices and others under 22 years of age, to John Henry Johnson, of No. 4, Union Street, Shieldfield, Newcastle-on-Tyne, apprentice to coach painting, aged 18, for a French brougham and working sections.

Company presented their certificate of merit to William Aaron Harrison, of No. 2, Arthur's Groove, Beverley Road, Hull, coach-body maker's apprentice, aged 18, for working drawings of a Victoria.

The special prize, offered by Mr. Frederic Chancellor, of 10*l.*, for working drawings to inch scale of improved four-wheeled cabs, was awarded to W. Witham, of No. 13, Cochrane Street, St. John's Wood, N.W., coachsmith for a drawing of cab and working sections.

In addition to the above, special prizes were offered for Essays on "Treatises on the manufacture of carriage wheels," and were awarded as follows :

First prize to John S. Fogget, 1, West Gill Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne, aged 23, clerk.

Second prize to Alfred T. Frost, 2, Atherton Street, Battersea, coachsmith.

Third prize to Henry Hewer, aged 21, coach-body maker, of 92, High Street, Southampton.

The Company presented their certificate of merit to A. Forbes Julian, 8, Back of the Bank, Bolton, aged 19, carriage and body maker.

The Company's prizes for technology of carriage building were awarded by the examiner of the city and guilds of London Institute, as follows, viz.:—

First prize to Herbert H. Mulliner, of Leamington, Warwickshire.

Second prize to Stephen Mallard, of 18, Dorset Road, South Lambeth.

Third prize to Julius Hiller, of Kensal Green, London.

The Library.

The first grant of money for the creation of a library of reference was made in the year 1868, and the same is now open to the public, subject to the following regulations, viz.:

In the hall there is a library of books in relation to coachbuilding, and also the photographs and drawings of carriages exhibited in the International Exhibition of Carriages in 1873, but as it is a library of reference, no book or drawing can be taken away from the premises; but liverymen and other persons can have access to the same by a written order (available for three months) from a member of the court. The library is open every Saturday from 12 mid-day till 4 p.m.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their income was stated to be 205*l.* 10*s.* per annum, made up of dividends on 1,000*l.* Reduced Annuities, and 850*l.* Consols, and the rent of the Company's hall.

COOKS' COMPANY.

The returns of the company were delivered subject to the following protest :—

The privileges which the Mistery of Cooks have enjoyed for many centuries, and which have been from time to time confirmed to them by Her most Gracious Majesty's predecessors, impel them as loyal subjects to pay their dutiful respects to Her Majesty's Commission.

The property now or at any previous time in the possession or under the control of the mystery has accrued since its existence entirely from sums received for quarterages from its members, for fees on admission to the freedom and to the livery or clothing, for fees on fining to be excused serving as stewards, for fees on being elected a member of the governing body, for fines or penalties as by the byelaws enacted, and from donations, grants, and bequests by members and others, and from the savings made by the governing body from time to time out of its accruing income.

With respect to the origin, constitution, and history of the mystery, or its present administration, there is nothing to conceal; but having regard to its future and to prevent interference by any foreign authority with its properties, constitution, rights, and privileges, or the free and perfect control of them, the mystery consider it to be their duty firmly, but at the same time courteously, to protest against the assumption by the Royal Commissioners of any legal right to inquire into the title of the company to any property or money belonging to them other than that of which they may be possessed as trustees.

While, however, asserting and insisting on the above protest, yet notwithstanding the members of the Mistery are under the solemn obligation of an oath not to disclose anything which may tend to the prejudice or injury of the Mistery, the Mistery have resolved to give answers relative to the information sought for by the Commissioners, relying on the Commissioners not using the information given to the prejudice or injury of the Mistery.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a license in mortmain? When was such license granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—In consequence of the early records of the company being destroyed by fire, the date of its foundation is not known, and from the existing documents in the company's possession its origin cannot be shown.

B.—The answer to Return A. shows the company are unable to reply to this, but by inspeximus charter of Geo. III., it appears that King Edward IV., in the 27th year of his reign, granted unto his well-beloved subjects the honest and freemen of the Mystery of Cooks of the City of London, that they and all men of the same mystery should be in substance and name one body, and one commonalty perpetual, with power to make two masters or governors with the aid of two wardens and assistants to govern the affairs of the mystery, and to have a common seal, and to hold meetings, and to make laws and vary the same for the government of the mystery.

C.—The company have no trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" them.

D.—The company are not aware of any decrees of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council "regulating or affecting" it, save as referred to by charter.

E.—The company are not aware of any other documents than those to which they have referred in the preceding return which "found, regulate, or affect" it.

F.—The company can only give their history by reference to the Return B., and they believe the objects of the mystery have been and are being carried out, save as is mentioned in Return H.

G.—The company are unable to give any information affecting title to their property for the reasons mentioned in Return A.

H.—By reference to the charter it will appear that power is given to the masters or governors to exercise superintendence and jurisdiction over every member of the mystery and the works of such; the local limits of the same are defined by the charter to be within the cities of London and Westminster, their suburbs, and liberties, and four miles compass thereof. Such control owing to a late decision in a court of law has fallen into abeyance.

PART I.

CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

With respect to these we respectfully refer the Royal Commissioners to the Report of the Commissioners appointed in pursuance of an Act of Parliament made and passed in the 5th and 6th years of King William IV., chap. 71, intituled "An Act for appointing Commissioners to con- "tinue the enquiries concerning Charities in England and "Wales until the first day of March 1837," dated "30th "June 1837," and presented to both Houses of Parliament by command of Her Majesty.

Under those Acts the said Commissioners had full powers to inspect all documents having relation to the charities referred to, as well as to send for and examine on oath all persons whose evidence they considered necessary to assist them in making the enquiries. The said Commissioners exercised all the powers given to them by the said Acts, and upon the evidence which they so obtained founded their Report, and of which the following is a copy :—

COOKS' COMPANY.

CORBETT'S CHARITY.

Edward Corbett, by will dated 5th April 1674, gave to the poor of the Company of Cooks 5*l.* a year to be disposed of as the master and wardens and the rest of the company and assistants should think fit, but "especially to "such as were free of the company, men or women, that "had not been altogether refractory, altogether slighting "governors and government till need and poverty bring "them to the governors."

Also he gave to the said masters, wardens, and assistants 5*l.* a year towards their care and charge in managing the estate that the Lord had given him, that the tenants might not wrong the land, house, nor woods.

Also he gave to the clerk of the said company 40*s.* a year and to the beadle of the same company 20*s.* a year for their pains.

Also he gave 5*l.* a year for ever to the relief of decayed ministers or ministers' widows to be faithfully bestowed as his trustees should think fittest.

Also he gave to the poor of St. Martin's, Ludgate, 40*s.* a year to their relief as it should seem best to the church-wardens and the rest of the vestry, and 20*s.* a year to be spent as occasion should serve.

Also he gave to the poor in the Hole at Ludgate 50*s.* a year to their relief to be paid them duly every May, and all the rest of his legacies he gave, if convenience should serve, for the maintenance of the poor.

Also he gave to the poor of the parish of St. Gregory's 40*s.* a year.

To the poor of the parish of St. Andrew Wardrobe 40*s.* a year.

To the poor in the Hole in the Counter in Wood Street 40*s.* a year.

To the poor in the Hole in the Poultry Counter 40*s.* a year, to be paid them every July.

And he made the said master, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Cooks, of which he was a member, his executors.

And after giving various pecuniary and other legacies therein particularly mentioned the said testator gave all his land in Surrey, which was 61*l.* a year, and his two houses and land in the occupation of Conour and Slograve, and a piece of land which was called Chickens, which went at 6*l.* a year, in all about 20*l.* a year and more towards the payment of the legacies nominated in his will.

Various other legacies are given by the will, and in a summary annexed to it recapitulating the bequests thereby given are enumerated those above mentioned, and among them is inserted a gift of 2*l.* per annum to the parish of St. Anne, Blackfriars.

The Company of Cooks now hold under the devise above recited two farms, one situated in the parishes of Charlewood and Horley, containing about 83 acres, called "Old Lands," in the occupation of Samuel and John Parsons, at the yearly rent of 50*l.*, the other in the parish of Horley called "Lady Lands Farm," containing 74 acres, 3 roods, 32 perches, held by John Best, also at the yearly rent of 50*l.*, also an allotment in Horley set out to them under the Horley Inclosure Act of 17 acres, 2 roods, 24 perches, near Horley Row, let to James Dowley for 16*l.* per annum.

From the rents of this property the company pay :—

To their poor per annum	5	0	0
To the company's clerk	2	0	0
To the company's beadle	1	0	0
To four clergymen's widows appointed by the court, 25*s.* each; when once appointed the same widows receive the charity for life	5	0	0
To the poor and church-wardens of St. Martin's, Ludgate — £ 3 0 0
Deducting for land tax — 0 12 0	2	8	0
To the prisoners in Ludgate	2	10	0
To the poor of the parish of St. Gregory — 2 0 0
Deducting land tax — 0 8 0	1	12	0
To the poor of St. Andrew's by the Wardrobe — 2 0 0
Deducting land tax — 0 8 0	1	12	0
To the poor of St. Ann, Blackfriars — 2 0 0
Deducting land tax — 0 8 0	1	12	0

These gifts to the poor of the several parishes are paid to the respective churchwardens, and the application thereof is accounted for in the reports of those parishes.

To the prisoners in the Counter in Wood Street (now in Giltspur Street)	2	0	0
To the prisoners in the Poultry	2	0	0

The three gifts of 2*l.* 10*s.*, 2*l.*, and 2*l.* to the three prisoners are paid to Mr. Temple, the hall keeper of Guildhall, appointed by the Corporation of London to receive the same under the authority of the Act 4 George IV., chap. 64.

The Company of Cooks allow to their poor members pensions, and also distribute to them casual relief, the total annual amount of which upon an average of the last 20 years is about — — — 114 0 0

In this sum is included the gift	£	s.	d.
of 5*l.* under the above recited will	5	0	0
Also the gift of John Shield, next mentioned of — —	1	0	0
And that of Thomas Hope (hereafter set forth), of — —	5	0	0

in all 11*l.*, which being deducted from the 114*l.* shows an average sum of 103*l.* annually paid by the Company in aid of their poor brethren beyond the sums bequeathed to them in trust for that object.

SHIELD'S CHARITY.

By deed poll dated the 4th March 1616, the master, wardens, and commonalty of Clothworkers in consideration of 500*l.* granted to John Shield and his heirs an annuity or yearly rentcharge of 28*l.* to be issuing out of their messuages, lands, and tenements situate in Nicholas Lane, in the parish of St. Nicholas Acon, London, and out of and in their messuages, lands, and tenements situate in Fenchurch Street and Billiter Lane, in the parish of All Saints Stayning, London, and out of all other their messuages, lands, and tenements in the City of London payable on the four usual feast days in the year, with power of distress and entry in case of nonpayment thereof.

By indenture bearing date the 5th June 1617, the said John Shield after reciting the above recited grant by the wardens and commonalty of Clothworkers assigned unto the said masters or governors and commonalty of Cooks and their successors the said annuity or yearly rentcharge of 28*l.* in trust after his decease to pay at Michaelmas and Lady-day yearly or within 30 days thereof, by equal portions, 20*s.* parcel of the said annuity, unto the usual reader of divine service in the parish church of East Allandale, within the Royalty of Hexham, in the county of York

(where the said John Shield was born) and to his successors for ever, for two sermons, viz., once in every half year by him or them, or by his or their procurance, to be made in the parish church of the said parish; and 10*l.*, other parcel of the said annuity, unto the guardians of the good works and ornaments of the said parish church of East Allandale and their successors, and unto six of the wealthiest and principal men of the said parish for the time being, to be yearly chosen, and to be by them paid and distributed yearly for ever at convenient times among the poor people of the said parish; and 20*s.* other parcel of the said annuity unto the said guardians of the good works and ornaments of the said parish church of Allandale and their successors, and to the said six other wealthiest and principal men of the said parish for ever, equally to be divided amongst them for and in respect of their pains herein; and 40*s.*, other parcel of the said annuity, unto the guardians of the good works and ornaments of the parish church near to there adjoining, commonly called Augustine's, alias Austin Moore church or kirke, and their successors, and unto six other of the wealthiest and principal men of the said parish for the time being, to be yearly chosen, and to be by them distributed yearly at convenient times amongst the poor people of the same parish, with a proviso that if the said guardians of the said parish church of Allandale or their successors, or the said six other principal men of the said parish, should not distribute the said 10*l.* within a convenient time after they should have received the same amongst the same poor people of the same parish in manner aforesaid, then the payment of the said 10*l.* so appointed to the poor of East Allendade should cease, and the said masters and governors and commonalty of Cooks should yearly thereafter pay the said sum of 10*l.* unto the guardians of the said parish church of St. Augustine's, alias Austin Moore's church, and unto six of the principal men of the said parish for the time being for ever, and to be distributed by some of them yearly amongst the poor of the said parish; and the said last mentioned sum of 20*s.* unto the said guardians of the said parish church of St. Austine Moore's church, and to their successors, and to six of the principal men of the same parish for the time being, to be yearly chosen, equally to be divided amongst them, with a similar proviso that in case the governor or six principal men of the said parish of St. Austine Moore should not distribute the said sum of 40*s.* within a convenient time after they should have received the same amongst the poor people of the said parish, that then the said sum of 40*s.* should henceforth cease and determine, and that the said masters and governors and commonalty should pay the same unto the guardians or the six principal men of the said parish church of Allendale and their successors, to be distributed yearly for ever amongst the poor people of the same parish of East Allendale. And that the said masters and governors and commonalty of Cooks, their successors and assigns, should also yearly for ever thereafter on the Feast of the Purification pay 20*s.*, other parcel of the said annuity, unto the parson of the parish church of St. Mary, Aldermary, where the said John Shield then dwelt for the time being, for ever, for a sermon to be made once in every year in the same parish church on the said Feast of the Purification, and 20*s.*, other parcel of the said annuity, in manner following, viz., 10*s.* to the vicar or reader, 5*s.* to the clerk, 5*s.* to the sexton of the said parish of St. Mary, Aldermary, for the time being for ever, to be paid yearly on the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle; and 20*s.*, other parcel of the said annuity, unto the said guardians of the same parish of St. Mary, Aldermary, for the time being for ever, to be by them yearly distributed among the poor of the said parish on the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle; and 40*s.*, other parcel thereof, to be paid by the said masters and governors of Cooks towards relieving the poor prisoners lying in the hole of one of the Counters in London, for the time being; and other 40*s.*, other parcel thereof towards relieving the poor prisoners lying in the hole in the other of the said Counters in London for the time being; and 40*s.*, other parcel of the said annuity to two poor maids of honest name and fame respectively upon the several days of their marriage, viz., to either of them 20*s.* thereof; and 20*s.*, other parcel of the said annuity, to be yearly for ever thereafter on the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle paid amongst the poor brethren of the said Company of Cooks for the time being as need should be. And that the said masters and governors and commonalty of Cooks, their successors and assigns for ever thereafter should retain 40*s.*, residue of the said annuity, for their own use in respect of their pains and cares in the premises. And the said indenture contains a covenant from the said masters and governors and commonalty of Cooks with the said parsons and guardians of the parish of St. Mary, Aldermary, that they would from time to time for ever thereafter pay the said several sums of money and would truly perform the trusts by the said indenture reposed in them.

The company under the grant above recited yearly receive 28*l.* from the Clothworkers' Company, who are still in possession of property in and about the places mentioned in the will, and thereout make the several payments next mentioned, viz.:—

	£	s.	d.
To the usual reader of divine service in East Allendale church	1	0	0
To the guardians of the said church and for use of their poor	10	0	0
To the guardians for their care	1	0	0
Note.—These three sums are paid to the churchwardens of East Allendale.
To the guardians of Augustine's church and for use of the poor	2	0	0
To the parson of St. Mary, Aldermary, for a sermon	1	0	0
To the vicar of St. Mary, Aldermary	0	10	0
To the clerk „ „	0	5	0
To the sexton „ „	0	5	0
To the guardians of St. Mary, Aldermary, for the poor thereof	1	0	0
Note.—The five preceding items are paid in one sum of 3*l.*
To the guardians of St. Benedict Fink, for the poor thereof	2	0	0
To Giltspur Street Counter	2	0	0
To Poultry Counter	2	0	0
These two sums are paid to the City collector.
To the Companies poor paid amongst the persons (see under Corbett's Gift)	1	0	0

The gift of 40*s.* to two poor maids of honest name and fame as marriage portions had not for many years been paid, no application having been made for it, but upon the nomination (pursuant to a direction in the court of the company, 27th October 1835), of a poor maid to receive the same, it was ordered that 1*l.* be paid to her on the production of the certificate of her marriage.

No nomination of the second poor maid, as directed by the said order, has as yet been made, although notice has been given to the members of the court in rotation to nominate.

Davis's Charity.

John Davis, by will bearing date the 12th July 1708, proved in the Prerogative Court in August in the same year, gave unto the masters, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Cooks the sum of 200*l.* In which sum the company was indebted to him, upon trust that the said wardens and assistants, and their successors, should yearly after his decease out of the interests and proceeds thereof, pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of St. Alban, Wood Street, London, 20*s.* by them annually to be distributed among four poor widows of the said parish on every Easter Monday. And upon further trust that the said master, wardens, and assistants should yearly pay towards putting out apprentice a poor member's child of the said company the annual sum of 5*l.* And upon further trust that the said master, wardens, and assistants should yearly upon the first court day after Easter, pay to the poor of the said company 20*s.*

The company pay to the churchwardens of the parish of St. Albans, Wood Street, 1*l.* per annum. The other payment of 1*l.* per annum to the poor of the company is included in money paid to the pensioners as already mentioned.

Upon examining the account book of the company from the year 1736, no entry could be found of any payment of 5*l.* for apprenticing a child until 1836. On the 25th of October in this year a sum of 5*l.* is directed to be paid to Isaac Facey, a member of this company, for the binding of his son.

The omission to execute this part of the testator's intention probably arose from the circumstance that the company at the time of his death were indebted to him in the amount of his legacy. The company have now presented a petition to the Lord Chancellor praying the direction of the court for the future administration of this charity.

PEADE'S CHARITY.

By indenture dated 16th January 1664, made between Priscilla Peade and three other executors of Leonard Peade, late citizen and cook deceased, of the first part, the masters or governors and commonalty of the Company of Cooks of the second part, and William Hudson, vicar or rector of the parish church of Warfield, in the county of Berks, and two others, churchwardens and overseers of the same church of the third part, reciting that the said Leonard Peade, by his will bearing date the 4th November 1663 (amongst other legacies) had given unto the said masters, or governors and commonalty, the sum of 100*l.* upon this condition, that they should after his decease, yearly for ever, pay to the churchwardens or overseers for the poor in the parish of Warfield, in the county of Berks, for the time being, towards the relief of the same poor 5*l.*, but in case the said masters, wardens, and commonalty should refuse to accept the said 100*l.* under the conditions aforesaid, then that the said 100*l.* should be paid unto his two sons Robert and Thomas, therewith to purchase lands to be applied for the benefit of the poor of Warfield, in manner therein mentioned. And reciting that in pursuance of the said will they, the said Priscilla Peade and others, had paid unto the said masters or governors and commonalty the said sum of 100*l.*, it was thereby covenanted and agreed between the parties thereto, and the said masters or governors and commonalty for themselves and their successors did covenant and promise with and to the said vicar and rector, churchwardens, or overseers of the said parish church of Warfield aforesaid, and their successors, that they and their successors would yearly for ever thereafter well and truly pay to the said churchwardens or overseers of the parish church of Warfield for the time being the said yearly payment of 5*l.* at Lady Day and Michaelmas yearly, or within thirty days next after, by equal portions towards the relief and for the use and benefit of the poor people of the said parish as by the said recited will was prescribed.

The company have since paid, and still continue to pay to the vicar and churchwardens of the said parish of Warfield 5*l.* per annum.

PHILLIPS'S CHARITY.

Under a gift by John Phillips to Christ's Hospital of lands at West Ham (the particulars of which will be found under the report of that hospital), the company exercise the right of presenting two children of members of the company to be maintained and educated therein. The company receive notice from the hospital when a vacancy occurs, when, after advertising for candidates, they elect the son of a poor freeman.

The same John Phillips, by will bearing date the 29th April 1674, amongst other bequests gave his freehold messuage or tenement, situate in Crooked Lane, in the parish of St. Michael, Crooked Lane, in London (after the decease of his wife), unto the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Cooks, and their successors, upon trusts out of rents and profits thereof to pay yearly to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of St. Catherine Cree, alias Christchurch, in London, the annual sum of 10*l.* to be by them annually disposed of for the placing forth apprentice of two poor children of the said parish yearly. And upon further trusts that the residue of the clear rents and profits of the said messuages or tenements should be yearly for ever be employed and disposed of by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company and their successors for the placing forth of two poor children of some poor members of the company apprentice yearly.

The Hall and records of the Company have been three times destroyed by fire, and the books which are now in existence commence only from the year 1736, and do not afford the means of tracing the rent received for the premises devised, which were situate in No. 19, Crooked Lane. For many years previous to 1780 the rent was 24*l.*: although a great outlay for repairs took place, it was subsequently reduced to 21*l.*

In 1818 the house was demised for 21 years to Henry Gay at a rent of 38*l.* per annum, and a slip of land adjoining (formerly part of the premises occupied with the house) was let at 2*l.* 10*s.* per annum.

Both the house and slip of ground were, in February, 1830, purchased by the Corporation of London (as trustees of the New London Bridge), under the Acts of Parliament for improving the approaches thereto at the sum of 1,086*l.* which was afterwards, under an order of the Court of Exchequer, invested in a sum of 1,167*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.* three per cent. consols now standing in the name of the company upon the trusts of the said will, the dividends whereof amount to the sum of 35*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.*, out of which the company pay to the parish of St. Catherine Cree per annum 10*l.*, from which they deduct for land tax 2*l.*

This payment has been regularly made since 1736. Of the remainder of the dividends a part has been occasionally applied by the company in placing forth some poor children of some poor members of the company apprentice.

The company, on a vacancy, now cause to be inserted in two daily newspapers a notice to the freemen that the court has in its disposal a gift under the will of John Phillips to be applied to the placing forth of two poor children of some poor members of the company apprentice yearly. The same notification is contained in all the circulars to the livery.

It was not, however, until the year 1812 that this branch of the charity directed by the testator's will appears to have been acted upon. In that year an order of the court is entered on the minutes, directing the application of the residue of the rent in equal moieties towards the apprentice fees of two boys, sons of freemen of the company.

Since the year 1818 (when the rent of 38*l.* under Gay's lease commenced) only 114*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* has been applied in apprenticing, 445*l.* 10*s.* would appear to have been received for rent during this period, subject to deductions for repairs, land tax, &c., and the dividends received since the sale to December, 1836, have been 227*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

After giving credit for the payment of 10*l.* annually to the churchwardens of St. Catherine Cree church, and for 114*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, a balance of about 397*l.*, but subject as aforesaid, appears to remain due to this branch of the charity. The company have now presented a petition to the Lord Chancellor stating the circumstances above mentioned, praying the directions of the Court upon the subject.

HOPE'S CHARITY.

Thomas Hope, by will dated the 7th July 1707, gave unto the master, wardens and assistants of the Company of Cooks the sum of 200*l.*, in which they were indebted to him upon trust yearly to pay amongst the poor of the said company at their Lady Day quarter court the sum of 5*l.* See Corbett's Charity.

KENNEDY'S CHARITY.

Sir Alexander Kennedy, Bart., by will dated 16th November 1789, gave, among other bequests to the Worshipful Company of Cooks, the sum of 100*l.* Bank Stock of the Bank of England upon trust to pay the annual interest and dividends thereof amongst the 10 clergymen's widows for the time being that should or might be pensioners to the said company, the same to be paid and payable for ever.

It appears that in 1789 there were 10 widows receiving the benefit of Corbett's Charity.

The Company annually pay 11*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* as the interest of 144*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* Bank Stock now standing in their corporate name, the fund being increased to that amount by bonuses granted by the Bank of England amongst the four clergymen's widows, who are pensioners of the said company, 2*l.* 17*s.* 7½*d.* each.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The constitution of the governing body of the company is according to the charter, two governors or masters, two wardens and 24 members called assistants to be aiding the governors and wardens in the performance of their duties. The attendance of the masters, wardens, and 12 or at the least eight assistants constitutes a legal court, and the direction of the charter as to the constitution of the governing body is carried out at the present time.

2. The qualification of an assistant of the governing body is to be a freeman, liveryman, and one who has served or fined for the office of steward.

The assistants are selected by the governing body from the senior liverymen qualified as aforesaid in rotation subject to the usual scrutiny as to character and eligibility, but no member is elected an assistant who has been bankrupt or insolvent and not paid 20*s.* in the pound, or who has been otherwise rendered incapable by judgment of the law. After inquiries have been made as regards character and eligibility, the election is proceeded with by ballot, and the oath of an assistant is administered to the newly elected assistant according to the byelaws of the company as allowed by the judges of the realm pursuant to the enactments of the Act Henry VII.

3. The functions of the governing body are those set forth and referred to in the charter of incorporation of the company, and each member on being elected and taking his seat pays a fine of 30*l.* for the benefit of the company.

Each member receives a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* for attending each court, but committee meetings are frequently held at which a large amount of business is transacted, and at such committee meetings no fees whatever are paid.

4. The nature of the business coming before the governing body is: The binding of apprentices; admitting freemen and liverymen; the election of members to the court as aforesaid and the other officers of the company. The management of the company's estates and trust charities; the relief of necessitous members of the company, and their widows, and other general matters. The proceedings are duly and fairly entered in books kept for that purpose, which are accessible to members.

There are four quarterly courts and one court for the election of officers on charter day.

The opinions are taken vivâ voce, and when differences arise such differences are decided by show of hands. The time of meeting is not later than two o'clock.

5. The members of the governing body are liable to dismissal for breaking the byelaws as allowed by the judges, but within the memory of the present members no such case has arisen. The removal would be effected by the method directed by the bye-laws.

6. The company have byelaws sanctioned by the judges and no others.

PART II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The qualification of any person to become a member of the company is, firstly, by having duly and truly served an apprenticeship to a member of the company for a term of seven years according to the custom of London, which service being duly proved, will entitle him to be admitted to the freedom. And in the event of the court refusing a mandamus would probably compel them to receive it.

Secondly, by patrimony, the father being a freeman of the company prior to the birth of the applicant, who is required to produce the certificate of marriage of his parents, the same of his birth, and the evidence of two or more respectable witnesses who can attest the fact of the applicant being the reputed child of the said parents.

Thirdly, by purchase.

The several grades are, first, freemen; secondly, those freemen who are admitted to the livery or clothing of the company; and thirdly, the assistants who are elected out of the livery to the governing body.

Daughters of freemen on producing evidence as aforesaid are eligible to take up the freedom of the company.

2. The questions under the above index have already been answered. The fees payable are those set forth in the byelaws as allowed by the judges, and are as follows, viz:

Fees payable on admission by servitude:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Company fee	1	6	8
Warden	0	4	0
Clerk	0	2	6
Beadle	0	1	6
Certificate	0	6	8

Fees payable on admission by patrimony:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Company fee	1	6	8
Warden	0	4	0
Clerk	0	2	6
Beadle	0	1	6
Certificate	0	6	8

Fees payable on admission by redemption:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Warden	0	4	0

3. As far as the company are concerned the freedom of the City of London is in no way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership, but no liveryman of the company would be entitled to vote at the election for the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs or other City officers, or for members of Parliament without having taken up the said freedom.

It is impossible for the company to state whether there are any members who are not free of the City of London. There may be persons using the Mystery of Cookery occasionally become members. The actual number is not known.

According to the company's charter all persons carrying on the art and mystery of cookery within the limits hereinbefore stated are required to take up the freedom of the company, but of late years this power has been in abeyance.

4. The company have not any information to enable them to answer this question.

5. The company consider themselves to be without limit.

The qualifications to become a liveryman is to be free of the company.

The governing body are the electors by whom the election is made in open court. The fees are those stated in the byelaws.

The company consider the court have right to disclothe; but they have no knowledge of any liveryman having been disclothed other than on his own application.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) The present number of the freemen of the company amounts to 249, of whom 98 are liverymen.
(2.) The present number of the livery amounts to 98.
(3.) There are no other members.
(4.) The number admitted to the freedom during the last 10 years was—

By patrimony	16
By servitude	3
By redemption	13

(5.) There are no calls made to the livery, but 30 freemen have been admitted to the livery on their own application during the last 10 years.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentices been paid by the company?

The number of apprentices bound during each of the last 10 years under the auspices of the company at their hall or otherwise were in 1870, one; 1871, one; 1872, one; 1873, three; 1874, none; 1875, one; 1876, none; 1877, one; 1878, two; 1879, none.

Each was bound to a member citizen and cook, and one of the above is known to have been apprenticed to a member following the trade of a cook.

The company pay no fees or premiums whatever on such bindings.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges:—

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1.) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2.) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any, and what, trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages incident to the position of a freeman under the charter are the power to sell beer or ale, meats, bread, sauces, and other victuals without taking a license; and freedom from service on juries.

A further benefit in case of illness or poverty is the reception of pecuniary aid according to the discretion of the court out of the company's private and trust funds.

Freemen having become liverymen have the privilege of voting as aforesaid, and also have the social advantage of being invited by the masters and wardens to dine with their brethren of the livery twice every year, and a further advantage to a certain number of them in rotation having a further invitation for a friend to accompany them.

The masters, wardens, and assistants of the court have the same advantages as the freemen, they manage the affairs of the company, and after each court it is the custom for the governing body to dine with visitors.

2. (1.) The sums paid annually for the preceding 10 years to assistants of the governing body for their attendances at the courts of the same are as follows:—

For the year ending 30th September 1870 -	94	10	0
The like - - 1871 -	94	10	0
The like - - 1872 -	114	9	0
The like - - 1873 -	117	12	0
The like - - 1874 -	196	7	0
The like - - 1875 -	222	12	0
The like - - 1876 -	312	18	0
The like - - 1877 -	241	10	0
The like - - 1878 -	245	14	0
The like - - 1879 -	243	12	0

The fee paid to each member of the governing body up to 1874 was 1*l.* 1*s.*, and then on account of the increase of business raised to 2*l.* 2*s.*, the large amount paid in 1876 arose from the holding of special courts.

(2.) The sums paid annually by the company for the preceding 10 years for pensions, relief to poor freemen and to liverymen on their releasing the livery of the company, gratuities to poor clergymen's widows in addition to Corbett's and Kennedy's gifts, and donations to charitable institutions are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
For the year ending 30th September 1870 -	105	13	2
The like - - 1871 -	85	18	6
The like - - 1872 -	93	2	9
The like - - 1873 -	115	8	9
The like - - 1874 -	104	3	0
The like - - 1875 -	174	9	10
The like - - 1876 -	111	15	3
The like - - 1877 -	158	18	3
The like - - 1878 -	158	19	11
The like - - 1879 -	181	5	6

The sums paid annually by the company for the preceding 10 years to the National School of Cookery at South Kensington for the instruction in elementary cooking to certain girls selected from the ward schools of the City of London are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
For the year ending 30th September 1870 -	--
The like - - 1871 -	—
The like - - 1872 -	—
The like - - 1873 -	—
The like - - 1874 -	—
The like - - 1875 -	—
The like - - 1876 -	—
The like - - 1877 -	9	7	4
The like - - 1878 -	86	16	6
The like - - 1879 -	44	4	0

3. There are no circumstances which in practice are held to constitute a claim for a pension or donation, but the court is accustomed at their discretion to relieve necessitous freemen and their widows and poor women as well as to give donations to deserving persons and charitable institutions. The company are not aware of the number of those persons to whom relief has been given who are connected with the art and mystery of the company, but with few exceptions they were connected with the trade.

4. This question is so vague that it is impossible to give it a full answer, but, as before stated, members of the governing body are appointed from the livery for life (except as aforesaid) in strict rotation, which will enable the Commissioners to arrive at the average.

The election being for life, and the ages varying, it is impossible to say how long a member remains on the governing body.

5. The company does not carry on any business.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

A. B. and C.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The officers of the company are two, viz., the clerk and the beadle. The duties of the clerk are as follows:—

To receive every applicant for information relating to or in connexion with the company, to answer all inquiries, give every information, and to confer upon matters of business during the usual office hours of the day, to receive all letters and other communications, and to answer the same. To attend the master and other members of the governing body and company, and to answer all their inquiries. Especially to attend all applicants for pecuniary assistance, to ascertain the merits of their respective claims and the truth of statements made in order to be able to advise the governing body thereon. To peruse and correct all papers for presentation to, and consideration by, every court and the different committees and sub-committees thereof. To prepare the papers of business for such courts and committees, and to make copies of the same for the master and wardens. To attend all such courts and committees. To draw up from the minutes a fair statement to be entered in the court books, and to enter the same. To draw all the reports from the committees to the governing body, and to make fair copies thereof. To receive all moneys payable to the company, and as received to pay same into the company's bank. To keep the cash book. To prepare the yearly accounts for audit, and to enter the same fairly in the audit book for signature by the auditors. To arrange all the papers, documents, and vouchers for the audit and to attend the same. To prepare all the summonses to the governing body, liverymen, and freemen for their attendances at the courts and committees. To take instructions for all bindings, to prepare the indentures, and to attend the execution thereof. Also the taking instructions for freedoms and liveries, and carrying out all the orders of the courts and committees.

The clerk is not a member of the company.

PART IV.—F.

Return F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

Return F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F.—(1.) The income of the company has increased during the past 10 years, 1870–1879 inclusive, such increase having principally arisen from the falling in of a city ground lease, but the company fear that, looking to the present disturbed state of Ireland and the depreciation of farming interests, they may have to meet a considerable diminution in their receipts during the next 10 years, for the details of increase in income the company beg to refer the Commissioners to the furnished balance sheets.

F.—(2.) The previous answer, it is respectfully submitted, will apply to this question.

PART IV.—G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property ?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control ?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited ?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company ?

1. The estates and properties of the company are managed by committees under the approval of the governing body.
2. The renter warden by the charter and bylaws is the proper officer to take the receipts and make the payments, and is responsible practically, but the receipts are taken by the clerk, who gives security for the due account thereof, and the payments are made by cheques signed by the master and one of the wardens, and countersigned by the clerk, such receipts and payments being subject to the correction of the auditors.
3. The accounts of the company are audited in the month of October in every year, by a special committee specially elected in full court in the preceding month of September.
4. The company's accounts are not published, but are accessible as before-mentioned.

PART IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

Statement of actual Income and Expenditure, the details of which the Royal Commissioners may think it unnecessary to consume time and incur the trouble and expense to go into.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Cooks' Company have on all occasions carefully fostered and encouraged this most important branch of domestic economy, as will be seen by reference to the charters; but from altered social circumstances many difficulties have from time to time arisen rendering a complete change in their course of action necessary, and of which they have always availed themselves. For the last 10 years and upwards much time of the governing body has been devoted to this most important subject, and on the inauguration of the National Training School of Cookery, South Kensington, the governing body, approving of the idea, made several grants of money to assist the school in commencing operations, and still continues to give its support.

The company have during the last three years been giving, free of all expense, practical lessons in elementary cookery to more than 70 girls selected from the ward schools of the City of London, and the examinations at the conclusion of the course of lessons have given ample proof that the plan adopted is a marked success.

The general arrangements in the establishment of these classes by the company have been adopted by the School Board of the Metropolis, and also in some parts of the country: this is a satisfactory proof of the soundness of the whole scheme as projected and continued by the company.

The sixth series or class of girls are now receiving instruction, and the governing body will shortly take into consideration the propriety of establishing a class for boys, which they think will develop a new field of action of usefulness.

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The governing body respectfully reply to the Commissioners' invitation for them to direct its attention as to "what "measures (if any) are in their judgment expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the "companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof—" That in their opinion it is inexpedient to alter the constitution of the mistery, or in any way to interfere with its rights and privileges, which have given the whole of the members of every grade complete satisfaction for so many generations.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave considerable information to the Commissioners of 1834. At that date about 14 of the court and 120 of the livery were cooks by trade.

COOPERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the Company were accompanied by the following protest, signed by the Master and three Wardens and dated from Coopers' Hall, London, 2nd August 1881 :—

We, the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Coopers' Company, in compliance with the request of the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the City of London Livery Companies, have caused to be prepared the following returns, which relate not only to the properties held by the company upon trust for charitable purposes, and to the administration by the company of those trust properties, but also to the company's own private property, in which the company alone is beneficially interested, and which is not subject to any trust. In respect to this latter property the court of the company think it their duty to state in plain and unmistakable terms that in giving any information with reference to their private property they do so voluntarily and as a concession to the wishes of the Commissioners, but this compliance is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on the part of the company of any right in the Crown or any other jurisdiction to inquire into the company's private property, or to deal with it in any way. The company claim to be as wholly independent of control in reference to their private property and its administration as any other owner of private property in England, and the fact that the company have been willing to supply information in reference to their property is in no sense or for any purpose to be taken as an admission to the contrary, or a waiver of the company's strict rights. The company also desire to record their claim that if any question be raised whether any particular property held by the company is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the company, every such question is to be determined only by the courts of law.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

The Coopers' Company was incorporated in 1501 by charter of King Henry the Seventh, dated 29th April, in the sixteenth year of his reign. A copy of the charter accompanies this return. There is no doubt that the Coopers were one of the early mysteries or brotherhoods of the City of London, though it is difficult to assign a correct date to their origin. The company's archives however show that the company had existed for a considerable period prior to the date of its incorporation. There is no record however of any charter anterior to the charter of King Henry the Seventh already referred to. A subsequent charter was granted on the 30th August, in the 13th year of King Charles the Second. A copy of this charter accompanies the returns. This is the governing charter, and its provisions regulate the management of the company to the present day. It is considered that the object of the foundation of the company, and the rights of exercising superintendence over the trade conferred upon the company, sufficiently appear from these charters. Under the statute of 23rd Henry the Eighth, cap. 4, power is given to the wardens of the company with one of the mayor's officers to gauge all casks in the City of London and the suburbs, and within two miles' compass without the suburbs, and to mark such barrels when gauged. By a subsequent Act, 31 Elizabeth, cap. 8, "for the true gaug-" ing of vessels brought from beyond the seas, converted " by brewers for the utterance and sale of ale and beer," brewers were prohibited from selling or putting to sale any ale or beer in any such vessels within the limits before mentioned before the same should be lawfully gauged and marked by the master and wardens of the Coopers' Company. The company do not now exercise, and have not for a considerable period exercised, any control over the trade of coopers. Such control as the company formerly exercised appears to have gradually fallen into desuetude, consequent upon the change in the character and mode of conducting the trade and other like causes.

In addition to the charters of incorporation already referred to, the company have in their possession the following:—

Byelaws or ordinances,	9th May 1507, 22 Henry 7th,
The like,	10th June 1561, 3 Elizabeth,
The like,	8th May 1663, 14 Charles 2nd,
Charter,	14th Jan. 1685, 36 Charles 2nd,
Byelaws or ordinances,	3rd March 1740, 14 George 2nd.

The byelaws or ordinances of the 22nd Henry the Seventh, of the 3rd Elizabeth, and the 14th Charles the Second were superseded by those of the 14th George the Second, and the latter byelaws are those in force as regards the internal regulation of the company. The byelaws also contain minute regulations as to the mode of exercise of the powers of supervision and control over the trade, conferred upon the company by their charters.

The charter of the 36th Charles the Second was set aside by the Act of the 2nd William and Mary, cap. 4, intituled "An Act for reversing the judgment in a quo "warranto against the City of London, and for restoring "the City of London to its ancient rights and privileges," and the Coopers' Company have ever since been acting under their charters of the 16th Henry the Seventh, and the 13th Charles the Second.

The company have under their management three charities, known as "The Ratcliff Charity," "Henry Strode's" or "The Egham Charity," and "Alexander's" or "The Woodham Mortimer Charity."

The Ratcliff Charity was founded by Nicholas Gibson in 1540, and subsequently endowed by Lady Avice Knyvett, his widow. The object of the foundation of the charity was the maintenance of a free school and almshouses in the hamlet of Ratcliff, in the parish of St. Dunstan, Stepney, Middlesex.

The Ratcliff Charity was further benefited by gifts from John Charley in 1552, Henry Cloker in 1573, Tobias Wood in 1611, and Henry Strode in 1703.

The Egham Charity was founded by Henry Strode in 1703, his object being the maintenance of a school and almshouses in the parish of Egham, Surrey.

The Woodham Mortimer Charity was founded by William Alexander in 1725, who devised to the company his freehold estate in the parish of Woodham Mortimer, Essex, for the benefit and advantage of the poor of the company.

Full information as to these charities and the properties held by the company in trust for them respectively is contained in the Report of the Commissioners for inquiring concerning charities, dated 30th June 1837, part 2. The same properties are still held and administered by the company for the purposes of the respective charities. In 1844 the questions raised by the Commissioners in their report with reference to Henry Cloker's gift were disposed of by the Court of Chancery, and under an order of the Court the company receive three-elevenths of the rents of the property devised by Henry Cloker, the charity receiving the remainder. With this exception the company have nothing to add to the information contained in the Report of the Commissioners.

The charities are administered under the supervision of the Charity Commissioners, and the accounts of income and expenditure of the charities are annually rendered to the Commissioners, pursuant to the statutes. Copies of these accounts for the last 10 years will be found in Part 4, Return H.

THE GOVERNING CHARTER.

30 August 1662.
13 Car. II.

Charles the Second, by the grace of God king of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c., to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting. Whereas we have seen certain letters patent of Henry the Seventh, heretofore king of England, made in these words. (Here follows the Charter of Incorporation.)

Now know yee that the said recited letters pattents and all and every the powers, privileges, and other things therein contained, saveing and excepting so much and such parts thereof as in and by these presents are or shall be otherwise granted, altered, added, or supplyed, Wee, at the humble petition of the said master, wardens, and keepers of the commonalty of the mistery of Cowpers London, of our especiall grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have ratifyed, confirmed, and by these presents for us, our heires, and successors, as much as in us is, do ratify, and confirme; and moreover anything before in the said recited letters pattent to the contrary notwithstanding, for the better order, rule, and government of the said master, wardens, or keepers of the comonalty aforesaid, we of our more especiall grace, certaine knowledge, and mere motion do, for our heires and successors, will, ordaine, constitute, declare, and grant by these presents that John Price, the now master of the said cominaltie, George Moore, and Thomas Boyleston, the now wardens of the said cominaltie, whome, by theise presents wee do confirme to bee the present master and wardens of the said cominaltie, and Thomas Gill, Richard Milles, William Giles, Nathaniell Lucas, Richard Young, Henry Partridge, Henry Haycock, and all others now professing or useing the said art or mistery of Cowpers and that are now freemen or free persons of the said society or corporation, within the cittyes of London and Westminster, or either of them, and libertyes and suburbs of the same, and within twoe miles compasse of the same, and that all others that now doe or shall hereafter exercise the said art or mistery of Cowpers within the places aforesaid, or any of them, or which shall be freemen or free persons of the same company or society, shall be from henceforth one body corporate by the name of the Master, Wardens, or Keepers of the Cominalty of the Freemen of the Mystery of Cowpers, London, and of the suburbs of the same citty; and, for the better executeing of this our grant on that behalfe, we have thought fitt that there shall or may be at all times hereafter seventeen assistants of the said company besides the master and wardens for the time being, and to that intent and purpose we have assigned, named, constituted, made, and appointed, and by these presents, for us, our heires and successors, do assigne, name, constitute, make, and appoint Thomas Gill, Richard Milles, William Coultman, Nathaniel Lucas, Richard Young, Henry Haycock, Arthur Bray, Abraham Rowe, Thomas Rawlinson, William Willes, William Chisworth, Symon Driver, Edward Palmer, Richard Emmes, Thomas Carter, Thomas Mason, and William Cooper to be the first and present assistants of the said Company of Cowpers of London, and to continue in the said office of assistants during their naturall lives, or otherwise as is hereinafter limitted and expressed, they before they be admitted to the exercise of the said office of assistants takeing their corporall oathes before the master and wardens of the said cominalty for the time being, or any two of them, for the due and faithfull execution of the said places of assistants; which said master and wardens for the time being, or any two of them, we do hereby authorise to administer the said oathes accordingly.

And we will and by these presents, for us, our heires and successors, do grante unto the said master, wardens, or keepers of the cominalty aforesaid, and their successors, that the master, wardens, assistants, and livery of the said society for the time being, or the greater parte of them for that purpose assembled, from time to time for ever hereafter, shall have full power and authority, yearly and every yeare, on the Monday next before the Feast of Pentecost, otherwise called Whitsuntide, to nominate and choose one of the wardens or assistants for the time being to be master of the said company for one whole yeare, to commence imediately after the time that such master so chosen shall take his oath as hereinafter is expressed; and that he which shall be so named and chosen unto the said office of master of the said company, before he be admitted to execute his said office, shall, on the first Tuesday in the month of June, or within eighteen days then next after, yearly, take his corporall oath before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company for the time being or the greater part of them (to whome we give power by these presents to administer the said oath), well and truely to execute the said office of master of the said company in all things belonging to the said office; and that such person, after the said oath so as aforesaid to be taken, shall have and exercise the said office of master for one whole yeare then next ensuing; and from hence until another be chosen master and sworne to the said office in forme aforesaid and according to the true meaning of these presents; and likewise that at the same time of electing of the said master as aforesaid, they the said master, wardens, assistants, and livery, or the greater part of them so assembled, may also name and choose two persons out of the then present wardens, assistants, or livery of the said company, which shall be wardens of the said company for one whole yeare, to commence imediately after the time that such two wardens so chosen shall take their respective oaths as hereinafter followeth; and that they which shall be so named and chosen unto the said offices of wardens of the said company, before they or either of them be admitted to execute their said offices, shall, on the first Tuesday in June, or within eighteen days then next after, yearly, take their respective corporall oaths before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company or the greater part of them for the time being (to whome we give power by these presents to administer an oath or oaths), well and truely to execute the said office of wardens in and by all things touching and concerning the said office, and after such oathes so as aforesaid taken, such two persons so sworne shall and may execute their said office of wardens for one whole yeare next ensuing the time of taking of such oath or oathes, and from thence untill two others be chosen wardens and sworne unto the said office of wardens of the said company, of the persons and in manner and forme in these presents expressed and declared, and according to the true meaning of these presents.

And further by these presents, for us, our heires, and successors, we will and grante unto the said master wardens or keepers of the cominalty aforesaid, and their successors, that if the master and wardens so elected and chosen as aforesaid, or any of them, shall refuse to serve or hold such place or places aforesaid whereunto they, or any of them, shall be elected, or if it shall happen the master and wardens of the said company for the time being, or any of them, at any time within one yeare after that they, or any of them, shall be so chosen and sworne in his or their respective office or offices, to die or to be removed from his or their said office or offices (which said master and wardens for just and reasonable cause we will shall be from time to time removable by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said society, or the greater part of them, for the time being), that then and so often in every of the cases aforesaid it shall be lawfull to and for the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company for the time being, or the greater part of them, being assembled together at their wills and pleasures, in convenient time and times after, to choose, elect, and sweare one or more other or others of the said wardens, assistants, or livery, for the time being, respectively to be master, warden, or wardens of the said company, according to the orders and provisions before in these presents expressed and declared, to execute and exercise the office of master, or of warden or wardens of the said company untiil some other person or persons be chosen and sworne master, or warden, or wardens respectively, according to the true meaning of these presents, he or they first taking his or their corporall oath or oathes in forme as aforesaid, and so this to be done as often as the case shall require.

And likewise we will and by these presents, for us, our heires and successors, do grante unto the said master, wardens, or keepers of the cominalty aforesaid and their successors, that whensoever it shall happen any of the assistants of the said company for the time being to die or be removed from his or their office or offices (which assistants, and every or any of them we will, shall be removable and be removed by the greater part of the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, for evill government, misbehaviour, or any other just and reasonable cause), that then, and so often, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens, and so many of the said assistants for the time being which shall then survive and remaine, or the greater part of them, at their will and pleasure, in convenient time and times afterwards, from time to time to name and choose one other or more of the said livery of the said company for the time being, to be an assistant or assistants of the said company in his or their place or stead which shall so happen to dye or be removed as aforesaid; and that he or they so named and chosen an assistant or assistants, before he, or they, or any of them be admitted to the execution of the said office of assistant, or assistants, shall in convenient time after such choice, take his and their corporall oath and oathes before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company, or the greater part of them, for the time being (to whome, by these presents, we give power to administer the said oath and oathes), well and truely to execute the said office or offices, and so this to be done as often as the case shall require.

And also we do grante, for us, our heires and successors, by these presents unto the said master, wardens, or keepers of the cominaltie aforesaid, that the master and wardens of the said society, for the time being, at any time or times, before the said Thomas Gill, and other, the persons before in these presents within named, assigned and appointed assistants, or to be assistants, as aforesaid, have duly taken their oathes as assistants according to the true meaning of these presents, and after such oathes so taken by the said Thomas Gill and other, the persons aforesaid named with him, to be assistants of the said company, the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company for the time being, or the greater parte of them, at any time or times respectively, shall or may have full power and authority by virtue of these presents, to make, ordaine, constitute, appoint, and set downe such reasonable orders and ordinances in writeing as to them, the said master and wardens for the time being, before the said Thomas Gill and other, the person aforesaid, before named, to be assistants with him, shall have taken their oathes, as aforesaid, and, after such oathes so taken, as to them the said master, wardens, or assistants, or the greater part of them for the time being, shall seeme meet and necessary, according to their good discretion, respectively, as well for and concerning the oaths that shall be administred to the master, wardens, assistants, and freemen of the said company, and the necessary officers of and concerning the same, and also for the good order, rule, and government of the master, wardens, assistants, and cominalty aforesaid, and all other members of the said society, or thereunto belonging, in and touching all necessary matters and things concerning the same; and that whensoever the said master and wardens for the time being, before the said Thomas Gill, and others herein named with him, assistants, or to be assistants, shall have taken their oathes as aforesaid, and, after such oathes so taken, the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, shall make, ordaine, and establish such orders, acts, and ordinances, as aforesaid, they respectively shall have power therein to provide and limit such reasonable pains, penaltyes, and punishments, either by fines, or amerciaments, or by such other lawfull wayes or meanes whatsoever, upon all offenders, breakers, neglecters, or not observers of the same, or any of them, as to them the master and wardens for the time being, or, after such oathes taken by the persons hereinbefore named for assistants as aforesaid, the master, wardens, or assistants of the said company, or the major part of them for the time being, respectively, are to be assembled, shall think fitt, necessary, and convenient; and that thereupon, or at any time after, the said master, wardens, or keepers of the cominalty of the freemen of the mistery of Cowpers, London, and of the suburbs of the same city aforesaid, or such of them whome it doth concerne, shall, or may by virtue hereof, have, levy, recover, and take the said fines and amerciaments by actions of debt, or by distress of the goods and chattells of such offender or offenders, according to the laws and statutes of this realme, and the same fines and amerciaments so levied and taken shall and may reteine, convert, and enjoy to and for the common use, benefitt, and supportation of the said cominalty; all such acts, orders, and ordinances so as aforesaid to be made, we will shall be observed and kept under the pains and penaltyes therein to be contained, so as always such orders, ordinances, fines, and amerciaments be reasonable and not repugnant or contrary to the lawes and statutes of this our realme of England, nor contrary to the due custome of our citty of London.

30 August 1652.
16 Car. II.

And moreover we do by these presents, for us, our heires and successors, grante unto the said master, wardens, and keepers, and their successors, that the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being shall and may, from time to time and at all times hereafter, fully, freely, and absolutely do, performe, and execute, as well within the said citty and the libertyes and suburbs thereof, and also within two miles compass of the same libertyes or suburbs, all and every the grants, powers, libertyes, and privileges in and by the said recited letters pattents given and granted or mentioned to be given and granted, and every of them, anything in the said former letters pattents contained to the contrary notwithstanding. And we do further will, and by these presents, for us, our heires and successors, streightly charge and command all and singular mayors, sheriffes, justices of the peace, constables, bailiffes, headboroughs, and other the officers and ministers of us, our heires and successors whatsoever whome it may concerne, in all and every place and places whatsoever, as well priviledged as not priviledged, within in our said cittys of London and Westminster and their suburbs and libertyes, and within two miles compass of the same, that they and every of them at all and every time and times hereafter, and from time to time, upon reasonable request to them to be made in that behalf, to be furthering, helping, aiding, and assisting to the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said company for the time being and every of them, for the doeing, executing, and performeing of all and singular the premisses, according to the tenor and effect of these presents.

And our further will and pleasure is, and we do by these our letters pattents limit and appoint, that the place where the said master, wardens, and assistants and cominaltie shall assemble together, and hold the courts for the corporation and make such elections as aforesaid, shall be their common hall commonly called Cowpers' Hall, scituate in the parish of Saint Michael Bassishaw, in our citty of London, or in such other place or places as the said company or society for the time being shall have their common hall or meeting place for manageing their public business and occasions.

And lastly, our will and pleasure is that all and every the new additions and alterations in these our letters pattents made, varying and differing from any the matters and things in the said former recited letters pattents incerted or contained, shall stand and be good and effectuall, the said former letters pattents, or any clause, matter, or thing therein contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

Witness ourselfe at Westminster, the thirtieth day of August in the thirteenth year of our reign.

By writ of privy seal.

Part II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all, or any, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of 20 members called the court, one master, two wardens, 17 assistants, one of whom is annually appointed renter warden. The constitution of the governing body is strictly according to the charter.

2. Election to the court is made from the livery, usually according to seniority of admission, although this is not required by the charter. Those only are eligible who have paid the fine to be excused serving the office of steward. Vacancies are filled up at the monthly court succeeding that on which they are reported, and notice of such election is given to the governing body in writing. In the case of a liveryman being chosen an alderman the governing body would probably elect him at the first vacancy, or if chosen sheriff of London then only upon a vacancy occurring during his year of office. The livery are represented on the governing body by two of their number, chosen annually, the first year as junior warden and the second year as senior warden. Cases are on record where the wardens have served the office three years. The exercise of this privilege by the livery strictly according to the charter dates from 1824. In their capacity of guardians or wardens of the interests of the livery they are placed on all committees, and every opportunity is afforded to them of becoming thoroughly acquainted with the business of the company. Upon the expiration of their term of office they revert to their standing on the livery until they are called to the office of assistant.

3. The functions of the governing body extend to the consideration of every matter relating to the company and the various charities of which they are trustees. The admission fine is forty-two pounds (42*l.*), and each member who is in the court previous to the hour of meeting receives a fee of two pounds (2*l.*) for his services. Members serving on committees which meet monthly give their services gratuitously.

4. Courts are held monthly at the hall, and quarterly courts at the school and almshouses at Ratcliff, for business more immediately connected with the Ratcliff Charity, such as reports of examiners, masters, &c., and presentation of prizes. The business of the governing body is to admit applicants to the freedom and livery of the company, the binding and turn-over of apprentices, to receive reports from committees upon references made to them, the election of pensioners on the company's and charities' funds, applications of tenants for new leases, assignment, &c., sealing leases, payment of accounts, and general management of the company. The opinion of the members is taken by a show of hands after a motion has been made and seconded. The proceedings of the governing body are not published, but are accessible to the court and livery.

5. Under the charter of 13 Charles 2nd, the master and wardens are removable by a majority of the court for just and reasonable cause; and the assistants are also removable for evil government, misbehaviour, or for any other just and reasonable cause. There has not been occasion to exercise this power for upwards of a century.

6. A list of the byelaws is given in Part I. of this return. Those of 1740, which are still in force, were sanctioned by Philip Lord Hardwick, Lord Chancellor; Sir W. Lee, Chief Justice of the King's Bench; and Sir John Willes, knight, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, pursuant to the Act 19 King Henry VII., entitled, "For making of statutes by bodies incorporate."

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the company.
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the City of London?

1, 2. Members are admitted to the freedom and livery of the company as entitled by (1) patrimony (2) servitude after seven years to a member of the company, or (3) redemption upon the introduction of an assistant or liveryman; daughters of freemen claiming the freedom are admitted by patrimony.

NOTE.—In 1872 and 1874 a fine of 20*l.* each was paid by two assistants to be excused serving the office of master to which they had been elected. And in 1873 a fine of 5*l.* was paid by a liveryman to be excused serving the office of assistant.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

See Return H. for the Annual Income.
The fluctuations in the company's income during the last 10 years are shown in the accounts, Return H.
The company can express no opinion as to the future prospects of the company's property.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

1. By the governing body, with advice when required of the solicitor and surveyor.
2. By the clerk under the control of the court; the same is supervised periodically by a committee appointed for that purpose.
3. The company's and charities' accounts are audited half-yearly by a finance committee appointed by the court, and the same are read in a detailed form to them at their next meeting. At the annual common hall of the livery for election of master and wardens, the receipts and expenditure of the company and its charities for past year, are submitted for approval.
4. The accounts are not published; those relating to the charities are furnished annually to the Charity Commissioners, and are accessible to all.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H. A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The following statement of the income from all sources of the company during the 10 years, 1870 to 1879 inclusive, and of the company's expenditure during the same period, embraces the income and expenditure of the charities administered by the company, as well as the company's own private income and expenditure.

The assets of the charities and of the company itself appear by the foregoing returns. Neither the charities nor the company has any liabilities other than small current liabilities.

This return is therefore limited to a return of income and expenditure for the 10 years in question.

The returns in respect to the charities are those which year by year have been rendered to the Charity Commissioners pursuant to the statutes.

Accounts of the company's private income and expenditure are submitted to the court half-yearly and to the livery yearly.

All expenses of administering the charities as well as the company's corporate property are (with the few exceptions which are shown in the charity accounts) paid out of the company's private income.

Part IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company has under its management a school of 300 boys at Stepney, and a middle class day school for 150 girls at Bow Road, both of which are supported out of the funds of the Ratcliff Charity.

The company has also under its management a free school at Egham, Surrey, where 100 boys are educated. This school is supported out of the Egham Charity funds.

The expenditure on these schools is shewn in Return H.

For the last three years the company has contributed out of its corporate funds one hundred guineas annually to the City and Guilds of London Institute for promoting technical education, and in 1880 the company awarded prizes for the best work in the cooperage trade in connexion with a workmen's exhibition at the east end of London.

PART V.—REFORM.

Return V.—Reform.

The Commissioners being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company have no suggestion to make, as they do not consider that any modification of the existing system of management of the company's affairs is necessary or would be advantageous.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.

Sir, February 15, 1882.

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Coopers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners, but at the same time to state that that information is not, in their judgment, quite sufficient. I am therefore to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Coopers' Company with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, &c.
(Signed) H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Coopers,
Coopers' Hall, Basinghall Street, E.C.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with regard to the following point:—

Part IV. Circular, 14th August 1880.

The returns contain no detailed statement of the Company's corporate expenditure.

Coopers' Hall, Basinghall Street, E.C.

Sir, March 23, 1882.

Having submitted your letter of 15th February to the Court of this Company I am directed to furnish you with the enclosed returns of the Company's corporate income and expenditure for the years 1870–1879 inclusive.

I am at the same time to inform you that in making this return the Court do not admit the right of the Commissioners, or any other body, to inquire into the administration of the Company's private property and the information is supplied as a matter of courtesy only.

I have, &c.
(Signed) J. BOYER,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.

APPENDIX C.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
July 17, 1882.

Sir,

I much regret to have to give the Court of the Coopers' Company and yourself any further trouble, but I shall be much obliged if the Court will kindly inform the Commissioners what is the rateable value of the Company's almshouses and schools respectively? This is an inquiry which was not specifically comprehended in the original interrogatories and about which the Commissioners have consequently had to trouble most of the Companies further.

I am, &c.
(Signed) H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

J. Boyer, Esq.,
Clerk to the Coopers' Company.

Coopers' Hall, Basinghall Street, E.C.,
July 26, 1882.

Sir,

In reply to your letter of 17th inst., I have the pleasure to furnish you with the following particulars:—

Rateable value of the Company's Schools and Almshouses.

Masters' Houses and Almshouses at Stepney, Middlesex	138	0	0
Rateable value of Girls' School No. 86 Bow Road, Middlesex	130	0	0
Rateable value of School, Almshouses and Master's Residence at Egham, Surrey	79	0	0

I am, &c.
(Signed) J. Boyer,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
&c. &c.

CORDWAINERS' COMPANY.

THE Returns of the Company were made under protest, and were prefaced by the following statement:—

Before furnishing in detail the returns requested by the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the City Companies, the Cordwainers' Company desire to make, by way of preface, the following statement with reference to the Company.

The Allutarii or Cordwainers appear to have been voluntarily associated together as a craft or mystery from very remote times, probably as early as the Conquest, in close connection with the municipality of London. Its object was to encourage and regulate the trades connected with the leather industry, and included the flaying, tanning, and currying of hides, and also the manufacture and sale of shoes, boots, goloshes, and other articles of leather. In the 13th and following centuries several branches separated and formed distinct communities, such as the girdlers, tanners, curriers, and leather sellers.

Besides the protection and regulation of trades, various other benefits accrued in those rude and turbulent times from the control exercised by the several crafts over the masters, workmen, and apprentices, in the settlement of disputes, the suppression of fraudulent practices, and the summary infliction of punishment (with the sanction of the Mayor and aldermen) on evil-doers.

The good and wholesome laws and ordinances enacted from time to time contemplated equally the benefit of the master, the workman, and the consumer. They were framed to secure to the master honest, skilful, and efficient work and service; to the workman freedom from undue competition in his industry and fair wages, together with a provision for his relief in sickness and old age; and to the consumer a guarantee against bad materials, defective workmanship, and excessive prices.

The public spirit and integrity with which the powers and privileges of this Guild were used may be inferred from the important municipal position and duties assigned it, and from the rule and government of the mysterie conferred by successive charters and numerous Acts of Parliament. The funds supplied by the generosity of their own members for promoting the free intercourse and festive enjoyment of the whole community among themselves, the liberal provision made for the sustentation of their poor brethren in time of need, and the gifts entrusted to them for charitable and other uses, go also to prove that they worthily fulfilled their duties through the long centuries of their history. The Guilds formed part and parcel of the Corporation of London, and were often called upon to bear their share in the contributions for wars in France and Ireland, and for other State or public purposes, for erection of the Guildhall and Royal Exchange, Bridewell and Bartholomew Hospitals, for the purchase and distribution of corn, &c. to the poor in seasons of distress, and for maintaining the loyal hospitality of the City on the occasions of Royal visits and public rejoicings.

The first existing Ordinance of the Cordwayners (Allutarii) is found in Liber Horn, folio 339, and was made in the 56th year of King Henry III. (son of King John), Anno Domini 1272. The preamble shows the association to have been voluntary in its origin, and sets forth that the provisions and statutes which the good men of the cordwayners of London therein ordained, with the will and consent of Master Walter Henry, Mayor of London, and the other Barons of the same city, and with the unanimous will and consent of the same cordwayners, were designed "for the relief and advancement of the whole business, and to the end that all frauds and deceits may be hereafter avoided."

It is ordained that in future the cordwainers, the tanners, and the curriers (cistarii) shall have separate rights and regulations as to working alum-leather and tan-leather, and for preparing cowhides, &c., and shall not interfere with each other under a penalty of half a mark to be paid to the commonalty of the city aforesaid; and further, that no apprentice should be received but only with the will and consent of the Mayor and commonalty of London.

There are sundry other provisions and orders for the regulation and control of the mysterie, and it is further declared that "to the end that all these above-written statutes made for the advantage of the whole realm be faithfully kept, and "the amerciaments of delinquents, together with the forfeitures, be levied and delivered to the chamberlain of the city "aforesaid, which now are and for the time shall be to the use of the said commonalty, the aforesaid cordwainers have "elected twelve good and lawful men as principal keepers, sworn for all before the Mayor and bailiffs that they will "faithfully keep all the above-written statutes as aforesaid, with the assistance of the city, and will levy the amerciaments "according to their powers, &c." The carrying of shoes for sale is restricted to the part of the city between Corveysere Street (Queen Street), and Soper Lane (Bow Lane).

The names of the aforesaid "twelve keepers" and their several seals are set to the same.

In the 37th year Edward III. (A.D. 1364) is recorded "an account of moneys received by John Cauntebrigg, the city chamberlain, from 32 livery companies, as free gifts to the King towards carrying on the French wars." Among these the Cordwainers' (Allutarii) stand 15th in order, their contribution being 10 marks (6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*), four principal companies —Mercers', Drapers', Fishmongers', and Skinners', contributing 60 marks each (40*l.*), and the lowest one mark (13*s.* 4*d.*)

In the 11th year of King Henry IV. (A.D. 1409), in the mayoralty of Drego de Barantin, is an ordinance or composition exemplified by the King for the settlement of long-existing differences between the workers of old leather called "cobblers," and the workers of new leather called "cordwainers." The King (Henry IV.) commanded the Mayor, recorder, and aldermen of the city of London to take an inquisition before 24 men, viz.:—Twelve of the workers of old leather called "cobblers," and 12 of the workers of new leather called "cordwainers," to determine the ancient custom, and to declare that which was due and would belong in right and reason to either side, which inquisition was taken accordingly. This ordinance was proclaimed in full hustings holden in London on the Monday next after the Feast of St. Luke the Evangelist, in the 11th year of the same reign.

In this ordinance we find for the first time mention made of "the wardens of the said Mysterie of Cordwainers."

Among the 12 men of the Cordwayners whose hands and seals are set to the same ordinance is the name of John Yonge, who in the year A.D. 1440 (temp. Hen. VI.) gave to the Cordwainers' Company certain land in the city for the purpose of a hall, on which site it is believed a part of the present hall now stands.

In the Harleian MSS. 541, temp. 1st year Richard III. (A.D. 1483) the halls of the Inns of Court, and also of the 25 livery companies of London possessing halls, are enumerated, among which the Cordwainers' stand No. 21; a site having been given them about 40 years earlier by one of their own members, as already stated.

This hall was rebuilt in A.D. 1577 from funds given for the purpose by another of their members, Thomas Nicholson, a master of the Company. That the Company had attained some note at this period is evidenced by the fact that Camden the historian, who died in October 1623, at the age of 73 years, left the Company by his will 12*l.* for a piece of plate to bear the following inscription:—"Gul. Camdenus Clarenceux ffilius Sampsonis Pictoris Londinensis dono dedit." This, with the rest of the Company's plate, was sold after the Fire of London.

The first charter of incorporation was granted by King Henry the VI., on the 26th day of April, in the 17th year of his reign (A.D. 1439), whereby, in consideration of the payment of 50 marks, he granted to the freemen of the Mysterie of Cordwainers (Allutariorum) of the city of London that they should be one body or commonalty for ever, that they should every year elect and make of themselves one master and four wardens to rule and govern the said mysterie, and all men and workers of the mysterie and commonalty, and all workmen and workers whatsoever of tanned leather relating to the said mysterie, to search and try black and red tanned leather and all new shoes which should be sold or exposed for sale, as well within the said city as without, within two miles thereof.

To have perpetual succession and a common seal.

To be fit and capable in law to acquire and purchase for themselves and their successors for ever, in fee and perpetuity, lands, tenements, rents, and other possessions whatsoever, and from any person whomsoever.

To plead and be impleaded before any justices in any court.

And further to acquire lands, tenements, and rents, as well in possession as in reversion, within the city of London and the suburbs thereof, to be held of the Crown in free burgage, to the amount of 10*l.* per annum.

To examine and prove black and red tanned leather, and to regulate the sale of boots and shoes in the city of London, and within two miles thereof.

The above charter was exemplified and confirmed by the charter 4 & 5 Philip and Mary (17th June, 1557).

The charter or letters patent of Queen Elizabeth, dated 24th August, in the fourth year of Her Majesty's reign (A.D. 1562), exemplifies and confirms the exemplification of Philip and Mary.

Furthermore this charter grants "that the commonalty of the Society may yearly elect according to the ancient custom "of the city of London, 12 discreet and honest persons to assist the master and wardens in the rule and government "of the Mysterie. Also to elect from the freemen of the Mysterie auditors for the examination of the accounts of the "wardens of such Mystery, and also a clerk and a beadle."

The charter further grants to them the government of all persons exercising the said trade within the city of London and three miles round about the said city and suburbs. Also the power of making byelaws for such purpose is thereby given to the master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty.

The charter further extended the rights of the Company to hold lands of the annual value of 20*l.* per annum over and above the lands they were authorised to hold by the before-mentioned charter of King Henry VI.

This charter was duly enrolled in the repertory of the Court of Aldermen, 9th March, 6th Elizabeth.

King James I. in the 10th year of his reign, granted another charter to the Company upon the petition of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Mysterie, which ordained that the number of the assistants should be increased to 16, the whole to be elected yearly, or from time to time as often as might be expedient; it also granted further powers for the government and rule of the trade, and power to hold lands to the extent of 200*l.* per annum, in addition to the lands they were authorised to hold by the previous charter; and further confirmed the Company in the possession and enjoyment of all the lands they then held.

A new charter was granted by King James II. in the first year of his reign, but it would appear that this charter was afterwards annulled by Act 2nd William and Mary, cap. 9; but this same Act restored and confirmed all previous charters.

In the 14th Elizabeth, anno 1572, and by authority of Her Majesty's charter granted in the fourth year of her reign, certain byelaws were ordained by the master, wardens, and commonalty for the rule and government of the Mystery, and the same were approved and allowed by Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, William Marquis of Winchester, Lord Treasurer, Robert Cathorn, C.J. of Queen's Bench, and James Dyer, C.J. of Common Pleas.

By authority of the charter 10th James I. (1612) certain new byelaws were ordained by the master, wardens, and assistants, with the consent of the commonalty, and the same were approved and confirmed by Thomas Lord Ellesmere, chancellor, Sir Thomas Fleming, C.J., King's Bench, and Sir Edward Coke, C.J., Common Pleas.

The orders, rules, and ordinances of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Mystery now regulating the Company were made and agreed to at a court specially summoned at Cordwainers' Hall, 31st May 1749; and a copy accompanies these returns.

By the Great Fire of London in the year 1666 the hall of the Company erected in 1577 was burnt, together with many of the ancient documents and records, the Royal charters excepted. A considerable part of the Company's houses in the city were also destroyed, and so disastrous to the Company were the losses sustained, that in order to meet the urgent need for reinstating the hall and continuing the due payment of charges on their property, the pensions, &c., it was found necessary to set on foot negotiations for selling the Company's interest in their Irish estates, which was accordingly done, and all that interest was conveyed to the Goldsmiths' Company.

The Company's plate, consisting of 44 pieces with ancient engraving of arms and inscriptions of the donors on many, was also sold, and the proceeds applied to pay off the Company's debts. The Company was greatly indebted to the generosity of certain of its own members for assistance in rebuilding the hall, which was completed at considerable cost in the year 1670.

Legislative enactments, more or less affecting the cordwainers' and kindred trades down to the present century, were passed from time to time, as appears from the schedule of Acts of Parliament comprised in Return E., part I.

Since the passing of the Act of 5th George IV. cap. 47, the active control by the Company of the mystery of cordwainers, which had been exercised for more than six centuries, has fallen into disuse by the will of Parliament, and by the rapid extension and altered conditions of trade consequent on the progress of the nation in all its commercial and social aspects. Other duties and trusts which the Company fulfil remain. Independently of the charitable trusts which the Company administer under the inspection of the Charity Commissioners, other funds of the Guild arising from gifts of their predecessors are applicable to the maintenance of the Company's hall and the payment of the clerk, beadle, and servants for the necessary management of its general affairs, and for the cost of those annual celebrations and hospitalities on account of which special funds are provided, and which are called by the several benefactors' names.

The Company claim to have the fullest right to deal with their own private and corporate property and income (apart from their charitable estates) in any manner they think proper. Instead of dividing their surplus income among their own members, as they are entitled to do, the Company have hitherto appropriated the same for purposes connected with the promotion of education, the support of hospitals, and such other benevolent institutions and purposes as have commended themselves to the approval of the governing body.

For several years past the Company have been desirous of applying a part of their funds by new methods for the benefit of the craft, and they have sought, by inquiry of leading manufacturers of shoes and others, for suggestions on the subject of premiums for discovery of new materials for shoes or for the attainment of improved skill and taste in the manufacture, but without much success. They were, therefore, among the first to welcome the formation of the City of London Guilds for Promotion of Technical Education and to subscribe liberally towards its annual income, and also for the erection of the Central Technical University. A further portion of their surplus funds is appropriated in defraying the school fees of children of freemen or of persons of the trade of cordwainer at schools approved by the Court. These two applications of the funds are still in an early stage, and with respect to them the Court and livery are united in the desire to enlarge their gifts as the development proceeds and as the means of the Company may allow.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A. to I., both inclusive.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

Return C.—A list of any trust-deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

A.—The probable date of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives or otherwise, in which the Company had its origin, appear from the foregoing statement.

*B.—The following is a list, so far as the Company are aware or able to furnish the same, of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether original or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company:—

17th Henry VI.	Charter.
4th Philip and Mary	Charter.
4th Elizabeth	Charter.
10th James I.	Charter.
1st James II.	Charter.

C.—There is no trust-deed founding, regulating, or affecting the Company.

D.—The Company are not aware of any decrees of Court, whether of the Courts of Common Law or Chancery, affecting the Company.

So far as the Company are aware, the following is the only Act of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council regulating or affecting the Company, viz.:—An Act of Common Council dated 31st July, 1771, affecting the admission of the freemen of the Company to the freedom of the City of London.

A copy of the above Act accompanies this return.

E.—The Company have no other documents, not included in the description in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect the Company."

The following Acts of Parliament, most of which have been repealed, more or less affected the Company:—

25th Edward III. c. 4.
13th Richard II. c. 12.
4th Henry IV. c. 35.
2nd Henry VI. c. 7.
4th Edward IV. c. 7.
19th Henry VII. c. 19.
3rd Henry VIII. c. 10.
5th Henry VIII. c. 7.
14th and 15th Henry VIII. c. 9.

43rd George III. c. 106.
48th George III. c. 71.
5th George IV. c. 51.
36th and 37th Victoria, c. 91.

F.—The preface to these returns contains a concise history of the Company from its foundation to the present time, and has special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission, "as to the objects for which the Company "was founded, and how far those objects are now being "carried into effect."

G.—So far as it may have been or is necessary for the Company to have a licence in mortmain, it has such a licence. Having reference to the terms of its charters and to the law relating to mortmain, including the custom of the City of London, the right of the Company to hold lands is unexhausted.

H.—The prefatory statement before referred to gives all the information asked for under the head of this return.

I.—A list of all the charities—eleemosynary, educational or otherwise—under the management of the Company, with the other particulars here asked for, are set forth in Part 4, Return C., No. 1.

* Copies of the above charters were sent with the returns.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Returns A. to D., both inclusive.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1.—State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2.—State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3.—State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively,

4.—State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the Company.

5.—State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6.—Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Court of Aldermen, or by Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body of the Company consists of one master, four wardens, and 16 assistants. Such constitution is according to the charters.

2. The qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company are as follows:—

(1.) The master, wardens, and assistants are all liverymen of the Company; they are elected annually by the livery convened for the purpose in common hall from among themselves, in manner prescribed by the byelaws.

It is the custom to elect the senior warden of the preceding year to be the master for the current year, and to elect to the offices of the two senior wardens the second warden for the past year and the senior member of the Court of Assistants who has not already served the office of master, and to elect to the offices of junior wardens the two senior members of the livery who have not already served that office, and are otherwise qualified.

Consequently, about one half of the present livery have served the office of junior warden and have taken part in the management of the Company's affairs during their year of office, and the remainder of the livery are eligible to be elected by the livery in common hall in due course of rotation to all the offices of the governing body.

The master and wardens are elected annually in common hall on the first Tuesday in the month of July, at a common hall summoned for that purpose. They are sworn into office on the last Thursday in the same month of July, at a common hall, also summoned for that purpose, at which the assistants are elected and sworn.

The qualification of the voters at elections to the governing body is, that such voters must be persons who are entitled to attend and vote at common hall as before mentioned.

It is the custom in the Company to consider a liveryman disqualified for holding any office in the governing body who is in receipt of a pension from the Court or has failed to pay his creditors 20*s.* in the pound.

3. The governing body consists of the master and four wardens, assisted by the 16 assistants; it is their function to control and manage the property and affairs of the Company, to administer the trusts, to dispense the charities, and to elect the pensioners, to bind apprentices, and to admit qualified persons to the freedom of the Company.

The master, wardens, and four senior assistants for the time being also form a committee for the purpose of inquiring from time to time into the matters connected with the property of the Company, and to report thereon for the guidance of the Court.

The master pays no fee or fine on admission to the office.

Each senior warden pays two guineas on his admission.

Each junior warden pays 18*l.* on his admission in lieu of a dinner by ancient custom given at the expense of the junior wardens.

Should the master or any warden, when elected, refuse to serve such office, he is liable to a fine of 20*l.*; should any liveryman desire to be excused from being put in nomination as junior warden and to retain his position on the livery list, he is allowed to do so on payment of 20*l.*

An assistant when elected pays no fee or fine on admission, but is liable to a fine of 40*s.* if he refuses to serve.

No salary is paid to any of the governing body.

Each member receives a fee of 3*l.* 3*s.* for his punctual and continuous attendance at each court, which usually lasts nearly three hours.

Each member attending a meeting of a committee receives a fee of 1*l.* 1*s.* in respect of such attendance, which usually occupies a still longer time; such fees were recommended by the livery in common hall.

The master and four wardens for the time being form a standing committee for the distribution of the various pensions and charitable payments by the Company.

The master of the Company for the preceding year, the two past junior wardens of that year, and the junior member of the Court of Assistants for the time being are the auditors for auditing the accounts of the current master's year; the auditors are nominated at the common hall in accordance with the byelaws; the accounts, when audited, are presented to the Court in the form of a report.

Two members of the Court of Assistants, elected for the purpose by the Court, form the committee for considering the applications for grants to freemen and liverymen towards the education of their children. Other committees are appointed by the Court out of their own members, for the transaction of the business of the Company, as occasion requires.

4. The business which comes before the governing body at each court (which is held monthly) consists of the investigation of the receipts and payments of the Company during the previous month, the binding of apprentices, the application of new members for admission into the freedom of the Company, and their admissions; matters relating to the management and letting of the Company's properties and the administration of their funds and charities; the disposal of the Company's benevolent gifts and pensions; and all other matters concerning the general interests of the Company.

An agenda paper is prepared by the clerk for each meeting, and each matter of business is considered in the order on such paper.

The opinions of the members are taken by a show of hands on the question being put by the master from the chair and decided by a majority, the master having the casting vote.

The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are recorded in the Company's minute book, the entries in which are read over and approved at the next court, and signed by the master if correct: they are not published, nor are they otherwise accessible to any of the members of the Company other than the governing body, which includes the two junior wardens, who represent, for the time being, the livery.

5. Any member of the governing body is expected to resign or is liable to removal upon being elected a pensioner of the Company or failing to pay 20*s.* in the pound.

6. The byelaws of the Company are dated 31st May 1749 (of which a copy accompanies these returns). They were made and agreed to at a court specially convened on 31st May 1749, ratified, allowed, and approved on 2nd June 1750 by Lord Chancellor Hardwicke and the Lord Chief Justices of the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, pursuant to the Act of 19 Henry VII. c. 19.

PART II.—RETURN B.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1.—State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2.—State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3.—State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission; and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? State also (if the Company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the Company.

4.—Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons; and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5.—Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

6.—State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company? Has the Company in any, and what, cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices; and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7.—Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the Company? Are there any, and how many, members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

1. Each candidate for admission to membership of the Company must be 21 years of age, and of good character. There are two grades of membership—

(1) Freemen.
(2) Liverymen.

Women are not usually admitted to membership, although there are instances in the Company's books of women having been admitted to the freedom of the Company, but it does not appear that any of them were admitted to the livery.

2. The freedom of the Company may be obtained in the three following modes:—

(1) By patrimony.
(2) By servitude.
(3) By redemption.

The circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode are as follows:—

(1) Freedom of the father at the time of the birth of the applicant.
(2) Apprenticeship and service thereunder to a member of the Company for seven years.
(3) Election and payment of a fine.

The fees payable in respect of each admission are, in each of the above classes, as follows:—

(1) 7*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*, of which 5*l.* is paid to the Company, and the residue for stamps and fees.
(2) The like.
(3) 65*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, of which 60*l.* is paid to the Company, and the residue for stamp duties and fees.

3.—No person exercising any particular trade is now required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company.

The statutes 5 George IV. cap. 57 and 36 & 37 Vict. cap. 91 repealed all former obligations for the purpose.

One third of the present livery of the Company (independently of the freemen) are connected with the boot, shoe, and leather trades.

The Company still bears the name of "the Cordwainers'," which is an existing trade.

4.—There is no known instance of any freeman of the Company being disfranchised for any reason whatever. The byelaws make no provision for this contingency.

5.—The livery of the Company is unlimited in number; but the number has seldom exceeded 100 members, exclusive of the governing body.

The qualifications of election to the livery are as follows:—

(1) Each candidate must be a freeman of the Company.
(2) He must not be in receipt of a pension from the Company.
(3) The election of liverymen is by call of the Court, as often as they may see fit or find cause.

A fee of 40*l.* is payable by each liveryman on his election, and there is no known instance of any liveryman having been removed from the livery. The byelaws make no provision for this contingency.

6.—Apprentices attend with their masters at the Company's hall to be bound.

The number of apprentices so bound during each of the last 10 years is as follows:—

1871	None.
1872	One.
1873	None.
1874	None.
1875	None.
1876	None.
1877	None.
1878	One.
1879	None.
1880	None.

Of these none have been bound to the members following the trade the name of which is borne by the Company.

None of the fees or premiums of any of these apprentices have been paid by the Company, no application having been made for the purpose.

7.—The freedom of the City of London is not in any way a condition precedent or subsequent to the membership of this Company. As a rule, and so far as the officers of the Company are aware, the freemen of this Company subsequently become freemen of the City of London.

PART II.—Return C.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Return C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1.—It is impossible to state exactly the present number of freemen not being liverymen, deaths not being reported.

2.—The present number of the livery other than the Court is 96.

3. The present number of the Court (constituting the remaining members of the Company) is 21.

4 and 5.—The number of admissions to the freedom of this Company by the three following modes during each of the last preceding 10 years, and the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during that period, are as follows:—

Year.	Patrimony.	Servitude.	Redemption.	Calls to the Livery.
1871	2	—	—	—
1872	4	1	—	—
1873	3	—	—	10
1874	5	—	1	—
1875	6	—	—	—
1876	5	—	1	—
1877	2	—	—	—
1878	4	—	2	27
1879	3	1	1	—
1880	3	2	—	—

PART II.—Return D.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Return D.—Profits and Privileges.

1.—State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2.—State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3.—What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company

4.—(1) What is the average standing of a member of the Company when he is made a member of the governing body? and (2) for what number of years, on an average, does a member remain on the governing body?

5.—Does the Company carry on any, and what, trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1.—The advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of members of the Company in each grade of membership, are as follows:—

(1.) A freeman, or his widow, in needy circumstances, is eligible, in the discretion of the Court, for a pension, on the recommendation of two liverymen.

(2.) The child or children of a freeman is or are eligible for an annual grant of money for educational purposes under regulations laid down by the Court.

(3.) A freeman is also entitled, as a matter of right, to be admitted to the freedom of the City of London on payment of a small fee.

A liveryman has, in addition to all the above, the following advantages:—

(1.) He is entitled to attend the common hall and vote on the election of the governing body, and on all other questions, including the leasing of the Company's properties.

(2.) He is entitled to attend some of the Company's entertainments.

(3.) He, or his widow, is also eligible for a larger pension than a freeman or his widow.

(4.) He is also qualified to fill, in regular succession, the office of junior warden, auditor, assistant of the Court, senior warden and master of the Company.

(5.) He is also entitled, provided he has been a freeman of the City of London 12 months previously to any Parliamentary election, and has resided during such period within 25 miles of St. Paul's, to vote for the election of members of Parliament for the City of London, and to vote in municipal elections in common hall within the City of London.

The master and wardens and other members of the governing body have, in addition to all the above, the following advantages:—

(1.) They are entitled to a fee for their punctual and continuous attendance at each of the courts and committees, as before stated.

(2.) They and their widows are also eligible for larger pensions than the liverymen, but they thereby become disqualified to act as members of the governing body, and lose the privileges specially attached to that position.

2. The annual sums paid on an average for the preceding 10 years by the Company out of their own funds, and exclusive of charitable funds left for the purposes of charity, to the members of this Company, according to their grades of membership, are as follows:—

(1.) The fees received by the members of the governing body for attendance at courts and committees during each of the last 10 years are as follows:—

(Memorandum—In the year 1876 the Court fees were increased on the recommendation of the common hall.)

1871	704	11	0
1872	798	0	0
1873	883	1	0
1874	744	9	0
1875	805	10	0
1876	1,081	10	0
1877	1,129	16	0
1878	1,123	10	0
1879	1,140	14	0
1880	1,090	19	0

(2.) Freemen and heir widows, on an average for the preceding 10 years, 260*l.* per annum in pensions.
(3.) Liverymen and their widows, on the like average, 124*l.* per annum in pensions.

In addition to the above, educational grants have been made during the last five years to liverymen and their widows for the education of their children or grandchildren as follows:

	£	s.	d.
1880	115	18	0
1879	104	18	3
1878	142	7	0
1876	15	0	0

3. Good character, misfortune, and inability to maintain his family are held to constitute a claim for a pension or donation. The number is as follows:—

(a.) Freemen or their widows - - - 25
(b.) Liverymen or their widows - - 4
(c.) Liverymen or their widows receiving school gifts - - - - 8
(d.) Past junior wardens - - - None

Their widows - - - 50*l.* „
(f.) Master or past master - - 80*l.* „
Their widows - - - 60*l.* „

The number of the Company's present pensioners and donees respectively who are or have been members of or connected with the trade the name of which is borne by the Company is more than two thirds of the total number of pensioners.

4. The average standing of the members of the Company when made members of the governing body is as follows:—

A liveryman is generally of 15 years' standing when called upon to serve the office of junior warden.
A past junior warden is generally of 32 years' standing as a liveryman when called upon to serve the office of assistant. When once elected a member of the Court he is usually re-elected annually, and remains a member until his death, resignation, or disqualification.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

3.—No valuation of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property of the Company at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere, has ever been made; it is insured against loss or damage by fire in the sum of 3,000*l.*, which is probably about its value.

PART IV.—RETURN C.

RETURN C 1.—A list of the properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

2. A list of the properties of which the Company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same during each of the preceding 10 years?

1.—The following is a list of the properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the properties, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

Flaying Act, 48 Geo. III., cap. 71 (1808).

Under this Act, which empowered this Company in conjunction with other Companies to impose fines for bad flaying of raw hides and skins, a considerable sum of money was from time to time accumulated in the hands of the Company, and at the time the Act was repealed by the Act 5 Geo. IV. c. 57, a sum of 3,975*l.* consols and 538*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* new 3*l.* per cents represented the amount of such accumulations.

Out of these amounts a sum of 1,400*l.* consols and the whole of the new 3*l.* per cents were sold out and invested in the purchase of a freehold house, No. 31, Hatton Garden; the residue in 1871 amounted, together with some small balances, to the sum of 2,750*l.* consols.

In the year 1878 out of this sum of consols a sum of 1,468*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* was sold, and the proceeds thereof, amounting to 1,400*l.*, was advanced towards rebuilding the house, and a lease for 21 years was then granted to the tenant; at that time the rent was 140*l.* per annum, but in consequence of the outlay the rent was increased to 210*l.* per annum.

The balance of the consols, 1,281*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*, is still standing in the corporate name of the Company.

The cestui que trusts are defined by the provisions of the Act 48 Geo. III., cap. 71, to be the poor of the Company, as the master, wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Company shall direct.

The following is a statement of the whole of the amounts respectively received and expended by the Company in respect of the above properties during the last 10 years; and the whole of such sums have been expended amongst the poor of the Company, as directed by the above-mentioned Act of Parliament.

CAME'S CHARITY.

John Came, who died 13th May 1796, by his will, dated 12th August 1782, bequeathed all the shares of stock he had standing in his name in the different funds at the Bank of England at the time of his decease to the master, wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Company, upon trust (after payment of an annuity of 60*l.* to the Company), annually to distribute the dividends to and amongst clergymen's widows, blind persons, and deaf and dumb persons, in proportions of 5*l.* each, coming within the descriptions in the said will mentioned.

18,200*l.* consols and 18,200*l.* reduced annuities were transferred by the executors into the names of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Company in its corporate capacity, and such sums still remain in their names.

The following is a statement of the dividends received and expended by the Company during each of the last 10 years; the moneys are annually distributed amongst clergymen's widows, blind persons, and deaf and dumb persons, as directed by the will, and as appears in the returns annually made by this Company to the Charity Commissioners:—

MILNER'S CHARITY.

James Milner, by his will dated 19th March 1830, bequeathed the residue of his personal estate and effects to the master, wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Company, upon trust to invest the same and divide the balance among as many poor distressed fathers of families so that each father should not receive more than 20*l.*, nor less than 15*l.*, per annum.

Shortly after the death of the testator a suit in Chancery was instituted to administer the trusts of the will, and in the year 1843 a sum of 4,381*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* 3*l.* per cent. reduced annuities was transferred into the names of the master, wardens and commonalty of the Company in their corporate capacity.

This sum has now been increased, by a further receipt on account of the estate, to the sum total of 4,533*l.* 19*s.* like reduced annuities.

The dividends of the stock have been annually distributed by the Company, in accordance with the will of the testator, amongst poor fathers of families, as follows:—

WILLIAMS' CHARITY.

William Williams, by his will dated 5th January 1809, bequeathed to the Company a sum of 2,000*l.* New South Sea annuities, in trust towards making out of the dividends and annual produce thereof some provision in favour of such of the poor liverymen of the Company and their widows, not exceeding three in number at one time, as the said master, wardens, and assistants of the Company, or the major part of them, should from time to time consider to be real and proper objects of testator's bounty.

The stock has since been converted into, and is now invested in, the sum of 2,300*l.* consols, and is standing in the name of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Company in their corporate capacity.

20*l.* per annum is given yearly to three poor liverymen of the Company, or their widows, in accordance with the will of the testator. The several balances have been accumulated and invested in consols. The Company, out of their own funds, increase these allowances as mentioned in return D 3, part II.

LOVE'S CHARITY.

Elizabeth Love, by her will dated 12th March 1805, bequeathed the sum of 200*l.* South Sea annuities to the governor and trustees of the Company (subject to the life-interest of two relations, the last of whom died in the year 1837), for the benefit of blind persons.

The above-mentioned stock (together with some accumulated dividends) was paid to the Company in the year 1859, and the whole invested in the sum of 265*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.* consols.

The dividends have ever since been annually paid by the Company to the most aged blind pensioner on the Company's list of Came's pensioners in lieu of his or her share of Came's Charity, another pensioner being thereupon elected on Came's List.

WOOLNOUGH'S CHARITY.

Two sisters, Martha and Ann Woolnough (formerly pensioners on Came's Charity), having become possessed of some property, handed over to the Company the sum of 100*l.*, with a letter dated 9th December, 1863, expressing a desire that the Company would apply the same for the benefit of blind persons in the discretion of the Company.

The Company invested the amount in the purchase of 110*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* reduced annuities. The dividends are paid annually to the senior pensioner in date under Came's Charity to the blind, in addition to the pension of 5*l.* received from that charity.

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F 1.—What has been the increase or decrease from year to year of the Company's income during the last 10 years; and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation?

RETURN F 2.—Is there reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and, if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation?

1.—The following is an account of the annual increase or decrease during each of the last 10 years, ending July 1880:—

	£ s. d.
1871	398 19 10	decrease.
1872	224 18 6	increase.

1875	275 0 3	„
1876	38 1 7	„
1877	528 4 9	„
1878	135 1 8	„
1879	474 3 6	„
1880	197 16 6	decrease.

It will be seen that nearly all the Company's properties which consist of house property are held on lease: some leases will not expire for a long period; a few leases are just expiring, and much will depend upon the terms on which the properties included therein can be re-let, as the premises will probably have to be re-let on building leases. It is not anticipated there will be any permanent increase in the Company's income for many years.

2.—The only property of the Company in the value of which any permanent increase can be expected consists of the 3½ acres of land at Enfield Chase, and this must necessarily depend upon the question whether the requirements of the neighbourhood will convert the land into a building property. At present there is no prospect of this.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G 1.—What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
RETURN G 2.—In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
RETURN G 3.—In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
RETURN G 4.—Whether the Company's accounts are published?

1.—The leasing of the Company's estates and property is subject to confirmation by the livery in common hall, as before mentioned; all questions arising under such leases and other matters relating to the management of the properties are dealt with by the governing body assisted by the permanent committee appointed for that purpose, as before mentioned.

2.—The receipts are taken by the clerk and examined by the renter-warden in the presence of the Court, and are under the control of the Court; payments are made by order of the Court by cheques signed by the master or senior warden and the clerk.

3.—The Company's accounts are audited annually by four auditors appointed under the Company's byelaws, as before mentioned, and signed by them. The accounts are then rendered to the governing body in the form of a report.

4. The Company's accounts are not otherwise published, but are accessible to all the members of the governing body, including the two junior wardens, who are the representatives for the time being of the livery.

PART IV.—RETURN H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income, from all sources, of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

A detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such last 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of such 10 years.

The following is a detailed statement of the income, from all sources of the Company during each of the last 10 years ending July 1880, excluding the sums received by the Company on admissions to membership. (See Return B 1, Part 4):—

The ordinary current liabilities of the Company are discharged out of the current receipts as soon as they are certified to be correct.

The Company have no mortgages or debenture debts.

PART IV.—RETURN K.

RETURN K.—Has the Company any relation with the Universities or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values and the periods for which they are respectively tenable, and state how the same are awarded—whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company has no relation with the Universities or with any of the colleges in them, nor has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift, except that under the will of James Shawe, mentioned under Part IV. Return A 13, a sum of 8*l.* annually is payable in equal proportions to two poor scholars of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge. The Company add to these exhibitions out of their own funds annually the sum of 32*l.*, so that each scholar may have the benefit of 20*l.* per annum. These exhibitions are tenable for the period of five years during residence at either of the Universities. They are awarded by the governing body of the Company upon being satisfied that the applicants are deserving persons. The competition is not limited to relations of members, who have no preference.

PART IV.—RETURN L.

RETURN L.—1, 2, 3. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company?

4. Has the Company during the last 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any churches or chapels, and when, and out of what funds, in each case respectively?

1, 2, 3. There is no ecclesiastical benefice in the gift of the Company.

4. The Company has not during the last 10 years built or contributed to the building of any church or chapel.

PART IV.—RETURN M.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means, if any, so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects, during each of the last preceding 10 years?

As before stated, the Company subsidises and encourages general education by the gifts which it makes to its members, liverymen or freemen, for the education of their children, and towards the sustenance of two undergraduates at the Universities.

In the year 1876 the Company voted 105*l.* per annum for these educational grants, and the sum has been subsequently increased to 200*l.* per annum should occasion arise for such expenditure.

The following is the amount expended on these objects during each of the preceding 10 years:—

	Educational Grants to the Children of Members.	Grants to Undergraduates.
	£ s. d.	£
1871	—	12
1872	—	12
1873	—	12
1874	—	12
1875	—	12
1876	15 0 0	12
1877	30 0 0	32
1878	142 7 0	32
1879	104 18 3	32
1880	115 18 0	32

The Company has, with the increase of their means, endeavoured to ascertain in what manner it could advance the technical education or improvement of the special trade or manufacture with which it is titularly connected, and the governing body gladly embraced the opportunity of giving their support to the movement for founding the City and Guilds of London Institute for the advancement of technical education in connection with trade and manufacture generally.

The Company was one of the 12 Companies who first initiated that movement, and has voted 1,000*l.* towards the erection of the Central Institution in Exhibition Road South Kensington, and subscribes 250*l.* a year towards its maintenance and support.

The Company have thought it right as an act of courtesy to furnish the particulars required by the Commissioners, although the Company are advised the Commissioners have no power to require such particulars; but they respectfully insist that the fact of their having made the above returns is not to be construed as an admission on their part of any obligation to do so, or that the corporate (as distinguished from the charitable) property is other than private, or can be otherwise treated.

The Company have not replied to the inquiry as to the documents and conditions under which they have acquired their private property, as they are advised to claim before the Commissioners the right (which they would be entitled to assert in legal proceedings before Courts having power to enforce discovery) of protecting from disclosure their titles to the private property of which they are in possession; but with this exception they have given all the information required by the Commissioners.

The Company desire to call the attention of the Commissioners to the fact that their beneficial interest in the rents of certain estates devised to them by a member and benefactor of this Company has been made the subject of judicial investigation in the Chancery Courts, and they would refer the Commissioners to the case of "The Attorney-General v. The Cordwainers' Company," reported in Mylne and Keene's Reports, vol. 3, p. 534, in which the Company's rights were upheld.

The Company further desire, in the most formal manner, to place upon record that their readiness to assist the Commissioners is not be taken as any admission on their part of any jurisdiction in the Crown, or of the right of any power in the State (except under legal process, and before the competent legal tribunals) to inquire into the Company's private property, or to deal therewith in disregard of the rights and interests of its members. They desire further to claim that if any question should arise as to whether any particular property is or is not the private property of the Company, every such question should be determined only by the courts of law.

PART V.

The governing body at the present time have no suggestion to make as to measures of reform or improvement for the consideration of the Commissioners; but should any measures be, in the judgment of the Commissioners, expedient or necessary "for the improving or altering the "constitution of this Company, or the appropriation or "administration of the property or revenues thereof," it is insisted that all such alterations, if made at all, ought only to be made subject and without prejudice to all the existing rights and interests of the members of this Company.

The Company, however, confidently hope that the Commissioners will not recommend any measure which would infringe or impair those rights and privileges, or deprive the Company of the means of managing their own affairs.

APPENDIX A.

THIS Company gave some information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

CURRIERS' COMPANY.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The exact date unknown, but previous to 1363, in that year it is recorded that the Company contributed five marks to aid King Edward III. in carrying on his wars with France.

There are no documents in existence referring to the origin of the Company.

B.—8th August 1583. Charter granting the Curriers' Company its coat of arms.

30th April 1606. Charter granted by King James I.

ABSTRACT of CHARTER dated April 30, 1606.

D.

Date.	Authority.	Statement of purport of decision.
13th September 1415	Thomas Fauconer, mayor, and aldermen of the City of London.	In answer to petition or bill presented by certain good men of the mystery of "Corriours," it was ordained— That the good people of the said mystery may yearly elect two wardens to govern all workmen of the said mystery; To seize all false goods; That no person of the said mystery keep or put to work in the said mystery any person if he is not a freeman or apprentice of the said city on penalty of 13*s.* 4*d.* That no servant of the said mystery make any congregation unless with assent of the wardens. That no person of the said mystery make any smouldering fire to the annoyance of the neighbourhood. That no person of the said mystery work on any vigil, or after 12 o'clock on Saturday after the hour of noon. N.B.—The original is not in the possession of the Company.
Not stated	Mallory, mayor, aldermen, and common council.	The wardens of the Curriers' Company shall have the nomination of all persons as should be permitted to collect "flottis" or kitchen stuff within the said city during the pleasure of the Court of Common Council.
1st June 1526	John Allen, mayor, and common council.	This order did not specially mention the Curriers' Company, but was a general order to the City of London regarding apprentices.
2 Elizabeth	City of London authorities	Forms of oaths on taking office in the Curriers' Company as wardens, clerk, beadle, searchers, and also Spanish leather dressers inhabiting in and about the city.
20th April 1581	Braunche (mayor), aldermen of City of London, and one sheriff.	In reference to the complaint of John Heyborne, currier, against the master, wardens, and assistants of the Curriers' Company, it was ordered— That there should be no goings of journeymen to weddings or burials; That a poor's chest be provided for relief, &c.; That a balance of 8*s.* 4*d.* due be paid into such chest, and that the assistants should cause collection of quarterage to be made. That the said Heyborne be remitted his arrears.
8th August 1583	King of arms	Grant of arms, see (Return A).
(1597)	Guildhall chamber	Release after service of six years of Thomas Wittam from indentures of apprenticeship to Thomas Standhancke, citizen and currier.
		Reformed Byelaws.
19th January 1587	Barne, mayor, Haywarde, recorder and alderman.	The wardens and fellowship yearly to choose three to be wardens. The persons chosen to be presented and sworn in the mayor's court. The wardens shall have whole oversight of the Company. The institution of assistants. Power of search in all workhouses to wardens. Power to levy penalties for bad work. No freeman to set any foreigner on work (except apprentice of freeman). No assemblies without wardens consent. No workman to make dangerous fire or any fire at night. Work to cease on Saturdays at 12 o'clock, and on festivals, except works of cleansing. No work of the trade in any shops opening into thoroughfares of the city.

Date.	Authority.	Statement of purport of decision.
These byelaws were sanctioned by the ChancellorTreasurer of England and two chief justices, pursuant to 19 Henry VII. (25th January) on the 1st June 1587.	- - - - - -	Not to set anyone at work who had disobeyed ordinances. Not to sue or arrest one another for any cause without license. No apprentice to be taken under 15 years of age, and that "he be shewed" to the wardens before being bound. As to number of apprentices. Every person shall present at the Company's common hall his apprentice at end of his term. If any journeyman "play" for lack of work being his master's default the master to pay him 4*d.* if he "play" of his own default to pay master 4*d.* If a person of the Company "in open audience" revile a brother currier the person so doing to forfeit 6*s.* 8*d.* The wardens, with consent of the assistants that have been wardens, may choose into the livery; penalties for refusal of such office. Institution of stewards to provide dinner for livery and their wives. Penalties (after warning by beadle for irregularities). Penalties for disobedience to the Company's hall. Nomination of quarter days. That twice a year the whole Company and trade free of the Company, and "any foreigner using the art" shall assemble at the hall, and the clerk shall read "The Book of Byelaws" so that no ignorance be pleaded. That every freeman take an oath (form given) previous to being made free. That every householder take an oath previous to being made a householder. Oath for all other parties.
4th September 1597 -	Billinglie, lord mayor - - -	A matter in variance between the master and wardens of the Curriers and the assistants on the one hand, and the fellowship of the Curriers' Company on the other, having been referred to the Lord Mayor, it is ordered— That master and wardens shall nominate two (one to be of the assistants the other not an assistant) and the fellowship shall elect one younger warden.
——	Sir Richard Martin, mayor - -	Petition by the Curriers' Company and order (many of the Company having died of the late plague). As to taking persons outside the Company into the trade. "The journeymen free of the said Company are altogether dead of the late plague."
9th December 1594 -	The lord mayor and common council -	The Curriers Company having preferred a complaint against the Haberdashers and other "foryns" from the liberties of this city associated with them for various omissions, and levying of unlawful fines— The discretion and judgment of the Court was that the Haberdashers should cease from troubling the "Corriours" or other companies as they had done.

(All the documents mentioned in this Return have been translated from the Norman French and early English.)

From reading the early minute books, it appears that the lord mayor, aldermen, and council had the supreme authority to make byelaws and regulations for all the city trades, and that the authorities of each guild were the lieutenants to whom the orders were given, and whose duty it was to make each other known throughout the trade it concerned and see to its being obeyed.

E.—The Company has not in its possession any documents under this return other than those already mentioned.

F.—The history of the Curriers' Company and its present position are so fully stated in the returns given that it is not thought necessary to give any special reply to the question under this head.

G.—A license in mortmain under the aforesaid Charter of King James I.

H.—Under the Charter of King James I. there is vested in the Company a power of supervision and correction over all persons exercising the art of Curriers in the City of London and the suburbs, and within three miles thereof, and these powers were embodied in divers byelaws from time to time enacted under the Charter by the Court of the Company.

These powers have long since ceased to be exercised, but the Curriers' Company prosecuted on behalf of the trade in 1805 and up to 1834 the scale of prices for the trade drawn up under the auspices of the Company was used in London and throughout the kingdom, such scale being printed by the Curriers' Company and copies then frequently applied for.

The Company has no knowledge of the circumstances under which they fell into desuetude.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

PART II.— CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all and which of the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The master, 2 wardens, and 12 assistants constitute the court. This constitution is in accordance with the charter of King James I.

2. The master and wardens are elected from the livery the renter warden being generally taken by seniority from the livery, and then usually proceeding to the offices of upper warden and master.

The election is on the 15th October as provided by charter of James I., and is made by the court of the Company.

The assistants are elected by the court as vacancies occur from those who have served the office of master. The election is by a majority of votes, two or more candidates being proposed, and each member of the court affixing a mark in the minute book to the name of the candidate he prefers.

3. The master and wardens have the general control of the business of the Company during their year of office, and the renter warden is especially charged with the care of the finances and accounts. These functions are exercised subject to the approval and in conjunction with the court of assistants.

The fees on admission are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
As renter warden, upper warden, and masters	47	5	0
Assistant	31	10	0
Those not serving when called upon in rotation to serve as renter warden, upper warden, and master	31	10	0
Assistant	15	15	0

Each member of the court receives a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* if present when the court is called.

The courts average seven in number during the year.

4. All matters connected with the Company e.g., admission of new members, paying the pensioners, consideration of petitions from public institutions and poor members of the Company, the management of finances, election of officers, and all other things relating to the business and government of the Company.

The business is conducted by the usual form of notice and amendment, which when seconded, are duly put from the chair, and are carried or negatived by a majority, the decision being entered in the minute book.

The courts are held at two or three o'clock in the afternoon at the hall of the Company, and average as already stated seven in the year. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published, and are not accessible to any members of the Company except the court.

5. Any member of the governing body failing to pay 20*s.* in the £ ceases by the byelaws to be a member.

The removal would be effected should the insolvent member not voluntarily resign by resolution. The following is a copy of the byelaw referred to.

"15 Oct. 1813. That any member of this Company who "shall have been bankrupt or compounded with his "creditors, and shall not have paid 20*s.* in the £ shall not "be eligible to be elected a member of the court of assis- "tants or into the offices of master or wardens of this "Company and in case any member of this court shall "hereafter become bankrupt or compound with his creditors "he shall thereby become disqualified and his place be "declared vacant."

The Company has no record of a member being removed on any ground but the above.

6. The resolutions of the governing body at the present time form the byelaws upon which the business of the Company is now transacted (as to Byelaws in the past see Return D to Part I).

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? State also (if the Company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

CURRIERS' COMPANY—continued.

6. State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade if any, the name of which is borne by the Company? Has the Company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the Company? Are there any and how many members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

1. The name of any person desirous of joining the Company is submitted to a committee of the governing body, who instruct the clerk.

The grades are freeman, master of the household, liveryman, renter warden, upper warden, master, past master, and member of the court of assistants.

The Company has no female members, and at the present time a woman would not be admitted to membership unless she was solely carrying on a business and wished to take apprentices who desired at the expiration of their indentures to obtain the Company's freedom by servitude, and then the admission would only extend to the freedom.

2. Patrimony, servitude, redemption, and presentation.

A person whose father was a freeman of the Company before such person was born, on the Company's sanctioning his admission, can take up his freedom by patrimony.

A person duly serving indentures of apprenticeship to a member of the Company on taking up his freedom would take it by servitude. Freedom by redemption is the ordinary case of a stranger joining the Company.

Presentation when the freedom is conferred upon a person by the governing body without payment of fees.

Freedom by patrimony, 4*l.* 13*s.* (including 1*l.* stamp).
" " redemption, 10*l.* 12*s.* (including 3*l.* stamp).
" " servitude, 3*l.* 12*s.*
" " presentation, 3*l.* to Government, paid by Company.

3. There is no process in use at the present time either on the Company's part to compel any persons to procure admission, or on the part of such persons to compel the Company to admit them.

Persons exercising the trade of curriers do still become members of the Company.

Eighteen curriers are at the present time liverymen.

4. Freemen in this Company are not now liable to disfranchisement; no instance has occurred since 1800.

5. The governing body has never had occasion to limit the livery: its number being about 100, they could by resolution prevent further addition at any time.

The qualifications for election to the livery is that the committee before alluded to report the applicant as suitable for admission.

The electors are the members of the court of assistants, with the master and wardens.

The applicant, being free of the Company, attends on a day when the court is sitting and makes his application, which the court may grant. Fee, 31*l.* 10*s.*

Liverymen are not liable to removal from the livery.

6.—

0	1	2	2	1	1	1	0	1	0

None of the nine apprentices were bound to members following the trade of curriers.

The Company did not pay either the fees or the premiums in any of the above nine cases.

7. The freedom of the City of London is not a condition precedent or subsequent to membership; on the joining of a new member the clerk gives a certificate that he has been admitted to the freedom of the Company, which is taken to the Chamberlain's Office, and on payment of a small fee such member is also admitted a freeman of the City.

Nearly all the members are free of the City, the only exceptions would be those gentlemen who have neglected to attend at the Chamberlain's Office. The certificate is furnished by the clerk as a matter of course.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. The present number of freemen cannot be given exactly, as notice of death in many cases is not given to the Company. During the last 30 years there have been 131 admissions to the freedom; therefore, taking into consideration the survivors of those admitted previous to 1850 and those who have died of the 131, it is estimated that there are at the present time 118 freemen.

2. The present number of the livery, inclusive of the governing body, is 110 (which number is included in the above 118).

3. All members are either freemen or liverymen.

4. Freedoms:—

	Patrimony.	Servitude.	Redemption.	Livery.
1871	—	—	5	5
1872	—	—	1	1
1873	1	—	7	8
1874	—	—	10	10
1875	2	—	14	16
1876	1	—	6	7
1877	—	—	2	2
1878	—	—	3	3
1879	—	—	2	2
1880	1	—	2	2

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) Master, Warden, or otherwise a member of the Governing Body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company.

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member of the Company when he is made a member of the Governing Body, and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the Governing Body?

5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1. The only advantage in being a freeman is that a person free of the Company would of course be considered before a stranger in the charitable gifts of the Company.

The advantage of being a liveryman—

(1.) A vote at parliamentary elections for the City of London, elections for the Lord Mayor, sheriffs, chamberlain, and other corporate offices in the gift of the livery.

(2.) The Company, as a rule, in every year give two entertainments, to which every liveryman is invited.

(3.) A liveryman of the Company in straitened circumstances on petition, to the court and satisfying their enquiries, would probably be voted a sum of money.

The advantage of being master or warden or a member of the governing body—

(1.) The receipt of a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* at each court for attending.

(2.) The privilege (as regards master and wardens) of inviting two friends at each dinner, one of whom must be a liveryman.

(3.) Each member of the court of assistants about once a year is entitled to ask one friend to a dinner.

2. In every year there are seven meetings or courts, and perhaps one special court, so that a fee of 1*l.* 1*s.* being received for each punctual attendance of two or four hours, the master, wardens, and members of the court could each possibly receive the sum of 8*l.* 8*s.* annually for the last 10 years.

From June 1880 the fee of each member is raised to 2*l.* 2*s.*

No member of the court has any personal patronage.

Without taking into consideration payments under Dawes' and Jackson's charities, full particulars of which are given in Return 1 to Part I., an annual average sum of 56*l.* has been given in sums of 2*l.* to 10*l.* to poor members and their families.

The only pension was one of 20*l.* annually paid to an ex-member of the governing body or court of assistants who was in straitened circumstances; this was paid from June 1868 to June 1876.

3. The Company has no funds specially applicable to pensions except those set out in Return 1 to Part I., but should a member of the court of assistants or a past master become destitute the Company would probably grant a small pension. All cases which on enquiry are found to be of honest poverty of liverymen, freemen, or their families are relieved as far as practicable by a donation.

At the present time the Company has one annuitant of 30*l.

The number of donees varies, but it may be said that there are at the present time 16 donees, annually averaging 3*l.* 10*s.* each, of which donees 10 are curriers or their families.

4. An average period of 15 years elapses from the time of joining the livery to be elected renter warden, the following year the office of upper warden, and the next year that of master, is taken, and then if there is no vacancy in the court of assistants, the master retires from the governing body to the list of past masters, whence, on a vacancy occurring in the court by death or resignation, he may come on in turn, and is elected an assistant during life and solvency.

On an average a member remains 18 years on the court of assistants.

5. The Curriers' Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture whatever.

* N.B.—Since these Returns were prepared this annuitant has died.

Part III.—Officers and Servants.

A., B., and C.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—The architect, Mr. John Belcher, paid by commission when employed, is a liveryman and past master of the Company.

The clerk, Mr. Edward Burkitt,—

To attend the governing body during its meetings, and all members of the Company whenever required;

To conduct all correspondence on behalf of the Company;

To advise legally, and act as its solicitor generally, but is allowed to practice independently;

The clerk has charge of the Company's records and keeps all accounts and minutes;

Administers all oaths to gentlemen joining the Company or taking office.

The clerk has offices, with fires, lighting, &c. for himself and clerks in the Company's hall, is paid a salary of 200*l.* and fees averaging 15*l.* yearly. Is a liveryman of the Company.

B.—The beadle, William Bartlett,—

To attend the Company on all occasions when required;

To live and sleep at the Company's hall.

To do all household work at the hall;

To attend at the Guildhall on all elections in the gift of the livery.

To collect quarterage.

The beadle has apartments, firing, gas, &c. for himself and family, and is paid 40*l.* a year, and fees averaging 5*l.* per annum.

The beadle is a liveryman of the Company

C.—The officers and servants are appointed by the master, wardens, and court of assistants.

Rylands' premises consist of a great deal more than the lease comprises, and on enquiry to the vestry clerk it is found that there is no separate assessment for the portion demised by the Company which is included in the total assessment of Messrs. Rylands' premises, viz:— 6,200	5,167	1 000	16th Aug. 1516. By deed of grant of this date certain property in London Wall was conveyed to the Curriers' Company. See Return C., Part I. (See Remarks.*)	No conditions. Power of distress on the property if the Company did not pay a fine of 40*s.* for making certain default. See Return C. to Part I.	Full particulars will be found in the Company's Return C. to Part I.	* It is supposed the curriers were previously to 1500 settled in or near the parish of St. Alphage, and that by this gift the grantor added to their property; for as the civic records shew that the Curriers' Co. was previously to 1500 flourishing and entrusted with the superintendence of an important trade, it is evident they must have had an office or common hall where business could be transacted. A great many records were no doubt destroyed by the Great Fire, as were all the Company's houses and also their hall, so that the accuracy of the answer cannot be guaranteed.

When freemen and liverymen are made, the poor box is presented and is enriched at the discretion of the new members; during the last ten years the Company has received from this source 32*l.* 10*s.*

Part IV.—F.

Return F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

Return F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
F. (1.)—The Curriers' Company in 1870 received a net income of 804*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.*
In 1871 the Company received 897*l.* 9*s.* increase	—	93 2 3

The Company has no reason to expect an increase of income during the next 10 years, but a decrease, as it is not anticipated the amount of fees received from new members will be so large.

F. (2.)—With the exception of the reversion of the Company's freeholds at present demised to Mr. Rylands and Mr. Moss (Return A. 1, Part IV.), there is no reason to expect any permanent increase in value in any of the property of the Company.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

1. The management is entirely vested in the master, wardens, and court of assistants, the governing body.

All correspondence received by the clerk with reference to the Company's affairs is laid before the master, wardens, and court of assistants at their next meeting, and should a question be important and urgent the clerk would be directed to call a special court for its consideration.

2. The dividends of any stock belonging to the Company are from time to time received by the members of the court of assistants in whose names the stock is standing, by them paid to the clerk, and by him paid to the London Joint Stock Bank, where the Company at the present time has an account.

Rents are received by the clerk and paid in to the credit of the Company at the bank.

Payments by the Company if over 5*l.* are made by cheque signed by two members of the court of assistants appointed for such purpose, and countersigned by the clerk.

Payments by the Company if under 5*l.* and sanctioned by the master, wardens, and court of assistants are made by the clerk.

Claims for rates and taxes are checked and paid by the clerk, and vouchers produced by him.

The master, wardens, and court of assistants have thus complete control over receipts and disbursements.

3. Annually by the five junior members of the court of assistants, who prepare a signed statement and report which are laid before the master, wardens, and court of assistants in December, and on the adoption of the report it is entered in the minute book.

4. The Company's accounts are not published. The accounts are only accessible to the governing body.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years; and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of such 10 years.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

With the exception of a yearly subscription of 2*l.* 2*s.* to the Cripplegate Ward Schools, which has been paid for the last 50 years, and a vote of 21*l.* towards the funds of the City and Guilds of London Institute for the advancement of technical education, the Company has not expended anything in subsidizing educational movements.

The court is considering whether any steps can be taken either by technical instruction or otherwise to improve and benefit the trade with which the Company is by ancient constitution connected. It is also considering whether any portion of the income of the Company can be applied to the purposes of higher education.

In reference to this it must be observed that it is only within the last few years that the Company has been possessed of any income applicable to any extraneous purposes, and has not yet entirely defrayed the cost of its new hall and fittings.

APPENDIX A.

This Company gave full information to the Commissioners of 1834. At that date curriers in the city generally entered the Company, and comparatively few belonged to other companies; upwards of two thirds of the Company and 10 members of the ruling body were or had been curriers by trade.

The last time when the Company took any action with respect to the trade was during the strikes of 1803 and 1805. In the former year they appointed a committee of masters, which met the journeymen for the purposes of regulating prices. The scale then prepared appears to have been much used in 1834. In 1805 they apparently prosecuted some of the workmen, and put down the strike.

The Company gave the following abstract of their receipts and expenditure:—

CUTLERS' COMPANY.

The Returns were accompanied by a Letter from the Clerk of the Cutlers' Company from which the following is an extract:—

"In giving the information contained in the above Returns, I am desired to state that the readiness of the Cutlers' Company to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as an admission of any right in the Crown or any other jurisdiction to inquire into the private property of the Cutlers' Company, or to deal with it in disregard of their rights. I am desired also to record their claim, that if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust or is the private property of the company, every such question must be determined only by the Courts of Law."

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—There are no means for supplying the exact date of the foundation of the Company, but it would appear that the company was in existence in the year 49 Edward III., as at that time it was stated to have elected two members of the Court of Common Council. There are no means of ascertaining the circumstances in which the company had its origin, except that in a recital of a charter granted by Henry VI., it would appear to have been granted by reason of the losses and unfortunate casualties that happened to the men of the mystery of the cutlers of the City of London by sea, they then not being able to live but by the benevolence of well-disposed people.

B.—It would appear that the first charter granted to the company was in the reign of Henry V., 1415, which was confirmed by a charter of Henry VI. in 1422. Charters were also granted by Henry VIII. in 1509, Philip and Mary in 1553, Elizabeth in 1558, and James I. in 1607. James II., in 1685, revoked these charters; but in 1668 the Act of James II. was made void, and by a statute of William and Mary in 1689 the charter of James I. was confirmed, and it was subsequently re-affirmed by a charter of Queen Anne in 1703. The charter, therefore, of James I., which was granted in 1607, is now the governing charter of the Cutlers' Company. The company has no means of furnishing an abstract of the earlier charters, nor would this appear to be necessary, inasmuch as they are documents of record. A copy of the charter of James I. can be supplied if desired. It was granted on the petition of the Cutlers' Company of London for the better rule and government of the company, and for the avoiding of divers deceits and abuses used in the mystery of cutlery to the damage and loss of the King's subjects.

C.—The company has no trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting it.

D.—The company is not aware of any decrees of court, whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or Common Council, except an act of Common Council of 15th December 1756, which provided for all persons exercising the trade of a cutler within the City, or the liberties thereof, taking up the freedom of the Cutlers' Company, and an act of Common Council of 12th December 1839 repealing the act of 15th December 1756 on the petition of the Cutlers' Company, on the ground that such act had long ceased to have any beneficial operation and was productive of needless restriction and hardship.

E.—The company has no other documents not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which found, regulate, or affect the company.

F.—The company has no materials for furnishing a concise history of it from the time of its foundation to the present day. Many of the early minute books are not now in existence and were probably destroyed by the Fire of London, others are illegible; and those that are in existence are not sufficiently complete to enable a history of the company to be prepared. It would appear from the minute books that the Cutlers' Company in early times acted as far as possible in the interests of its own particular trade by hearing and determining disputes amongst cutlers and making orders for the good government of the trade.

G.—A licence in mortmain was granted to the company on the 28th of May 1839 to hold lands to the extent of 200*l.* per annum. This licence was supplementary to the power contained in the charter of holding lands to the extent of 100 marks (66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*) per annum. This licence is now unexhausted to the extent of about 90*l.* per annum. The company had also power granted to it under the Metropolitan Railway (Additional Powers) Act, 1866, s. 43, to expend the purchase money of certain property in Houndsditch taken by the railway in the purchase of land. This purchase money amounted to 6,238*l.*

H.—The charter of James I. provides that the master, wardens, and assistants of the company shall have the oversight, view, search, correction, and government of all persons whatsoever occupying, exercising, or using the mystery or trade of cutlers within the City of London and suburbs thereof, and within three miles of the City, as well within places exempt as not exempt; and shall have power and authority, according to the laws of the realm, to punish and correct offenders for offences, deceits, falsehoods, abuses, or misdemeanours by the false, insufficient, or deceitful occupation or use of the mystery or trade of cutlers, according to their demerits in that behalf; and the mayor, justices, sheriff, constables, and all other officers, ministers, and subjects, are ordered to aid, help, and assist the master, wardens, and assistants in the matters aforesaid. By virtue of the ordinances of the company, sanctioned and approved by the Lord Keeper, the Lord High Treasurer, and the Lords Chief Justices in the reign of Queen Anne, 1703, the master and wardens of the company, with so many of the assistants as shall be by the master and wardens, or any two or more of them, appointed in that behalf, may four times in the year, or oftener if need should require, at convenient times in the daytime, in a peaceable manner, enter into the shops, warehouses, and workhouses of any persons, members of the company, using the said mystery, or that do and shall make for sale or sell anything thereunto appertaining, and there search and survey the goods and other things appertaining to the mystery, within the City or suburbs thereof within three miles of the City, and shall take account of all the marks and workmanship of all and every such persons making or working for sale, or which thereafter should make or work for sale, or sell any manner of swords, daggers, rapiers, hangers, woodknives, pen-knives, razors, or surgeon's instruments, or small knives, skeynes, hilts, pummels, battleaxes, halberts, or any other weapons or blades or other things belonging to the mystery; and if in their searches they shall find any false or deceitful work or workmanship, or any other matter of misdemeanour concerning the mystery within the City or limits aforesaid, then it should be lawful for them to assess some competent and reasonable fine upon every such offender, so that it exceed not the sum of 40*s.* for any one offence; and if any such person using the mystery of cutlers or thereunto belonging or appertaining should be found resisting or disobedient to the master, wardens, or assistants, or any five, four, or more of them, contrary to the ordinances, then it should be lawful for the master, wardens, and assistants to assess and state some reasonable pain on every such disobedient person for every time that he should so offend, the said fines and pains to be levied and bestowed to such uses as are therein ordered. The ordinances also require that every member of the commonalty shall use his own mark, and register it if required, on pain of 40*s.* fine. It also provides that no sword cutler shall buy or sell any foreign hilts on pain of a 40*s.* fine, and that no sword cutler shall employ anyone in his work but such as shall have submitted to the rules of the company, under a like penalty of 40*s.* The powers of control conferred upon the company are not now and have not been for many years exercised. The powers of the company do not appear to have been ever formally abrogated; but it has not for many years appeared practicable or for the advantage of the trade to exercise them.

PART I.—I.

A LIST of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

The only charities which are under the management of the company are those of which a return is made to the Charity Commissioners. The following arise under the will of Thomas Bucke, dated the 3rd of December 1566:—To the master and wardens of St. John's College Cambridge, an annuity of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* towards the providing of some scholar of his name or kindred within the Isle of Ely or elsewhere, if any may be found, and in default thereof to such scholar whose father shall be free of the company of Cutlers; to the poor inhabitants in Fleet Lane and dwellers in the alleys thereof, 40*s.* a year; to the poor of Wilburton, 40*s.* a year; to Christ's Hospital, 20*s.* a year; to St. Thomas's Hospital, 20*s.* a year; to the Armourers' Company, 13*s.* 4*d.* a year; to the parish of St. Sepulchre for the repairs of the church, 20*s.* a year. These annual payments are charged upon No. 161 Fleet Street, at present let on a ground rent of 160*l.* per annum of the estimated value of 4,000*l.*; some houses in Fleet Lane, which were some years ago taken by the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway under their compulsory powers and upon some leasehold property at Egham, the lease of which expired many years ago. The exhibition of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum was voluntarily increased by the Cutlers' Company many years ago to 30*l.* per annum, which is paid every year either to a son of a freeman of the Company or some other deserving applicant, or to some member of St. John's College Cambridge, who may be recommended by the master of the college. The remaining annual payments have been made regularly for the past ten years. Under the will of John Craythorne, dated 21st November, 11th Queen Elizabeth, a sum of 10*l.* is directed to be given annually in coals to the poor of the parish of St. Brides; also a sum of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* towards the maintenance of two scholars within the universities of Oxford and Cambridge; also a sum of 3*l.* yearly amongst the poor prisoners in Newgate, the King's Bench, Marshalsea, and Gatehouse. These sums are charged annually upon an inn known as "Belle Sauvage," and all other the houses, buildings, &c., to the same belonging, and a messuage formerly known by the name of the "Rose and Crown." These properties are now represented by houses in Belle Sauvage Yard, Boy Court, and Ludgate Hill, let at rents amounting to 1,170*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* per annum, and of the estimated value of 25,000*l.* The exhibitions have been for many years past voluntarily increased by the company to 20*l.* each, and the remaining payments have been regularly made for ten years past, except that with reference to the prison charities, they have for some few years been paid under a scheme of the Charity Commissioners to the clerk of the Mercers' Company.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the government body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decision of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any and which of the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such bye-laws.

1. The master, wardens, and court of assistants constitute the governing body of the company. Their constitution is according to the charter, and consists of a master upper warden, and under warden, and 20 assistants. The charter appointed 18 assistants by name, but provides that there shall for ever thereafter be one of the company who shall be called the master, two of the company who shall be called wardens, and that there shall and may be 20 of the company to be called assistants, who shall assist and aid the master and wardens of the company in all causes, matters, and business touching or concerning the commonalty.

2. The charter merely provides that the master, wardens, and assistants shall be elected out of the commonalty of the mystery of the cutlers of London. The ordinances provide as follows:—That the master, wardens, and assistants shall agree upon and present to the livery the names of two or three meet and sufficient persons, being of the number of the then present master, wardens, and assistants; after which the master, wardens, assistants, and livery shall, by majority of voices, or by their marks with a pin upon paper, elect one of those two or three persons to be master of the company for a year thence next following; and similar formalities are directed for the election of wardens. The master, wardens, and assistants are empowered to elect such of the most able and sufficient persons of the company as they shall think fit to be assistants to the master and wardens. The master and wardens are to be elected upon the eve of the Holy Trinity, or within seven days following, and are to be sworn in on the first Thursday after Midsummer day, or within seven days following. The assistants are elected for life and practically from the livery in rotation; but the company does not admit the right to election on the court by mere seniority, and if the person next in rotation is deemed in any way objectionable, or not fit to come upon the court, he is passed over. Under the bye-laws, no person can be elected on the court unless he has always paid twenty shillings in the £. The voters at elections to the governing body are the master, wardens, and court of assistants.

3. The governing body have the absolute management of the affairs of the company. The master acts as chairman, the two wardens assisting him. The rents of the company are received by the master and wardens. The master has power under the bye-laws of the company to sanction payments not exceeding 5*l.* in amount, subject to this all payments of the company are recommended by a committee consisting of the master, wardens, and past masters, who are ex officio members, and four other members of the court, who have either served or fined for the office of master, and have been elected by the court by ballot. The payments recommended by the committee are submitted to the court for confirmation. The assistants assist the master and wardens at the courts of the company; and it is their duty to admit all freemen and liverymen of the company, and to manage and let its properties. The court elect five stewards annually from among the livery to give a dinner to the master, wardens, court, livery, and officers of the company on Lord Mayor's day. This has for very many years been commuted by payment of 10 guineas by each steward; the dinner, which is not now given on Lord Mayor's day, but on some other day in November, being provided out of the funds of the company. Each assistant on being elected to the court pays a fine of 41*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* if a liveryman by patrimony or servitude, and 54*l.* if a liveryman by redemption. An assistant elected master but not serving the office pays a fine of 40*l.*, and an assistant elected warden but not serving the office pays a fine of 20*l.* An assistant receives 3*l.* 3*s.* 0*d.* for each attendance at a court of the company.

4. The ordinary business of the court is the binding of apprentices, the admission of freemen, the election of liverymen, and the management of the property and charities of the company; to consider the recommendations of the committee for payment of accounts, &c., the report of their surveyor as to their properties, their financial position, and to consider applications for charitable or other donations. The court of the company meets monthly. The opinions of the members are taken by vote, and, if necessary, by ballot. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are entered on the minutes of the company, and are accessible to the court, but to no other member of the company.

5. Under the ordinances of the company, the assistants are made removable from time to time by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number of them, at the will and pleasure of the master, wardens, and assistants or the greater number of them.

6. The company has no bye-laws sanctioned by the courts of law or by the courts of aldermen or common council, but it from time to time frames bye-laws for the better management of the affairs of the company under the terms of the charter, which provides that the court may ordain or make any constitutions, laws, ordinances, statutes, articles, and orders, which shall seem reasonable, profitable, or requisite for, touching, or concerning the good estate, rule, order, or government of the company.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the company.

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition precedent or subsequent of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the City of London?

1. The members of the company consist of freemen and liverymen. Unmarried women are entitled to the freedom by patrimony, but for many years no woman has applied for the freedom. All admissions are made by the master, wardens, and assistants in open court. No person is entitled to the livery of the company unless he is already a freeman.

2. The freedom of the company may be obtained by servitude, patrimony, or redemption, or, in rare cases, by presentation of the company. A son of a freeman is entitled to the freedom by patrimony. An apprentice who has duly served an apprenticeship for seven years to a freeman of the company, under the form of apprenticeship sanctioned by the city, is entitled to his freedom by servitude. A freeman by servitude or patrimony pays a fee of 5*l.* 10*s.*, and by redemption 35*l.*; a freeman by servitude or patrimony on admission to the livery pays a fine of 22*l.*, and on admission to the livery by redemption a fine of 45*l.* In the case of the gift of the freedom by the company, no fees are payable. The fees payable by freemen include stamp duty.

3. All persons exercising the trade of a cutler in the City, or within three miles thereof, are required by a bye-law to be free of the company; but this bye-law is not now and has not been for many years enforced. Persons exercising the trade of cutlery do not, as a matter of course, become members of the company. At the present time there are about 14 cutlers members of the company.

4. No case is known of a freeman having been disfranchised, nor is it known whether the company has any power to disfranchise.

5. The livery of the company is unlimited in number, but a liveryman must be a freeman of the company. He is elected by the master, wardens, and assistants in open court; he pays the fees as stated in answer to the second question of this return. No case has occurred for, at any rate, very many years, of a liveryman being removed from the livery.

6. One apprentice was bound in 1876, one in 1877, one in 1879, and one in 1880. The last one was bound to a cutler. In 1880 an apprentice was bound to a working cutler not a member of the company, the premium of 40*l.* being paid by the company.

7. The freedom of the City of London is theoretically a condition precedent to being a liveryman of the company; but this condition is not strictly enforced. It is believed, however, that there are not more than three or four members of the company who are not at present free of the City of London.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(1.) It is impossible to give the present number of the freemen of the company, as notice is not always given in case of their death; the number, however, probably does not exceed 12. (2.) There are at present 88 members of the livery. (3.) There are 23 members of the court, including the master and wardens. (4.) There have been 15 admissions to the freedom by patrimony, 4 by servitude, and 13 by redemption, and 5 honorary presentations to the freedom during the last 10 years. There have been 33 admissions to the livery during the past 10 years. The details appear under Return E.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1.) a freeman, (2.) a liveryman, (3.) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members, according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted; whether (1.) fees, and of what nature, (2.) pensions, or (3.) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company.

4. (1.) What is the average standing of a member of the company when he is made a member of the governing body, and (2.) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case, state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1. (1.) A freeman has no advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to his position as a member of the company beyond his implied right to a pension for himself or his widow in the event of his or her circumstances rendering them fit objects for a pension. A liveryman, if free of the City of London, and if resident within a certain radius, obtains a vote at the election of members for the City, and for the election of Lord Mayor, &c. He has also a similar implied right to that of the freemen to a pension for himself and his widow. Under the bye-laws of the company he dines with the court three times a year, at two of such dinners having the privilege of introducing a friend. The master, wardens, and assistants have the privileges of the livery, and under the present bye-laws of the company receive a fee for attendance at the courts as above stated.

2. (1.) The fees paid among the 23 members of the court annually during the last 10 years average 67*6l.* (2.) The pensions, exclusive of 3*l.* a year, the interest on a donation of 100*l.* by Mr. Pepys, a former member of the company in 1840, to provide coals for the pensioners, average 40*5l.* per annum. (3.) The payments to descendants of members of the company average 12*6l.* per annum, and donations to hospitals and for general charitable purposes average 340*l.* per annum.

3. All freemen and liverymen and their widows are, under the present bye-laws, entitled to pensions should their circumstances require one, the pensions varying from 14*l.* to 50*l.* per annum. They have also up to the present time been entitled to an almshouse, but as small demand has been made for the almshouses they are about to be pulled down. There are at present 10 pensioners receiving (exclusive of the above-mentioned yearly payment of 3*l.*) 302*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* per annum. Several of these pensioners or their husbands were formerly cutlers. Donations amounting to 224*l.* 5*s.* 0*d.* were made last year to the descendants of former members of the company who are not entitled to pensions, but whose cases are generally favourably considered. Several of these donees are descendants of cutlers.

4. (1.) A member of the company has an average standing of about 30 years, when he is made a member of the governing body. (2.) He remains a member of the governing body during the remainder of his life, but subject to liability to removal, as above stated.

5. The company does not, at the present time, carry on any trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The officers of the company consist of a clerk, surveyor, and beadle. None of these officers are necessarily members of the company, but the clerk at the present time is a liveryman. The duties of the clerk are to attend all meetings of courts and committees, and enter the same in minute books; enter all the accounts and business of the company in books provided for the purpose, and to prepare an annual balance sheet; to issue summonses for the court, livery, and committees; to prepare books of the rents, &c.; to prepare indentures for apprentices, and administer declarations to freemen, members of the court, master, and wardens; to prepare all necessary advertisements; to prepare a list of the livery; to act as solicitor to the company, and generally as its executive officer. His salary is 315*l.* per annum, and he receives, in addition, the profits derived from the preparation of leases to tenants, and any deeds that may be prepared by him in accordance with the provisions of such leases.

The duties of the surveyor are to survey and make a monthly report to the court as to the condition of their several estates, and to carry out all surveyor's business connected therewith; also to prepare plans of any subdivision of property, showing the lettings from time to time. His salary is 100*l.* per annum, and he is allowed the use of a room at the hall as an office.

The beadle is the servant of the master, wardens, assistants, and clerk, and is to appear at all courts and otherwise when required. He is to keep an inventory of all articles entrusted to his charge, and generally act as servant of the company. The salary of the beadle is 160*l.* per annum, and he is provided, in addition, with rooms at the Company's Hall.

The company has also a chaplain, who is expected to visit any poor members of the company in case of their requiring spiritual assistance. He receives an honorarium of 10*l.* per annum.

The company also pay a surgeon two guineas a year in respect of any pensioner whom he may visit.

B.—The company has no servants except as above.

C.—By the charter the clerk is elected by the court during the good will and pleasure of the master, wardens, and assistants; but by the ordinances he is elected until he shall be removed by the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater number of them, for evil government, misbehaviour, or any other reasonable cause. The surveyor is elected during the pleasure of the court, and the beadle is elected annually.

PART IV.—EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL INCOME, VALUE

The company has no lands in Scotland or Ireland,

A. 13.—A list of rent-charges, quit-rents, fee farm-rents, and other fixed payments belonging to the company, showing in each case—

a. The nature of the charge.

b. The estate or buildings on which charged, the county where situated, the name of the parish or place, the name of the owner.

A. 13.—The company is entitled to 30*s.* a year under the will of John Davies, dated 22nd June 1593, charged upon Bowes Farm, in Edmonton.

PART IV.—B.

RETURN B.—Personal property.

B. 1.—A list of moneys invested in Government or other stocks, funds, shares, or securities, showing in each case—

a. The amount of stock, &c.

b. The description of the stock, &c.

c. The sources from whence the stock, &c. arises (i.e., a statement of the manner in which the company became possessed of the moneys invested).

d. The name in which the stock, &c. is standing, whether that of the company or some other person.

e. The account (if any) to which the stock, &c. belongs.

f. The net annual receipts.

B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the company or in their possession elsewhere.

B. 1. a and b. The company has 1,871*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.* new 3*l.* per cent. stock, 249*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.* consols, and 358*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* reduced.

c. The new 3*l.* per cent. stock practically represents savings of the company out of income. The consols represent the investment of the purchase money of the company's share of a portion of the Irish estate sold by the Salters' Company some years ago. The reduced stock represents a fund to provide the payments for exhibitions under Mr. Bucke's will.

d. Each of these sums of stock stands in the names of four members of the court as trustees for the company.

e. The net annual receipts are the dividends of the funds.

B. 2. The accounts of the company are made up to the 30th June in each year:—

In 1870 the excess of the expenditure over income was 47*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*; in 1871 the excess of income over expenditure was 383*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*; in 1872, 116*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*; in 1873 the excess of expenditure was 148*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.*; in 1874 the excess of receipts was 303*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*; in 1875, 192*l.* 17*s.* 5*d.*; in 1876, 463*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*; in 1877, 727*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*; in 1878, 294*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.*; in 1879, 402*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.*; and in 1880 the excess of the expenditure was 549*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

B. 3.—The company has never had any valuation made of its plate, pictures, furniture, and other property on their premises, but they are insured for 2,000*l.*

PART IV.—D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

The company is possessed of its hall and beadle's house adjoining, purchased in 1451, which is rated to the poor at 700*l.* gross and 584*l.* rateable value. It is also entitled to a share in the proportion of 6*l.* 15*s.* to 100*l.* of the Irish estate managed by the Salters' Company, the income derived from which during the past 10 years has been as follows:—1871, 472*l.* 10*s.*; 1872, 472*l.* 10*s.*; 1873, 472*l.* 10*s.*; 1874, 472*l.* 10*s.*; 1875, 472*l.* 10*s.*; 1876, 776*l.* 5*s.*; 1877, 540*l.*; 1878, 540*l.*; 1879, 540*l.*; 1880, 337*l.* 10*s.* They also own land at Ball's Pond, on which the almshouses were built by them. The net rents from such as have not been occupied by pensioners during the past 10 years have been as follows:—1871, 48*l.* 4*s.*; 1872, 46*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.*; in 1873 there was a loss on this account of 109*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.*; 1874, a profit of 48*l.* 16*s.*; 1875, 46*l.* 10*s.*; 1876, 58*l.* 19*s.* 3*d.*; 1877, 57*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.*; 1878, 30*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*; 1879, 31*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.*; and 1880, 29*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.*

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease from year to year of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation?

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation?

F. (1.)—In 1871 the income of the company was 4,243*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*; in 1872, 4,145*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*; in 1873, 4,151*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*; in 1874, 4,588*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*; in 1875, 4,518*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.*; in 1876, 4,827*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*; in 1877, 4,877*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.*; in 1878, 5,573*l.* 11*s.* 0*d.*; in 1879, 5,462*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*; and in 1880, 5,935*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.* There is reason to expect an increase in the income of the company during the next ten years on the falling in of certain leases. The increase will probably be about 600*l.* per annum.

F. (2.)—Subject to the answer in the last return, there is no reason to expect any material alteration in the income of the company for many years to come.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

1. A monthly report as to the company's estates is submitted to the court by the surveyor, who consider any suggestions he may have to make, any important questions being referred to a committee to consider and report upon to the court. All applications from tenants for a renewal of their leases or otherwise are submitted to the court, by whom, if of an important character, they are referred to the committee.
2. The rents are received by the master and wardens, who are usually attended by one or two members of the court. The payments are made by cheques signed by the master and one warden, and countersigned by the clerk. All payments are recommended by the committee, and are subsequently sanctioned by the court.
3. The company's accounts are audited monthly by the committee. The audit consists in examining the cash book with the ledger, and ascertaining that the balance corresponds with that shown on the banker's pass book, and in seeing that vouchers are obtained for every payment.
4. The accounts are not published, and are only accessible to members of the court.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of such 10 years.

NOTE.—30th June 1880.—At this date the company have 1,871*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.* New 3*l.* per Cents., 249*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.* Consols, and the Bucke Fund of 358*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

Part IV.—K.

Return K.—Position in Relation to Universities.

Has the company any relation with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

Particulars have already been given of the exhibitions arising under the wills of Mr. Craythorne and Mr. Bucke, and of their having been increased by the company. The company now gives an exhibition of 30*l.* a year, confined to St. John's College, Cambridge; two exhibitions of 20*l.* a year to any college at Cambridge; and one exhibition of 20*l.* a year to any college at Oxford. These exhibitions cease on the exhibitioner ceasing to reside, obtaining his M.A. degree or obtaining a fellowship or preferment to the extent of 10*l.* a year. The exhibitions are awarded according to merit, and are not limited (except in the case of Mr. Bucke's exhibition) to relatives of members of the company.

Part IV.—L.

Return L.—Church Patronage.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value, present or prospective, of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and if so, to what extent and out of what funds?
4. Has the company during the last 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any churches or chapels, and when and out of what funds in each case respectively?

Church Patronage.

1, 2, 3, and 4. There are no ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company, and with the exception of donations for stained glass windows in city churches, which have been made out of their general funds, they have not during the past 10 years built or contributed to the building of any churches or chapels.

Part IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

As to General Education.

Return K. gives information as to what is at present done by the company under this head.

As to Technical Education.

The company fully recognising the great importance of technical education, or a knowledge of the principles of science as applied to the materials used in the staple manufactures of the country, after a full consideration of the subject, decided not to take any part in the proposed scheme for the establishment of a college for the teaching of technical education generally, but that they would adopt measures calculated to promote and sustain an advancement and improvement in the manufacture of cutlery, and of those engaged in the cutlery trade.

With this object in view, the company resolved to endeavour to create a spirit of competition among the manufacturers of cutlery, and also among their workmen and apprentices; and they also arranged that such competition should be divided into three classes, as follows:—

Class 1.—General cutlery.
Class 2.—Surgical cutlery.
Class 3.—Sword cutlery.

And that the prizes for manufacturers should consist of the freedom of the company, gold, silver, and bronze medals, and certificates of merit; and for artisans and apprentices, an illuminated certificate of merit, with a sum of money, to be awarded in such amounts as the judges might think proper amongst such of the competitors as should gain certificates of merit.

The standard of merit in the award of the judges with regard to manufacturers was settled as follows:—

Class 1.—General excellence of material, temper, and workmanship; novelty of style; practical and general utility of goods.
Class 2.—The general excellence of material, temper, and workmanship; practical and general utility of articles.
Class 3.—The general excellence of material, temper, and workmanship.

And for artisans and apprentices, the standard of merit in the several classes of forgers, grinders, and glaziers, and as to fitters, were fixed as follows:—

The neatness with which each article is made and framed, so as to give the artisan following him as little difficulty in finishing as possible.
The best finished work, having regard to its practical utility.
The fitting of screws, fitting and finishing of handles, and adjustment of work so as to act perfectly.

The company also decided to exhibit any specimens of ancient cutlery which might be lent for the purpose, so that a comparison might be made with that of modern manufacture.

A large number of circulars, with conditions of competition, were addressed to manufacturers in the three classes of the cutlery trade, inviting their co-operation, and also that of their workmen and apprentices, in the proposed competition.

The result was that the following large number agreed to compete in the several classes:—

General Cutlery.—Class I.

Manufacturers - - -	24
Artisans and apprentices - -	24
	—	48

Surgical Cutlery.—Class II.

Manufacturers - - -	13
Artisans and apprentices - -	30
	—	43
		91

Sword Cutlery.—Class III.

Manufacturers - - -
Total - -		94

In addition to these taking part in the competition, the company received offers of the loan of a large number of interesting specimens of ancient arms and cutlery for exhibition from their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh, also from the Baron de Cosson and other gentlemen, and from the South Kensington Museum and the Sheffield Public Museum.

The following judges were appointed :—

For Surgical Cutlery.—Sir H. Thompson, Mr. Bryan, Mr. Perry.

For Sword Cutlery.—Lieut.-General B. Walker, C.B., Lieut.-Colonel G. Vernon.

For General Cutlery.—Messrs. Plum, Pigall, Slatter, Wing.

The exhibition was arranged to be held in the hall of the company, and to be opened on the 1st of May 1879 by the Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon.

The judges awarded 1 gold medal, 12 silver medals, and 10 certificates of merit to various manufacturers; and 28 certificates of merit to artisans and apprentices, together with money prizes, amounting to the sum of 95*l.*

A large number of articles intimately connected with the cutlery trade were also exhibited.

The exhibition was opened to the public on the 2nd of May, and continued open until the 17th of that month, on two evenings in the week until nine o'clock, to give a better opportunity to the artisan class to attend. During the time named about 15,000 persons inspected the various exhibits.

On the 7th of May His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, and on the 9th May their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, attended and inspected, with much interest, the various objects of competition and exhibition.

The prizes to the successful competitors were distributed on the 17th of May.

The company have received the gratifying information and assurance that the result of the competition has been a large amount of benefit to the cutlery trade, and that it has given a stimulus to continued improvement not only in the quality of the cutlery but also in the knowledge and skill of the manufacturers and artisans engaged in its production.

Copies of the report of the committee of the company engaged in the carrying out of the various details of the competition, with lists of the awards of the judges, and a statement of the various expenses incurred by the company in connexion therewith, are forwarded herewith for the information of the Commissioners.

As to Apprentices.

During the past year the company, feeling the great importance of providing for a continuity of skilled artisans in the cutlery trade, resolved to appropriate a sum of 100*l.* a year for the purpose of apprenticing two boys to members of the cutlery trade in London. Public notice of the intention of the company was given, and two respectable youths were in December last apprenticed, at the hall of the company, to master cutlers in London. The following are the general terms upon which the apprenticeships are based :—

1. Forty pounds to be paid each master in two instalments, viz., twenty pounds at the time of apprenticeship, and twenty pounds at the expiration of the third year of the term.
2. Ten pounds to be paid to each apprentice, either during or at the expiration of the apprenticeship at the discretion of the company.
3. The freedom of the company to be presented to each apprentice on satisfactory proof being given of his efficiency in the craft and of good behaviour during his apprenticeship.
4. The wages to be paid to the apprentice to be determined at the time of apprenticing between the master, the apprentice, his father or guardian, and the company.

As to Lectures.

The company being desirous to render further assistance in the development of technical education, and a scientific knowledge of the materials used in the cutlery trade, have arranged for a series of papers to be read, at Cutlers' Hall, upon subjects intimately connected therewith.

On the 1st of December last, Sir Henry Bessemer, C.E., F.R.S., read a paper "on the manufacture and uses of steel "with special reference to its employment for edge tools."

On the 1st of February last, A. K. Huntington, Esq. (Professor of Metallurgy, King's College, London) read a paper on "Steel, its composition and properties."

On the 2nd of March last, Henry Seebohm, Esq. (a well-known steel manufacturer of Sheffield) read a paper on the "Uses of steel."

It is intended to make arrangements for other papers to be read in due course.

The company invited the attendance and the cordial co-operation of manufacturers of cutlery, and through them that of their workmen and apprentices, in this movement; and it is gratifying to the company to recognise from the large attendance of masters, artisans, and apprentices, and the attention paid by them during the reading of the papers, the great interest felt by them in the various technical matters connected with their trade brought under their notice by the talented and scientific gentlemen to whom allusion has been made. It may be added that a copy of each of the papers read is presented to every person attending the lectures.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient or necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation "or administration of the property or revenues thereof?" respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Company has no suggestions to make under this head.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

DISTILLERS' COMPANY.

This Company did not make a Return. The following correspondence took place between the Commission and the Company :—

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
15th February 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners desire me to request you to draw the attention of the Court of the Worshipful Company of Distillers to the fact that, though about a year and a half has now elapsed since the date at which the Commissioners requested the Court to furnish them with information, the Commissioners have not as yet had the honour to receive any information from the Court.

The Commissioners desire me to add that they regret this delay, and that they must beg that they may be informed definitely within a month from this date whether the Court of the Distillers' Company intends to send in returns, and at what date the Commissioners may expect to receive them.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Distillers.

Church Court Chambers,
Old Jewry, 1882.

SIR,

I am directed by the Master and Wardens and Court of Assistants of the Worshipful Company of Distillers to inform you that the communications, together with the various tables for returns, received from you from time to time, have been laid before the Court of the Company, but, in consequence of the difficulty of securing the necessary quorum for the despatch of business, a delay has unavoidably arisen in considering the matter. At the last meeting of the Court, however, I was directed to prepare such a statement as, in the opinion of the Court, would furnish Her Majesty's Commissioners all the information they would require in reference to the position of the Company.

The Court were of opinion that it was neither necessary nor useful to make use of the tables received from the Commissioners, inasmuch as a great many of the enquiries are in no way applicable to this Company; and as to many others, in consequence of the lapse of time and other causes, it would be quite impossible without great expenditure of time and money to obtain the necessary information to answer them.

I am, however, instructed by the Court to inform Her Majesty's Commissioners that there is no desire on the part of the Company in any way to conceal their affairs, but on the contrary to afford them every possible information.

In the Report made by the Company to Her Majesty's Municipal Corporations Commission in the year 1837, which was embodied in the Commissioners' printed Report to the Houses of Parliament, will be found fully detailed the whole of the circumstances connected with the foundation of the Company, its objects, and the particulars of Acts of Parliament, Charters, and Decrees of Court affecting the Company; in fact, all the information on matters into which the Commissioners are to enquire as mentioned in the first four paragraphs of their circular letter of the 14th August 1880.

The information set out in that Report represents the circumstances and objects of the Company at the present time, with such alterations in their property as have been caused by the improvement in value of their freehold premises, which are no greater in extent now than they were at the date of the Report; and of the amount invested in stock caused by the addition, from time to time, of surplus income, particulars of which will appear on an investigation of the books of the Company; and in addition, certain articles of plate presented to the Company by various members.

I am further directed by the Court to state that the Company possesses no trust or charitable property of any description, nor have they any charities under their superintendence. The funded property has arisen through payments made by persons from time to time becoming members of the Company. It appears by the Minutes that the freehold premises were originally purchased by the Company as a site for the building of a Hall.

In conclusion, I am directed by the Court to express their willingness to furnish the Commissioners with any and every information in connection with the affairs of the Company, though they are advised that, as none of their property is subject to any trust, they might properly as well as legally decline to do so.

They, however, think it their duty to claim before the Commissioners the right of protecting from disclosure their title to the private property of which they are in possession.

The Company desire in the most formal manner to state that their readiness to afford information to the Commissioners is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown or any other jurisdiction to enquire into the private property of the Company, or to deal with it in disregard of their rights.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
E. A. BAYLIS,
Acting Clerk to the Worshipful Company of Distillers.

H. D. WARR, Esq.
Secretary,
City of London
Livery Companies' Commission.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
25th May 1882.

SIR,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter.

I do not know whether the Commissioners are to regard your letter as itself "such a statement as in the opinion of "the Court" of the Worshipful Company of Distillers "would furnish the Commissioners all the information "they would require in reference to the position of the "Company." If so, the Commissioners can hardly agree with the Court, as the statement does no more than refer the Commissioners to a report on the subject of the Company which is nearly 50 years old.

In this report there is, as you state, very considerable information as to the foundation and objects of the Company. There is also, as you are aware, a statement of the income and expenditure of the Company for the years 1831, 1832, and 1833. Your letter, while very properly referring to the report as regards the constitution of the Company, contains no information on the subject of the property, income, and expenditure of the Company, except a general statement that the real property of the Company has increased in value since the date of the report, and that the Company has become otherwise more wealthy. The Commissioners will not consider a statement of this kind by any means satisfactory.

I beg, therefore, on the part of the Commissioners, respectfully to direct the attention of the Court of the Distillers' Company to the tables bearing reference to (1) the real and personal property of the Company, and (2) the details of its income and expenditure for the last 10 years, and (3) the fees payable by members; and I am to request that those tables may be sent in filled up, or else that the Court will favour the Commissioners with information on these several subjects in some shape which can be considered satisfactory.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Distillers.

EXTRACT from Standing Orders with reference to duties and salaries of officers and servants.

Clerk.

No. of Standing Order.

43 That the clerk shall write down the business to be done at each court, and lay the same before the chairman of the day.

44 That rough minutes of the proceedings of all courts and committees shall be entered by the clerk in a book at the time of the meeting, and the minutes of each court shall be fairly transcribed into a book or books especially kept for that purpose, and the same shall be read at the succeeding meeting of the court, and if correctly entered the same shall then be signed by the chairman of such meeting, and the clerk shall make and keep an index of all the principal matters contained in such books.

45 That the clerk shall make himself fully acquainted with all the affairs of the company, its charter, byelaws, rights and privileges, and as far as he can of the condition of the estates of the company, and shall give true advice and counsel to the wardens and assistants, in any matter that shall concern the company, to the utmost of his knowledge, and keep all the lawful secrets and counsels of the company.

46 That the clerk shall receive all communications from the members of the company, the almshouse poor, and others, relative to the company's affairs, and report to the court of assistants, or wardens, or one of them, any matter affecting the interests of the company.

47 That the clerk shall attend at the Hall on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, in each week, from eleven until four o'clock, and at such other times as the business of the company shall render his attendance necessary.

48 That the clerk shall prepare and sign all summonses for the meetings of the court of assistants and committees, and shall summon the tenants to attend the rent audits to pay their rents.

49 That the clerk shall summon the livery to all general courts and shall summon all the pensioners of the company to receive their pensions.

50 That the clerk shall duly summon the livery of the company to attend every common hall of the livery of London.

No. of Standing Order.

51 That the clerk shall prepare all documents for the binding and turning over of apprentices and the admission of freemen and liverymen.

52 That the clerk shall grant all certificates to the Chamberlain of London upon apprentices being turned over and upon the admission of freemen.

53 That the clerk shall attend all courts of assistants and committees of the company, the rent audits and the audits of the bills and the renter warden's accounts, and shall attend the wardens at all reasonable times when thereunto required.

54 That the clerk shall attend the wardens upon the translation of any member of any other company into this company, and of any member of this company to any other company.

55 That the clerk shall keep the renter wardens accounts and all the other accounts relating to the company and the charities under its management.

56 That the clerk shall carry on all official correspondence relative to the affairs of the company.

57 That the clerk, shall in pursuance of the Acts for the amendment of the representation of the people in the Commons House of Parliament, prepare and sign the usual annual lists of liverymen, and attend the Revising Barrister's Court upon the revision of such lists.

58 That the clerk shall upon receipt from the renter warden elect of the name of his proposed surety make inquiries as to the responsibility of the surety proposed, and report the result thereof to the next court of assistants.

59 That the clerk shall justly and truly do and perform all other matters which to his office appertain, and which he shall be assigned and required by the wardens or court of assistants to do.

60 That a gown shall be kept for the clerk and be worn by him when he attends the meetings of the court of assistants, and at all banquets, and court and livery dinners.

No. of Standing Order.

61 That Mr. Henry Batt, the present clerk, shall, in consideration of his faithful services for the past twenty years, be paid (during his tenure of office) the annual salary of 300*l.* by quarterly instalments, and that the salary of any future clerk shall be such as the court may determine on his appointment, and that the clerk for the time being shall be likewise entitled to the sum of 5*l.* 5*s.* for his attendance upon the presentation and swearing in of the sheriffs of London, when either of them is a member of the company, and also to such other fees as are or may be from time to time authorised by standing orders.

Medical Attendant.

86 That the court of assistants may from time to time appoint a medical attendant who shall hold his office during the pleasure of the court and shall be paid for his attendance and medicines a sum not exceeding 75*l.* in each year.

87 That the medical attendant shall visit the inmates of the almshouses once in each week, and shall visit the sick inmates every other day, or every day, as may be necessary.

88 That the medical attendant shall attend to all medical and surgical cases and supply whatever medicines may be necessary to the inmates of the almshouses.

89 That the medical attendant shall on each of the days appointed for paying the almshouse poor, and upon such other occasions as he may think fit, report in writing to the court of assistants the state of the health of the inmates of the almshouses from the date of his last preceding report, and shall also report when a nurse or other assistance is required, and on any other matter that he may think it necessary to mention.

90 That the medical attendant shall in his quarterly report in October specify the names of such of the almshouse poor as from sickness or infirmity are unable to attend the court to receive their quarterly allowance.

Bargemaster.

69 That the court of assistants may from time to time appoint a bargemaster who shall hold his office during the pleasure of the court.

70 That the bargemaster shall attend at the hall on all court days in the livery provided for him by the company.

71 That the bargemaster shall early in the mouth of May annually, and at such other times as may be needful, visit and look after the swans and their nests, and shall give one day's previous notice thereof to the clerk of the company.

72 That the bargemaster shall engage four well-behaved men, or more if required by the renter warden, to assist him in the swan upping business, and shall take great care in pinioning the cygnets, and shall be particular in examining the marks of all birds taken up.

73 That the men engaged pursuant to standing order 72 shall provide their own boats and be at all risk and expense attending the same, and shall be allowed 10*s.* per day each during the swan upping voyage.

74 That the bargemaster shall pay the men their wages immediately after the swan upping voyage is ended.

75 That the bargemaster shall direct the persons who shall take up any of the swans in frosty weather to send notice thereof to the clerk of the company and to Her Majesty's swan marker, and to the worshipful company of vintners, as soon as any swans shall be taken up, and to send the like notice when the frost breaks up, and he shall then go and select this company's birds and pay the amount allowed for the keep of the same during the frost.

76 That the bargemaster shall make out the accounts for the keep of the swans, showing the number taken care of by each person, and stating the day of the month when they were taken up and the day of the month when such keeping ceased.

No. of Standing Order.

77 That the bargemaster shall when required attend the dinners of the company in the livery provided for him, and shall stand at the back of the renter warden's chair, and shall not leave without the permission of the wardens or one of them.

78 That the bargemaster shall be allowed a suit of livery and a hat when necessary, not exceeding once in every seven years.

79 That the bargemaster shall be paid a salary not exceeding 15*l.* in each year, and during the swan upping voyage he shall be paid 11*s.* per day, and the like sum with such coach, boat, and horse hire as he shall necessarily incur while engaged looking after the swans at other periods of the year.

83 That the bargemaster at the swan upping shall take an account of the swans, the expenses attending the same, and everything relating thereto, and shall enter the same in a book, and on his return deliver the book to the clerk.

Hallkeeper.

91 That the court of assistants may from time to time appoint a hallkeeper and messenger, being a married man, and dismiss him at its pleasure upon giving him one calendar month's notice at any time.

92 That the hallkeeper and messenger shall keep the hall and all the apartments and offices therein and thereunto belonging clean and well-aired, and cause all the domestic duties required therein to be done in a proper manner, and also when required provide at the expense of the company refreshments for the members of the court and committees and the livery, and also for the quarterly and other poor attending at the hall.

93 That the hallkeeper and messenger shall forthwith communicate to the clerk whatever shall come to his knowledge relative to the affairs of the company or their poor, or the death or failure of any of the livery, and he shall also deliver to the clerk all letters and papers that may come to his hands respecting the company's affairs, and aid and assist the clerk when necessary.

94 That the hallkeeper and messenger shall when required so to do perform the duties mentioned in the Standing Orders Nos. 66 and 67 either in the stead of or jointly with the beadle.

95 That the hallkeeper and messenger shall give notice to the renter warden when coals are required for the all.

96 That the hallkeeper and messenger shall not engage in any other occupation, but shall be wholly and solely employed in the service of the company, and shall be in attendance from nine o'clock in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon on each day, and shall obey the orders of the wardens and clerk or either of them.

97 That the salary of the hallkeeper and messenger shall from time to time be fixed by the court of assistants and shall include the services of himself and wife, but he shall not under any pretence receive any Christmas box or other gratuity from any member of the court or livery, or from any tradesman employed by the company.

Beadle.

62 That a gown shall be kept for the beadle, who shall attend all the general courts in his gown of office, and shall attend at the time when the almshouse poor receive their coals, and shall render to the clerk an account of the same.

63 That the beadle shall in his gown of office attend every common hall of the livery of London.

64 That the beadle shall visit the almshouse poor of the company at least every alternate week, and make himself acquainted as much as possible with the situation of the pensioners of the company, and forthwith report everything that may be necessary to the clerk.

No. of Standing Order.

65 That whatever occurs within the knowledge of the beadle relative to the affairs of the company or their poor, or of the death or failure of any of the livery, he shall as soon as possible communicate to the clerk and shall deliver to him all letters and papers that may come to his hands respecting the company's affairs, and aid and assist him when necessary in the execution thereof.

66 That the beadle, whenever required so to do by either of the wardens, shall attend the dinners of the company and of their committees in his gown of office, and shall be at the place appointed for dinner in time to receive the visitors' tickets, and shall stand at the back of the prime warden's chair during dinner, and shall not leave without permission of the wardens or one of them.

No. of Standing Order.

67 That the beadle, whenever directed so to do by either of the wardens or the clerk, shall visit the petitioners for the almshouses and the casual poor at Christmas, and inquire into the merits of their petitions, and report the result in writing to the clerk.

68 That the beadle shall be paid a salary not exceeding 50*l.* per annum by quarterly payments, and shall also receive such fees as are or may be from time to time authorised by standing orders, but he shall not under any pretence receive any Christmas box or other gratuity from any member of the court or livery, or from any tradesman employed by the company.

APPENDIX A.

The report of the Commissioners of 1834 contains the following passage :—

"Our only information as to the property of the company, is derived from the statement made by the clerk respecting an information which was filed against the company on the 27th August 1831, at the relation of the liveryman who appeared before us. The information alleged that the whole rent of the estate in Thames Street, producing upwards of 1,000*l.* per annum, was to be applied for charitable purposes, and that the whole rents of Dyers' Buildings was in like manner to be applied to charitable purposes. The information sought for an account against the company for 165 years then last past. The company put in their answer. The result of this proceeding was that it was ascertained that nearly three-fourths of the Thames Street Estate, producing 1,000*l.* per annum, had been purchased by the company out of the company's funds, and that only the residue of the estate was given by the founder of the charity, and the whole amount to be paid in charity was 17*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* per annum. With respect to Dyers' Buildings, the whole of that estate came to the company from the founder of the charity, Henry West, in 1551; the amount to be paid out of this to the charity was 6*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*, and there was a surplus at the time of the gift. No direction having been given as to the surplus, it was therefore considered that the company might appropriate it for repairs, expenses of management, &c. A decree was finally made by consent, by which one-fourth only of the 1,000*l.* per annum of the Thames Street Estate and one-half of the Dyers' Buildings Estate were directed to be held as charity property. The company was not directed to account, and the costs of the company were to be paid out of the charity funds. At the time of the information the company were paying on the Thames Street Charity, instead of 17*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.*, the sum of 200*l.*, and about as much on the others."

The company, without filling up the papers of returns, have sent the following reply to the Commissioners' circular. The following documents accompanied such reply :—

A copy of an inspeximus charter, 30th June, 4 James I.
A photographed copy of the charter of 19 March, 2 James II.
" " " 26 April, 3 Anne.
" " certificate of byelaws, 15 November, 20 Elizabeth.
" " " 31 October, 3 Anne.
A copy of the Act, 23 George III. cap. 15.
A copy of the decree of 5th August 1833, referred to in the returns.
A copy of a scheme ordered by the Charity Commission, for the future regulation of the Tyrwhitt, West, Lee Peck, Burch, and Kinder Charities.

Omitting the documents above referred to, the following is a copy of the return :—

AT a meeting of the court of assistants of the wardens and commonalty of the mistery of Dyers of the city of London, held at Dyers' Hall, Dowgate Hill, in the said city of London, on the 2nd day of March 1881.

It was resolved that the annexed reply to the letter of the Secretary to the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the city companies, dated 14th August 1880, be adopted and sealed at the next court.

HENRY SOWERBY,
Prime Warden.

To the COMMISSIONERS appointed by HER MAJESTY to inquire into the CITY COMPANIES.

THE wardens and commonalty of the mistery of Dyers of the city of London (herein-after called the Dyers' Company), have considered the letter, dated 14th August 1880, from the Secretary to the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the city companies, informing them that the Commissioners are required—

1. "To inquire into all the companies named in the second report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into municipal corporations in England and Wales, and into the circumstances and dates of the foundation of such companies, and the objects for which they were founded, and how far those objects are now being carried into effect, and into any Acts of Parliament, charters, trust deeds, decrees of court, or other documents founding, regulating, or affecting the said companies, or any of them."
2. "To inquire into and ascertain the constitution and powers of the governing bodies of the said companies, and the mode of admission of freemen, livery, and other members of the said companies, and the number of freemen, livery, and other persons constituting the said companies, and the gains, privileges, or emoluments, to which all or any such persons are entitled by reason of their being members of such companies."
3. "To inquire into and ascertain the officers and servants of such companies, and the salaries or other emoluments to which such officers and servants are entitled, and the mode of appointment of such officers and servants, and the duties which they perform."
4. "To inquire into and ascertain the property of or held in trust for or by such companies, both real and personal, and where the same is situate, and of what it is composed, and the capital value of the several descriptions of such property, and the annual income of such property, and the mode in which the property is managed and the income is expended."
5. "To report what they shall find touching or concerning the premises upon such inquiry as aforesaid, and also to consider and report what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the said companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof."

1. The Dyers' Company have to state that nearly all their muniments and records were destroyed by the Fire of London, or by a subsequent fire in 1681; and for any information prior to those events, with the exception of that which may be derived from the documents herein-after mentioned, they are dependent upon the public records or publications.

There is little doubt that the guild existed prior to 1471, in which year King Henry VI. granted to the guild their first charter.

With regard to the objects for which the Dyers' Company were founded, and how far those objects are now being carried into effect, the company refer to the charters and other documents herein-after mentioned, and to the statements herein contained.

The Dyers' Company are not aware of any Acts of Parliament, charters, trust deeds, decrees of court, or other documents founding, regulating, or affecting their company, except the following :—

15th November, 20th Elizabeth.—Certificate of byelaws under the Statute of 19 Henry VII.
30th June, 4th James I.—Copy Inspeximus Charter.
19th March, 2 James II.—Charter.
26th April, 3 Anne.—Charter.
31st October, 3 Anne.—Certificate of byelaws under the Statute of 19th Henry VII.
23 George III. cap. 15.—An Act for rendering more effectual the provisions contained in an Act of the 13th year of King George the First for preventing fraud and abuses in the dyeing trade.
5th August 1833.—Decree in "Attorney-General v. The Dyers' Company."
10th December 1880.—Vesting order and scheme as to Tyrwhitt and West, Lee and Peck, and Burch and Kinder's charities.

They beg to transmit herewith copies of the above-mentioned documents.

2. The constitution and powers of the governing body of the Dyers' Company appear by the charters, Acts of Parliament, and other documents above referred to.

A person is admitted to the freedom of the company by service as a freeman's apprentice, or by his father's copy or patrimony, on a small payment for fines, fees, and stamps, or, unless there should appear to be reason to the contrary, by redemption on application to the wardens and court of assistants of the company.

Livery is acquired by election of the wardens and court of assistants on payment of certain fines and fees. The persons constituting the company are the liverymen, which term includes the wardens and court of assistants.

The fines and fees payable on admission to the freedom, and on election to the livery, and to the court of assistants, are set forth in the extract from the standing orders of the company herewith sent.

Members of the company are not entitled to any gains, privileges, or emoluments by reason of their being members, except as set forth in the charters and byelaws. There are, however, some charities in which members of the company alone can participate, and some in which they have a preference.

There are no means of ascertaining the number of freemen of the company now living, but 98 persons were admitted to the freedom between the 1st January 1851 and 31st December 1880.

The livery, including the wardens and court of assistants, are about 83 in number.

3. The officers and servants of the Dyers' Company are :—

A clerk, appointed by the court of assistants.
A medical attendant for the almspeople, also appointed by the court of assistants.
A nurse for the almspeople, appointed by the same body.
A bargemaster, with the duties of swanherd, appointed by the same body.
A hallkeeper, appointed by the same body; and
A beadle, elected at the annual general court of the company.

The duty and the salary of each of these are set forth in the extract from standing orders herewith sent, and those duties are performed by them respectively.

4. The property of the Dyers' Company, and that held in trust for, or by, the company, and the situation, in cases admitting of the latter particular, together with the gross annual income derived therefrom, are stated in the accompanying schedule. The company have no special means of forming a judgment as to the capital value of the properties otherwise than as shown in the schedule, and, in the absence of any intention to sell, have not had occasion to obtain a professional opinion thereon.

The property is managed by the court of assistants, with the aid of their clerk, and under the advice, when necessary, of an architect or surveyor.

The income is expended in defraying expenses of management (including fees to those members of the court of assistants who attend on the occasions of business), in charitable gifts to decayed members of the company, and to their widows and families, and to others, in the maintenance, together with Her Majesty and the Vintners' Company, of the swans on the Thames, in hospitalities, and in promoting technical and other education.

5. The Dyers' Company are not prepared to offer any suggestions for improving or altering the constitution of the company, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof.

Sealed with the common seal of the wardens and commonalty of the mistery of dyers of the city of London, at a meeting of the court of assistants of the said wardens and commonalty, held at Dyers' Hall, in the said city of London, on the sixth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

HENRY SOWERBY,
Prime Warden.

WILLIAM THOMAS BUTLER,
Renter Warden.

R. Y. BRUNSKILL,
Clerk.

FANMAKERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the company were accompanied with the following protest :—

This company begs to state that it claims its corporate property as absolutely its own, and not subject to any trust whatever.

This company voluntarily makes this return so far as regards such corporate property, and contends that the Crown has no legal right to interfere in any way with the manner in which the company chooses to dispose of it.

Finally, this company claims to have all questions referring to its right to its corporate property tried and decided by the courts of law as established in this country, and by no other authority whatsoever.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—Incorporated 1709, April 19th.

B.—The only charter of the company was granted by Queen Anne in 1709, as above, for making statutes, laws, ordinances, etc., as shall seem reasonable, etc., for the rule and government of the company in matters relating to the trade.

C.—None.

D.—None.

E.—None.

F.—The company was established, as before mentioned, in the year 1709, and more or less regulated the trade of fanmaking until the importation of foreign fans almost annihilated the trade in English-made fans. Recently the company has made a great effort to stimulate and encourage the home trade by organising and carrying out, at an expense of nearly 450*l.* out of the funds of the company (exclusive of more than 300*l.* individually contributed by the members of the Court of Assistants), an exhibition of Fans; and, in order to encourage emulation, has offered numerous prizes to manufacturers, work-people, and amateurs. Vide report sent herewith (Part IV.—Return M.)

G.—The charter gives power for the company to hold land of the yearly value of 500*l.*

H.—The charter directs superintendence, but not encouragement, of the trade; for further information and reply, see previous Return F.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respect such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

A. 1.—The governing body is in strict accordance with the charter, which says that there shall be a—

Master,
2 Wardens, and
20 Assistants, of which the master and wardens shall be three.

The members of the court are—

Mr. J. S. Balfour, M.P., Master.

A. 2.—Admission to the freedom and livery of the company. On vacancies occurring, the court proceed to elect as follows, viz:—

"Every vacancy is forthwith officially announced in writing to each member of the court. A list of 12 liverymen (the number to be increased or diminished from time to time as the court shall see fit) is taken according to seniority, and laid on the table for inspection at the court next after the official announcement of every vacancy. At the then succeeding court the same list is read twice, and on the second reading the master or presiding warden puts each name to the vote, reducing the list to two by a show of hands, or by a poll if demanded. The election then takes place by the same process from the two candidates selected. Every member of the court is at liberty to propose at the first of these two courts the addition to the list of any name or names from among the livery, in which case the addition shall be read and put to the vote at the second court as part of the list.

A. 3.—The governing body manage the affairs of the company.

The fees, etc., are as under:—

Payable on election as assistant, 50*l.*
Serving the offices of master and wardens, 25*l.*

Each member receives 10*s.* for punctual attendance at the court meetings if present until adjournment.

A. 4.—One annual court meeting is only absolutely necessary, but there are usually four meetings to transact the business of the company.

All matters are decided by a show of hands; and minutes of the proceedings are kept and confirmed subsequently. Only members of the court can inspect the minute books, except by order of the master.

A. 5.—Members of the governing body may be removed for reasonable cause.

A. 6.—The byelaws were allowed 6th July 1741 by the Lord Chancellor and the Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation "or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The members of the company, who are the only persons interested in any measures for improving or altering its constitution, or appropriating or administering its property or revenue, have not deemed it necessary to take any steps for either purpose. The officers of the company respectfully protest against being asked to make any such suggestions as are indicated, they considering that the members of the company only can be interested in the administration and appropriation of its property and revenue.

APPENDIX A.

This company furnished the Municipal Commissioners of 1834 with considerable information. Their property then consisted of 700*l.* stock.

FARRIERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the company were accompanied by a protest against the inquiry as "an infringement of the rights, liberties, and privileges of the company enjoyed by ancient charter."

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect," the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The farriers of London were erected into a mystery by the Court of Mayor and Aldermen in the year 1356. Among the City records is an entry made in this year (Libro G. Fol. XXX.), acknowledging the said company or fellowship by the name of the "Marshals of the City of London" and giving them power to govern the said craft of farriers.

B.—The charter of the company was granted by Charles II., January 17th, 1684, investing the company with power and jurisdiction for the well ordering and governing of the art and trade of the Brotherhood of Farriers, and all who use or should use the same, within the Cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and within a radius of 7 miles.

C.—Beyond the deeds and documents herein-before referred to, there are no trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the company.

D.—Bye-laws, rules, orders, and ordnances approved by the judges, 29th January 1676. Livery specially restored by Court of Aldermen 23rd June 1692. Regulated by Act of Common Council, 12th December 1756.

E.—There are none except the rules made by the Court of Assistants from time to time.

F.—The farriers of London in the year 1356 were erected into a mystery, and admitted to bind and make free by the name of citizens and farriers of London. By the statute of 12th Car. II., intituled "An Act for the speedy provision "of money for the disbanding and paying of the forces "of this Kingdom both by land and sea," the farriers are expressly enacted to be taxed and they were in pursuance of the Act taxed, and the tax was duly paid according to the Act. In the great fire of 1666 most of the books and papers of the company were destroyed. In the 25th year of the reign of Charles II., the company was incorporated with the object of well ordering and governing the art and trade of farriery, and all persons who should use the trade within the Cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and within a radius of 7 miles. A rent of 13*s.* 4*d.* per annum is reserved under the charter which is duly paid. The company's bye-laws, rules, and orders were approved by the judges, 29th January, 27 Car. II. On the 28th July 1691, the company petitioned the Court of Aldermen to be re-established as one of the livery companies. This was referred to a committee, which reported favourably, and the petition was accordingly granted on the 23rd June 1693. On the 12th December 1758 an Act of Common Council was passed regulating the company. The object for which the company was founded was rigourously exercised until very recent years, but latterly owing to the alterations in the habits of society and the increase of population, the company have not deemed it expedient to enforce their rights, although at the same time they have not abandoned any part of their controlling power.

The company still continues to take a lively interest in the art and trade of farriery as hereinafter appears.

G.—The company has the power under its charter to hold lands, &c., of the annual value of 100*l.* beyond the hall. The power is unexhausted to the extent of 65*l.* a year and the hall.

H.—By the charter control is given to the company over the trade or business of farriers, and all persons using the art or mystery within the Cities of London and Westminster, or either of them, or within 7 miles anyway distant from the same, with power to make bye-laws for the good of the company. These powers of control are not now, however, enforced. The increase of population and the alterations in the habits of society since the charter was granted and the bye-laws made, render such exercise inexpedient, but the company has not abandoned any part of its controlling power, although such power is now rarely exercised.

The company has not been unmindful of the branch of industry which it has the right of controlling. As a proof of this it may be mentioned that 4 years ago the company offered three prizes, viz., 1. the freedom of the company, a gold medal, and 20*l.* for the best Essay on the treatment of horses in health and disease; 2. a silver medal and 10*l.* for the best and most economically made and useful set of shoes for carriage horses used in London over macadam stones, asphalte, and wood roadways, regard being paid especially to slipperiness arising from damp, frost, snow, and heat; 3. a bronze medal and 5*l.* for a similar set of shoes for cart horses.

FARRIERS' COMPANY—continued.

I.—CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

The company has only one charity with which it is interested, viz., Soules' bequest, dated 28th March 1572, by which the testator gave property to the parish of St. Sepulchre, London, on condition that the churchwardens should pay annually to the Farriers' Company the sum of 13*s.* 4*d.* to be by the company given to their poor. This amount is regularly received from the churchwardens and is distributed together with other moneys collected as hereafter appears to the poor, widows of deceased freemen, on the first Thursday in January in each year.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body at present consists of a master, three wardens, and 19 assistants. This is in accordance with the charter which provides for a master, three wardens, and not above 20 nor under 10 assistants.

2. No one is eligible to become a member of the governing body unless he is on the livery of the company, and has served or fined for steward.

The assistants are elected from the livery for life, and they cannot resign without permission of the court.

The mode of election is for a candidate to be nominated at a meeting of the court.

This nomination is placed upon the agenda paper, and sent to all members of the court, and the election takes place at the following court by a show of hands. It is usual to elect the senior member of the livery who has paid his stewards fine. This is not, however, the invariable rule as the court sometimes pass over seniors and elect a younger member if they have reason for so doing. Generally speaking, when a senior member is passed over in favour of a junior, he is a person whose station in life renders it inexpedient that he should come on to the court.

Each member of the court has a right to vote at elections, but not by proxy.

3. The governing body take into consideration the business of the company from time to time.

The master is chosen annually, and during his term of office has charge of the company's cash and valuables. He presides at all meetings of the court, and is ruler of the company for the time being.

The wardens act as assistants to the master, and in the absence of the latter the senior warden present takes the chair at the meetings of the company. The master and wardens meet occasionally to settle matters of detail in connexion with the company.

Assistants have to attend all courts and discuss various matters from time to time arising in connexion with the company. Fines are imposed for non-attendance, and are strictly enforced.

The master and two senior wardens pay on their election fees to the amount of 18*s.* 8*d.*, the renter warden 4*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.*, and the assistants 50*l.* By a resolution of the company passed on the 13th February 1879, it was agreed that on any member of the court (other than the then present members) taking office as warden he should pay 10*l.*, and as master 25*l.*

The members of the governing body receive no salaries or amounts whatever in respect of their services.

4. There are four general courts held on fixed days during each year, special courts are held from time to time according to the nature of business.

The ruling body consult and determine in all matters relating to the company in every particular.

The method adopted in transacting business is for notices to be sent to each assistant informing of the day of meeting, together with an agenda of business to be transacted.

The opinions of members are taken by a show of hands, or if necessary, by division.

All the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are written up in the Minute Book, and read at the next court, and the books are accessible at the clerks office to every member of the governing body.

Occasionally, persons apply for information in respect of their relatives, or others, obtainable by reference to the books of the company, such requests are granted unless goods reasons are found for witholding same.

5. The members of the governing body are elected for life unless for any just and reasonable cause they shall be removed, and they cannot resign without permission of the court. No instance of a member of the governing body having been removed or suspended is known ever to have existed.

6. See answers to questions D. and F., part 1.

By Act of Common Council, dated 12th December 1758, it is declared that from and after the 1st day of January then next, no person should act as farrier without being admitted to the company. In default, he should forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.* for every time that he should use or exercise the art, trade, or manual occupation, the penalties and forfeitures so recovered (after deducting expenses) to be divided into two equal parts, one moiety being paid to the treasurer of the London workhouse for the time being, to be applied towards the maintenance of the poor there, and the other moiety to the prosecutor.

PART II.—B.

Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

B 1.—The qualification for admission to the freedom is respectability, patrimony, and apprenticeship. (sic.)

Admission to the livery (or clothing) of the company is granted by the governing body, and is not known ever to have been refused an applicant.

Assistants are elected from the livery, and the master and wardens from the assistants.

Females are considered as entitled to the freedom, in case they claim by patrimony, but it is very rare for such application to be made.

B 2.—The freedom is obtained by patrimony, apprenticeship, or redemption.

On admission by right of patrimony it must be shown that the father was admitted to the freedom of the company prior to the birth of the applicant. Patrimony is proved by the father, if living, if not, by the mother, family friend, or other creditable person.

On admission of apprentices to the freedom of the company the indentures must be produced, and a certificate furnished by the master (if living) that the apprentice has served faithfully, or, if dead, by the wife of some other person capable of certifying.

All respectable applicants are admitted as redemptioners of the company.

The fees payable on admission to the company are—

	£	s.
Patrimony - -	3	5
Apprenticeship - -	3	5
Redemption - -	5	5

B 3.—Persons exercising the trade of farriers are required by statute to become free of the company, and they may be compelled at law to do so. The company, however, does not consider it expedient to enforce these rights, although they have not abandoned any part of the controlling power.

Persons exercising the trade sometimes become members of the company.

There are now about five or six members of the company who are farriers or veterinary surgeons.

The freedom of the City of London is not a condition, either precedent or subsequent, of membership of the company. It is, however, usual for members to become free of the City of London immediately on taking up the freedom of the company.

It is supposed that nearly all members of the company are free of the City of London.

B 4.—It is not known or considered that the freedom can be lost, nor a freeman disfranchised, in anyway at least not by any act or judgment of the court of assistants, no power being given for either purpose by the charter or bye-laws.

No instance is known or believed to have occurred of the freedom of the company having been lost, or of a freeman being for any cause disfranchised.

B 5.—The livery is unlimited.

No person is admitted to the livery unless he is a freeman of the company, but most of the freemen come on the livery at their own request, they being entitled to do so as a matter of right.

Beyond the freedom there is no necessary qualification for a liveryman, nor any circumstances arising from rank in life, profession, nation, or religion which, according to the bye-laws or the usage or practice of the company, is considered or is known to have been considered as disqualifying a person from taking up the livery.

The livery is granted to an applicant by the master, wardens, and court of assistants in court duly holden. Power is, however, given to the clerk to admit to the livery under certain circumstances, subject to the approval of the court of assistants.

It is apprehended that the livery cannot be lost after once being granted.

The fees payable on admission to the livery are 11*l.* 10*s.*

PART II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

C.—Freemen (present number) about 94. Livery (present number) about 88. Apprentices (present number) about 7. Admissions to freedom for last 10 years.

1870 - - - -	0
1871 - - - -	0
1872 - - - -	3
1873 - - - -	3
1874 - - - -	2
1875 - - - -	5
1876 - - - -	5
1877 - - - -	24
1878 - - - -	18
1879 - - - -	7

Of these, three have been admitted by servitude, one by patrimony, and the rest by redemption.

There have been no compulsory calls to the livery during the past ten years.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

D.—1870	-	-	- 0
1871	-	-	- 0
1872	-	-	- 0
1873	-	-	- 0
1874	-	-	- 0
1875	-	-	- 0
1876	-	-	- 3
1877	-	-	- 1
1878	-	-	- 3
1879	-	-	- 0

None of the apprentices have been bound to members following the trade of farriers.

The company has not in any cases paid the premiums of such apprentices.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1.—The advantages are social, charitable, municipal, and parliamentary.

2.—There are no fees paid to any member of the company.

Poor widows of freemen receive pensions from the company being amounts subscribed by the assistants and fees paid by members joining.

3.—Pensions are granted to the widows of freemen who paid quarterage up to the time of their death.

There are at the present time about five such pensioners.

4.—1. All gentlemen who become members of the governing body are of good social standing.

All such gentlemen (except those who have retired from business) are also of good standing professionally or commercially.

2. A member usually remains on the governing body during the term of his natural life.

5.—No.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A. Beyond the governing body and the trustees of the company, which last are members of the governing body, there are only two officers and servants of the company, viz.:

A clerk and a beadle.

The duty of the clerk is to summon all courts, and also to attend them. To administer the oaths and do what is needful according to the established forms of the company on the admission of any person. To receive and account for all moneys paid to him in respect of the company, such as fines and fees, and to act as secretary and legal adviser to the company. His salary is 30*l.* per annum, besides his fees, for swearing in new members, &c.

The present clerk is a member of the company.

B. The beadle's duty is to attend the meetings of the company, to attend the common halls held at Guildhall, to collect the quarterage, and generally to carry out the instructions of the governing body.

His salary is 15*l.* per annum.

The beadle is not a member of the company.

PART IV.—A.

RETURN B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

RETURN B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B. 2.—The company's accounts are made up at Midsummer, the balance, therefore, herein-after mentioned refers to that time, and not to 31st December in each year.

The amounts are of course exclusive of the company's stocks, &c.

B. 3.—No estimate of the value of the articles mentioned is taken in connection with the annual accounts of the company. The company has no means of ascertaining unless by employing a valuer to make a special valuation.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1.—The tabular statement in reply to the preceding question will answer this also.
The company can offer no opinion in reference to the latter part of the enquiry.

F. 2.—The company can offer no opinion on this point.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

G. 1.—The company has no estates within the meaning of this question.

G. 2.—The moneys from time to time paid to the company are received by the clerk and placed by him to the credit of the company at their bankers; payments are usually made by cheque, signed by the master for the time being.

G. 3.—The company's accounts are audited annually by two of the assistants duly chosen at a meeting of the court, and their correctness certified in the usual way.

G. 4.—The accounts are not published, but are written up in an audit book and kept in the company's safe at the clerk's office. They are accessible to any member of the court of assistants, but to no one else unless by authority of the court.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

H.—For answers to this question the Commissioners are referred to Part IV., Returns A. and B. supra, from which it is hoped they will get sufficient information to meet their requirements without the recapitulation which this question involves.

PART IV.—K.

Position in relation to Universities.

RETURN K.—Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

None.

PART IV.—L.

Church Patronage.

RETURN L.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company.
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

None.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

Yes. See Answer Part I., Return H.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave the fullest information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

FELTMAKERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the court of aldermen or of the court of common council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the court of aldermen, act of common council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A. Feltmakers' Company originally united to the Haberdashers' Company, but separately incorporated by King James I., 1604.

B. (1.) A charter, 27th June 1667, under the great seal of Charles II., reciting the above-mentioned charter of 1604, and confirming the same.
(2.) A charter, 10th January 1869. 21 Charles II.
(3.) A charter of inspeximus, 4th December 1772. 13 George III.

C. None.

D. Byelaws, 8th October 1667; 7th July 1668; 31st July 1745 and 1759. It would be difficult to state the effect of these documents, except by rendering full copies thereof, which can be supplied if desired.

E. None.

F. The company was founded to regulate the manufacture and sale of felt hats.

G. No.

H. A general power of superintendence is vested in the company by the above named charters over the making of felt hats within the City of London and the suburbs for four miles round. By the ordinance of 1759 all persons carrying on the trade in London are to be free of the company.

PART I.—RETURN I.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

Failing 25 such persons, the surplus of the gift is distributed among poor and decayed members of the company not qualified as aforesaid.	This application was settled by a scheme in Chancery, dated 26th July 1838, and confirmed by a decree pronounced on the 6th November 1838. The accounts are audited yearly by the master, wardens, and four other members of the court.

Accounts audited at a yearly court as above.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of a master, four wardens, and 21 assistants, in accordance with the charter.

2. The election to the court of assistants is by the master, wardens, and assistants assembled in court as vacancies arise. The election of master and wardens is made in like manner annually.

3. The governing body admit freemen and elect liverymen, bind apprentices, and distribute the charities. The master pays 12*l.* 12*s.* on admission, and the three senior wardens 6*l.* 6*s.* each. No salaries are received.

4. See reply to question 3. The accounts and records of meetings are regularly kept by the clerk of the company. The meetings of the court take place on Plough Monday and on the first Monday of the months of April and July, and the first Thursday in October, and at any other time directed by the master, besides which the master and wardens meet in February to distribute King's gift, and in December, with four members of the court of assistants, to audit the accounts.

5. The members of the governing body are liable to removal at the will and pleasure of the court for misbehaviour or discontinuing to attend the courts for one year.

6. Byelaws, 31st July 1745, approved by Lord Chancellor Hardwicke. By the byelaws of 1759 all persons carrying on the trade in London are to be members of the company.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The restrictions on trading having been now removed there are no members who are not freemen. The grades are therefore practically freemen and liverymen.
There are instances on the books of women having been admitted to the freedom.

2. By servitude, patrimony, and redemption. Fees on servitude and patrimony 3*l.* 10*s.*, and on redemption 5*l.* 10*s.*, including 1*l.* stamp duty in the first case and 3*l.* in the second.

3. The provisions stated under Part II. A. in this respect have become practically obsolete. It is not necessary for apprentices to be free of the city, nor would it appear to be absolutely necessary for freemen of the company to be free of the city, though it is the custom for them to be so. Liverymen must be free of the city.
It is not possible to ascertain with certainty how many of the freemen carry on the trade of felt hat-making.

4. No instance remembered by any member of the court.

5. Livery limited to 120; qualifications are the freedom of the company and the city, and election by the court to the livery. It is believed that liverymen are not liable to removal by the court. No instance of removal is recorded.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.)—Number of freemen
(2.)—Number of liverymen
(3.)— ———————
} It is impossible to answer these inquiries with certainty. The number of liverymen entitled to vote is 53.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company, during each of the last ten years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

(1.)—In 1871, 1; 1876, 1.

(2.)—This does not appear.

(3.)—In no case.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company.
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the Governing Body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the Governing Body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. Unless elected a pensioner under Machan's Trust or King's Gift, there is not any pecuniary advantage arising from being a member of the company in any grade. It is difficult to see what the words "or otherwise" are intended to comprehend, but the only tangible advantage would seem to be that of the franchise, to which liverymen living within a certain distance are entitled.

2. From April 1872 to November 1876 the fee of 5*s.* was paid to each member of the court for attendance at Guildhall. Before and subsequent to these dates nil. It is difficult to see how an average can be arrived at of the recipients under charities, who it is presumed would be considered as pensioners, and who might be relieved once or for 50 years.

3. No pensioners, except those of Machan's Gift and King's Gift: the qualifications are stated under the heads of the founders' wills.

4. No fixed rules under this head. The choice is made by the court for the time being, having reference to fitness and the probability of the frequent and punctual attendance of the person proposed, without regard to seniority.

5. No.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A. Alfred Peachey, clerk.

Usual duties of the clerk of a company in keeping records, minutes, and accounts. Salary, 8*l.* and small fees from new members.

B. George King, beadle.
Summoning courts and attending the court at their meetings, receiving quarterage, &c. Salary, 8*l.* 10*s.* and some small fees from new members.

C. By the court of assistants annually.

---

* This includes the balance of a claim received on a fire policy which at the close of the financial year was in course of expenditure upon new buildings, all which were completed in the spring of the ensuing year.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last ten years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

(1.) This appears by the preceding returns.

(2.) The company have no data from which to express an opinion as to the income in future years.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company.

1. The company's farm held in trust is periodically visited by those members of the court who are considered best able to report and advise as to the fulfilment by the tenant of the covenants of his lease, and also upon any emergency, such as fire, or the granting of a fresh lease, the assistance of a surveyor has been called in when needful.

2. By the clerk of the company, in the name and under the supervision of the renter warden, chosen yearly.

3. Yearly, in December; by the master, wardens (other than the renter warden) and four members of the court of assistants, chosen by the master, wardens, and assistants at the preceding court.

4. Not printed or published, but accessible to all parties interested.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding ten years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such ten years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last ten years.

Copies of the accounts are subjoined. The assets on trust and general currents accounts appear on Return IV. B., where no balance appears in favour of the company. There was a small balance due to the renter warden which was recouped by the succeeding year's receipts for fines, &c.

The company has no property except its trust property detailed above, which is a standing asset and has no corresponding liability.

Part IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company, in the year 1875, offered prizes for essays and specimens, with a view to the manufacture and application of felt. The sum so expended was 16*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or "the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The master, wardens, and assistants have no suggestions to offer on this head.

Their trust properties are strictly and economically administered, in pursuance of the testamentary directions of the founders and the scheme settled by the court as to one of them as above stated. The general income consists entirely of voluntary payments, forming on an average an inconsiderable total per year, and the expenditure tends to the promotion of good fellowship and social intercourse among those who administer the charities entrusted to their care without deductions.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave a considerable amount of information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. The majority of the court were then hatters, and the company was, to a considerable extent composed of members of the trade, but control of the trade had been gradually abandoned. It was stated that the trade had been greatly injured by the control of the unions.

The following is an extract from the 1834 return respecting the property and expenditure of the company:—

The gross receipts of the corporation for three years have been as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
1830	433	11	3
1831	394	12	11
1832	340	18	8

A portion of this arises from the dividends of 1,000*l.* South Sea Annuities and 400*l.* Consols, derived from a bequest of Mr. Thomas King, the annual dividends whereof, amounting to 42*l.*, are paid to six poor widows and six poor freemen. Another portion arises from a copyhold estate, consisting of a messuage and about 41 acres of land, in the parish of Upminster, in the county of Essex, called Salter's farm, derived from Philip Machan; the land tax of 6*l.* was redeemed by the company 6th August 1805, for 220*l.*, 3 per cent. Consols. The rents of Salter's farm are distributed as follows: 25*l.* per annum to 25 poor freemen; 5*l.* per annum to poor widows of freemen residing in Southwark, and 2*l.* per annum to poor widows of freemen residing in London. The remainder of the income is applied in insurance of the buildings, and in the fines and fees payable to the lord of the manor and the steward, which on the last admission amounted to 34*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* It does not appear that the trust accounts are kept separate from the general accounts of the company. The savings of the company, and the sum of 20*l.* presented by members put on the court, are from time to time invested in the three and a half per cent.

The remainder of the income of the company arises from fines and fees on admission, &c., and from the quarterage paid by freemen, or from compensations in lieu thereof.

The master, wardens, and livery usually dine together on Lord Mayor's day, which dinner is paid for by the stewards, and the fines and the general funds of the company.

The master, wardens, and assistants dine together on the election day, but it is alleged that the expenses of that dinner are more than paid for by their own fines on serving the offices of master and wardens. The only other dinners given is a small dinner of the committee for election of stewards, at an average expense of about 8*l.* annually, and on the audit of accounts the auditors have tea or other refreshments, at an expense of about 2*l.* per annum. The residue of the funds is stated to be expended in "payment of the "stewards and emoluments of the officers of the company."

FLETCHERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—It is probable that the company was founded in the 15th century, inasmuch as the grant of arms which is in the company's possession is dated in the seventh year of Edward IV. None of the circumstances connected with the foundation of the company are known. It is a company founded by prescription and not by grant.

B.—None are known of.

C.—Ditto.

D.—None are known of except the Orders of the Aldermen or Common Council which regulate the number of wardens, assistants, and liverymen.

E.—None.

F.—The local limits of the company are the city and liberties of London, the company being an appendage to the Corporation of London. It is a company by prescription having been recognized by the Corporation of London from time immemorial. Previously to the reign of Henry VII. it obtained a livery, and in that reign obtained a crest to its then ancient coat of arms. In point of precedence it is the 39th company of the city. No charter can now be discovered, and the ancient books of the company are supposed to have been destroyed by fire. The oldest entry in connexion with the cash accounts of the company now in the possession of the company is dated 25th January 1775; in connexion with its proceedings 26th January 1767; admission of Freemen 6th february 1732: all these accounts have since been regularly continued up to the present time. Numerous entries of very ancient dates respecting this company are to be seen in the journals and repertories of the Corporation of London. They principally relate to differences between this company and the Bowyers, returns of the number of the livery and the employment of foreigners. The company has not a common seal. The wardens and court of assistants are the ruling body, and they fill up their vacancies as they occur as hereinafter stated.

G.—Nothing is known about this, but the company does, as hereinafter appears, hold the freehold of a warehouse in the city of London, formerly the site of their hall, which is held in the names of five gentlemen as trustees for the company.

H.—No.

I.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company has no charity connected with it, and no charitable funds.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of two wardens, an upper and a renter warden, and 10 assistants.

2. There are no qualifications, except that nominees for the court must be liverymen at the time of nomination. The court of assistants fills up vacancies as it pleases.

3. The upper warden presides at the meetings of the company, and the renter warden receives and pays all money and property of the company under the direction of the court, but they have no salary or incidental emoluments.

The assistants, with the wardens, hold generally quarterly courts. They elect wardens, also the clerk and beadle, audit the accounts of the renter warden, and generally manage the affairs of the company. They have the general privileges of the livery, but no salary or incidental emoluments. The fees payable on entrance to the court appear under Return B.

The clerk is elected by the wardens and court of assistants; he attends all courts, takes the minutes of the proceedings, fills up the summonses for their meetings and receipts for quarterage, makes returns and attends the revising barrister, and generally transacts the business of a clerk or secretary. His salary is 10*l.* 10*s.* a year. He, however, receives 1*l.* on the admission of every freeman, and 10*s.* on that of a liveryman. His emoluments average about 12*l.* a year. The beadle is also elected by the court; he attends their meetings, and collects the quarterage; his salary is 6*l.* a year, and he receives 5*s.* a day for attending at the wicket on every common hall, 2*s.* 6*d.* on every admission of a freeman, 5*s.* on the admission of each member on the court, and his emoluments amount to about 7*l.* or 8*l.* a year.

4. The court meets generally once a quarter, but has framed no rules for the conduct of its business. Resolutions are not published. The question of accessibility has never arisen.

5. No suspension or removal has, as far as it is known, ever taken place.

6. No.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. There is no special qualification for admission to the freedom. The freemen of the company are eligible to be admitted to the freedom of the city, and may afterwards be admitted to the livery by the court of assistants, and afterwards may be elected on the court. No women have hitherto been admitted.

2. The freedom of the company is obtained by patrimony, servitude, redemption, or gift. The fees are as follows:—

By patrimony or servitude.

	£	s.	d.
Stamp duty	1	0	0
Beadle	0	2	6
Poor box	0	2	6
	£3	7	0

By redemption.

	£	s.	d.
Beadle	0	2	6
Poor box	0	2	6
	£5	7	0

By gift.

No case of admission by gift is on record.

3. The company has now no connexion with any particular trade. There is no binding rule or understanding in connexion with the freedom of the city. In many cases freemen of the company admitted upon the livery have been previously made free of the city, and where this is not the case the freedom of the city has generally followed shortly afterwards. There are two members who are not free of the city.

4. No disfranchisement has ever taken place or apparently been thought of.

5. The number of liverymen is limited to 25. Any freeman of the company may be elected. They are elected by the court of assistants. The fees are as follows:—

Where freedom was obtained by patrimony or servitude.	£	s.	d.	By redemption.	£	s.	d.
Company	10	0	0	Company	15	0	0
Clerk	0	10	0	Clerk	0	10	0
Beadle	0	2	6	Beadle	0	2	6
	£10	12	6		£15	12	6

No question of removal of liverymen has arisen.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

1. Nineteen.
2. Nineteen.
3. None.
4. The number of admissions to the freedom (which have all been by redemption) for the last 10 years have been as follows:—

1870	None.
1871	3
1872	1
1873	None.
1874	1
1875	1
1876	None.
1877	3
1878	1
1879	None.
1880	2

5. The admissions to the livery have been the same as to the freedom.

Part II.—D.

Return D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company.

1. None.
2. None.

Part II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. (1, 2, 3.) There are no advantages beyond the fact of belonging to a city company.
2. Nothing. Except a grant of 5*l.* made to Mr. Rees a poor member of the court on the 30th April 1878.
3. There are no rules on the subject and at present there are no pensioners. The last pensioner, the widow of a former member, died in 1873.
4. This matter is of no importance in the case of the Fletchers' Company.
5. No.

In what Name standing, e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what account belonging, e.g., any particular fund or trust account.	Net Annual Receipt.
£ 210	India 4*l.* per cent.	The stock appears to have been purchased out of the ordinary funds of the Company.	Edward Tewart and Arthur Pouchin Silberrad.	There is no trust known to be connected with it.

This stock with the freehold above mentioned is the whole of the property belonging to the company except one or two articles of interest.

B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B. 2.—There has been a balance due to the renter warden on every account until the last account (1879 and 1880), where there was a balance in his hands of 15*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*
B 3.—Under 10*l.*

PART IV.—RETURN C.

RETURN C. (1).—A list of any properties of which the company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C. (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

1. None.
2. None, unless an ancient right which seems to exist, but which is not exercised, to borrow money from the Bowyers' Company and the Leathersellers' Company can be called a property.

PART IV.—RETURN D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the company during each of the preceding 10 years.

None.

Part IV.—E.

Return E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last ten years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

4.—None.

5.—Nothing but the quarterages paid by members, which are 10*s.* per annum for the livery and 1*l.* per annum for members of the court of assistants.

Part IV.—F.

Return F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

Return F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

1.—No practical decrease or increase has taken place nor is any expected within the times named.
2.—As the lease of the warehouse runs out the freehold becomes more valuable as the rent paid by the lessee is not the rack rental.

Part IV.—G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

1.—There is no system of management except that the clerk brings all business matters before the court.
2.—By the clerk for the renter warden, and under the control of the court.
3.—By the full court.
4.—Not published. The question of accessibility has never arisen.

Part IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

H.—The ledger of the company for the last 10 years can be seen if desired.

Part IV.—K.

Position in relation to Universities.

Return K.—Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

K.—No.

Part IV.—L.

Church Patronage.

Return L.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

L.—No.

Part IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

M.—The company has no funds out of which to do this. But the company has been in the habit of voluntarily giving away certain moneys part of their income.

PART V.—Reform.

Part V.—Reform.—The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) "are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the com- "panies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company has no suggestions to make.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave full information to the Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their income then amounted to about 120*l.* a year.

FOUNDERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A. to H., both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect.

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty, or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Founders' Company existed as a "Mistery" prior to the year 1365, as appears from a petition to the City of London from the "Good Men of the Mistery of the Founders of the City of London." This petition is to be found in the Letter Books at Guildhall, and the entry is also evidence that ordinances were granted on the 29th July, 39th Edw. III.

The Founders' Company possesses no copy of these ordinances.

In the grant of arms to the Company (13th October 1590) it is recited that "The Company of the Art and "Mistery of the Founders are incorporated by the name "of three Wardens and Commonalty, and that they shall "have a perpetual succession."

In some proceedings before the Committee for Regulation of Corporations (1652) a reply of the Court to certain complaints by the Commonalty, mentions incidentally that "we began in the year 1472 with 24 poor 'honest men.'"

This latter date, perhaps, marks the transition of the original guild or brotherhood to some more settled but still imperfect form of incorporation that, probably, which is recognised in the grant of arms, itself, 24 years prior in date to the charter, under which the Company still exists. But on this point the Company's minute and other books do not extend far enough back for proof.

B.—The Founders' Company was incorporated by Royal Charter, dated 18th September, 12th James I. (1614).

A second charter, dated 28th February, 1st James II., was annulled by 2nd William and Mary, c. 8. s. 14.

The charter of 1614 is the only one in force affecting the Founders' Company.

It recites, that it was part of the regal office to see that the people were justly dealt with inter alia in the matter of weights and measures, that a particular abuse was reported, brass weights were ill and untruly made, and that this was due to fraud as well as unskilfulness.

It recites also that English makers of brass weights, and melters and workers of brass and copper wares, mostly resided in London, but were not reduced into a "certain Company," nor governed, nor their work searched and viewed, as in other mysteries where there was a "settled corporation."

It then proceeds to incorporate "all and every our loving "subjects the Founders of our City of London, and others "the Freemen of the said Mistery," and to give them a corporate name "Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of "the Mistery of Founders of the City of London."

It gives them power to hold lands in fee "not exceeding the yearly value of 40*l.*" as well as personal estate in succession, with an absolute power of disposal over both kinds of property, and to seal deeds accordingly.

They may sue and be sued in their corporate name.

They shall have and may deface and renew a common seal.

There shall be 1 master, 2 wardens, 15 assistants.

Hull "who is now the upper warden of the said mistery" shall be master from the date of the charter to the Monday before Michaelmas Day, and from that Monday till a new master is chosen.

Rawlins and Hobbs, "who be now likewise wardens of the said mystery" are made wardens for the same period.

Fifteen "Founders of London,"—nominatim—are constituted the first assistants for life, removable, however, for reasonable cause.

The mistery may have one hall or house of council within the city.

On the same Monday the master and wardens with the consent of the assistants, "or the greater part of them," are to nominate two of the assistants.

Of these two, the master and wardens and such other of the assistants as have been upper wardens (to be termed the senior assistants) or the greater part of this constituent body, shall on the same Monday elect one master for the ensuing year, he taking an oath for the due execution of his office.

The master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them (whereof the master and one warden shall be two) are to nominate six of the assistants, or if need be, of the livery, of which six the same constituent body shall elect two wardens for the year ensuing, removable, and upon oath, as in the case of the master.

Masters and wardens having served their respective official years shall remain assistants for life, removable, however, as before.

In the case of master or wardens dying or dismissed during their year of office, their successors shall be elected by the master and wardens, with the assistants, or the greater part of them, within 15 days of the vacancy occuring, and as often as it occurs, such election to be for the remainder of the current official year, an oath for due service to be taken.

In the case of death or removal of assistants their successors are to be elected for life by the master, wardens, and surviving assistants "in convenient time" after such vacancy, and as often as it occurs, an oath for due service being taken.

The master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them (the master and one warden being two) may make free of the mistery, persons using the trade of a founder, or of melting brass or copper metals, to be free of the city, "according to the usage and custom of the same," such freemen to enjoy all liberties and privileges by the charter granted to the master, wardens, and commonalty.

The master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, may appoint necessary officers and ministers, who are to take the oath of office.

They may meet in their hall or any other place within the city or suburbs, and make statutes, laws, articles, and ordinances concerning the good government of the mistery, the searching and finding out falsities and deceits in workmanship, or brass and copper works, wares, and weights, and the conduct of persons using the art or mistery within the city and suburbs, and three miles compass of the city, as well in matters touching the mistery, or the working, melting, making, or selling of any brass or copper works, weights, and wares, as in their offices, ministries, functions, and businesses touching the said commonalty and mistery.

They and their sworn ministers and officers shall have and enjoy the sizing and marking of brass weights made within the city or within three miles compass thereof.

To which end the master and wardens shall have the view and search of all brass weights, and of brass and copper works within the city and three miles compass thereof, and of all brass weights made beyond the seas and brought into the city, or within three miles compass thereof to be sold.

Weights which are true and sufficient shall before they are sold or uttered be "sized by the standard at Founders' Hall, and marked with their common mark.

"And then to be sealed at Guildhall if they be weights "of avoirdupoise, and at Goldsmiths' Hall if they be troy "weights."

"And if they shall be found defective to be defaced."

All brass weights to be by their makers and owners from time to time brought to Founders' Hall, and there sized "and made lawful and good according to our standard of "England," and then marked with the common and usual mark of the mistery, "being the form of an ewer," the Company taking the antient allowance for sizing.

Fines or amerciaments for breach of ordinances to be imposed by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them, according to their good discretions, and leviable on the offender's goods and chattels, without account to the king.

The laws and ordinances of the mistery shall be obeyed upon the penalties "in the same to be imposed, inflicted, and limited in form aforesaid," so as such laws and ordinances be not repugnant to the law of England or the customs of the City of London.

The charter then recites that deceits of working brass and copper metals into weights and other kinds of wares are practised "in divers outplaces and corners adjacent" to the city, and proceeds to grant the right to the master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them or their sworn officers, deputed under common seal "to search, "view, and survey all and singular shops, warehouses, "and other places as well within our said City of London "as within 3 miles compass thereof," for deceitful brass or "copper wares and brass weights," and for other frauds, "deceits, and abuses in all kind of works and wares made "of brass or copper," and bring the same to Founders' "Hall," there to be tested, and if condemned, defaced, and the offenders to be punished according to the ordinances of the mistery, the mayor, sheriffs, justices, constables, and other officers within the three mile compass to be aiding. Such search, however, not to extend to the pewterers "other than such as do only make and work brass and "copper wares."

Mayors, sheriffs, justices, constables, and other officers and ministers are enjoined to be aiding the mistery, to do, enjoy, have, and execute all things thereby granted. Grant to be construed in favour of the grantees as against the Crown.

C.—It is not known that there have ever been trust deeds founding or regulating the Founders' Company. How far the "Founders' Charitable Fund" affects the Founders' Company will appear from the account of that charity subsequently given. At all events, it has no trust deed.

D.—It is not known that there are any decrees of court regulating or affecting the Founders' Company.

As to acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council:—

1365. 39 Edward III., July 29. Ordinances then granted by the Mayor and Aldermen provide for—

Good workmanship, originally, and in repairs.

Abstention from work by night on Saturdays and on the vigils of "double feasts."

Restriction of apprentices to men of the mistery.

Compulsory examination of shopkeepers by the masters of the mistery.

The like as to workmen, the terms of their hiring, and compulsory apprenticeship if found ignorant.

Settlement of disputes between masters of the mistery and their "varlets" or servants, and punishment of offences by the latter.

Prevention of abduction of apprentices from their service before its term is completed.

Selection of overseers from the mistery to present defaults and punishment for obstructing their search.

Forfeiture of bad work and the extension to persons not of the mistery of the overseers right of search.

1489. 4th Henry VII, April 2. Ordinances then granted by the mayor and aldermen provide for—

Attendance of brothers of the craft upon the wardens and also upon the mayor, aldermen, and sheriffs.

Masses, burials, and arms charged on brothers of the clothing householders, not of the clothing and journeymen.

A mass on the feast of the Assumption of the Virgin (15th August.)

Fines for insubordination to the wardens or livery.

Limitation of the number of apprentices taken by brothers of the craft, and presentation to the wardens of an apprentice "ere he be bound."

Inspection by wardens of goods going to a fair before they are packed.

Brother not suing brother without warden's license, and prohibition from work of ordinance breakers until submission to warden's judgment.

1508. 24th Henry VII., Oct. 26. The mayor made an award for composing differences and ordered that the moveable effects of the craft should be placed in a chest to stand in St. Margaret's Lothbury, in St. Clement's Chapel there, where the craft had yearly their mass for the brethren and sisters of the fellowship.

Six of the yeomanry are to assist in auditing the warden's accounts, and to have one of the four keys of the chest, the custody of which however remained with the wardens.

1515. 7th Henry VIII., February 28. Articles agreed to by the Court of Common Council under the following heads:—

1. Choice of wardens.
2. Quarterage.
3. Masses.
4. Summonses.
5. Search.
6. No stranger to work on the craft.
7. Carrying wares to fairs.
8. Variance between brothers and brothers.
9. Apprentices.
10. Terms of apprenticeship.
11. Presenting apprentices.
12. Hawking wares.
13. St. Clement brotherhood.
14. Presenting before setting up in the craft.
15. Livery.
16. Power of distress.
17. Oath on admission.
18. Confirmation of ordinances.

1579. 21st Elizabeth, January 28. Upon a report of aldermen on relief of poor members of the Founders' Company it was ordered by the mayor and aldermen—

1. That the livery should pay 3*d.*, the freemen 2*d.* quarterly, leviable by distress.

2. That the younger warden should collect the 3*d.*, that the livery should nominate four freemen, out of whom the freemen should elect two to be collectors for the year of the 2*d.* The poor box, having three locks, to be under the control of the younger warden and two collectors, who should distribute the contents at their discretion. Variances to be decided by "the other two wardens,"

1587. 29th Elizabeth, April 27. On the report of Slaney, Alderman, it was ordered that the number of apprentices be diminished; the livery, being metalmen and moulders, to have but one apprentice "abled" two years before the end of their last apprentice's term. Those out of the livery to have no apprentice "abled" to them until the number be diminished.

[The limit of the diminution is not specified.]

1587. 29th Elizabeth, May 9. Ordinance—

That the Company should have for assising

For every 8 lb. weight	-	4*d.*
„ 4 lb. „	-	2*d.*
„ 2 lb. „	-	1*d.*
And for a broken pound weight	-	1*d.*

1587. 29th Elizabeth, May 16. Ordinance, that the Company should stamp their arms on every brass weight thereafter assised.

The arms however were granted 13th October, 1590.

1592. 34th Elizabeth, March 28th. The ordinances called "the ordinances of Elizabeth," of which the Company has a copy were made by the mayor and aldermen as follow:

1. The wardens and assistants within 12 days before or after St. Bartholmew's day to choose three persons of the Company to be wardens under the observance and correction of the Lord Mayor according to the custom of the city.

On refusal to serve fines to be levied and a new election had.

2. Livery to pay, 3*d.*; freemen, 2*d.* quarterage.

3. Being summoned, a livery-man breaking his hour shall pay 3*d.*; 6*d.* if he absent himself altogether. Freemen 2*d.* and 4*d.* in like defaults.

4. Wardens, with an officer of the Lord Mayor, may search, seize, deface, and fine for defective wares, half the fine going to the chamberlain and half to the Company.

5. None other than apprentices to the craft to work in it without consent of wardens and six assistants. Apprentices out of their time and freemen not to work except with other freemen without the like consent.

6. No man of the craft to send wares to any fair out of London without the wardens previous sight and search.

7. A fine of 20*s.* on members vexing members for debt or trespass without previous submission of the complaint to the wardens. And the like fine on brother reviling brother "contrary to the order of charity and good neighbour-"hood."

8. Since the mistery has not wherewith to maintain its charges, every able person of the craft and using the art of making founders' wares, shall have but one apprentice, bound by indenture for eight years. But if the master has been warden he may have two so bound, but he must employ them both "of his own work"; if he have not work enough for two, he, though a warden, must keep but one.

On the other hand, though not a warden, if he has work enough for two, he may have two, the first year of the second coinciding with the last year of the first apprentices' term.

But wardens having two apprentices may not take another until one of the two has fully served his term.

An apprentice before binding must be "abled" by the wardens and four assistants, to see "that he be free born and whole of limb for the honour of the city."

The master pays 2*s.* 6*d.* for "abling." 6*d.* to the chamber and 2*s.* to the Company.

9. Though an apprentice be set over, his master shall not without chamberlain and warden's licence take another until the last year of the apprentice's term shall be current.

10. No ware of latten new made to be hawked in the city or its liberties.

11. Freemen setting up shops to be sworn before the wardens, and pay 7*d.*

12. Clothing to be given of one suit and colour, with hoods of a prescribed colour, and according to a pattern, every three years. Fine of 10*s.*, half to the chamber and half to the Company for breach or refusal "to come into the said livery."

13. Furnaces for founding not to be worked until the wardens have first seen that risk of fire is avoided.

14. Livery to pay 3*d.*, freemen 2*d.*, quarterly; the younger warden to collect the 3*d.*; two collectors chosen from and by the freemen to collect the 2*d.* These collectors to be yearly changed when the wardens are changed.

The money thus collected to be put into a box with three locks "now remaining in the Founders' Hall"; the younger warden to hold one key, the two collectors the others, and at their joint discretion make distribution to the poor of the Company.

They shall keep a book showing how much they have collected, and of whom and how much they have distributed, and when and to whom, and they shall yearly submit this account to auditors appointed by the other two wardens and assistants or the majority. Any variance between the the younger warden and two collectors about distribution shall be decided by the other two wardens who shall fix the amount of relief to be given.

15. For assisting weights the Company shall have as much as the sealer for the city takes. No person of the Company shall set any brass weight for sale before the same is sized marked with the "Ewer," and sealed by the keeper of Guildhall. Fine 20*s.*; half to the chamber, half to the Company.

16. Disobedience to these ordinances punishable by distress; an officer of the Mayor assisting. The distress to be brought to the chamberlain, who assigns a day, viz., 12 days after the distress taken, to content the penalties. All fines levied to belong to the chamber and Company equally.

17. The terms of the oath for new brethren prescribe loyalty to the Queen, fidelity to the craft, obedience to the wardens, payment of quarterage, attendance upon summons, and performance of rules and ordinances present or future.

1613. 11 James I. Nov. 4.—Committee appointed upon a petition of Robert Thompson, founder, report—

1. A recommendation that the Company "who now are a brotherhood and no corporation" be incorporated.

2. Melters and workers of molten brasses and copper metals within the city and three miles compass of the same to be subject to ordinances made by the Company and confirmed by the Lord Chancellor and two Chief Justices, saving the rights of the pewterers.

3. The master and wardens may make ordinances not repugnant to the laws of the land or the freedom and liberties of the city.

4. They may have the view of all brass weights within the city or three miles compass thereof, or made beyond sea and brought into the city or within three miles compass thereof to be sold. Such weights before being sold or uttered to be sized by the standard at Founders' Hall, and marked with their mark for that service, then sealed, if avoirdupose at Guildhall, if troy at Goldsmiths' Hall, if found defective, defaced.

1753. May 9. Order of the Common Council.—Enacting that from Michaelmas 1753 all persons using the trade of a founder within the city or its liberties shall take up his freedom in the Founders' Company, be refused admission into any other Company, and if using the trade after the above date, pay 5*l.* penalty for each offence.

28. Penalties recoverable by action of debt in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record.

29. Courts of assistants at which nine members are present (the master and one warden, or the wardens being two) may lessen or remit fines, forfeitures, or penalties.

Forms of oaths are appended.

That administered to the masters and wardens binds to fidelity to the sovereign, to due execution of the office, prohibits impunity to offenders against the laws and ordinances, and punishment of any for hate or envy, binds to maintenance of the ordinances, to good treatment of the men of the mistery, to just administration of its affairs, prohibits private, to the hindrance of the common, profit and waste of the Company's property. Enjoins true accounts and payment of what is found due, and payment according to the ordinances of fines on default, prohibits admission or dismissal of brethren without assistants' consent, the undertaking without their counsel of weighty business, except delay be hurtful to the Company. Enjoins the due convening of the assistants to the courts, and general just conduct in matters concerning the mistery.

The assistant's oath enjoins fidelity to the sovereign and to the master and wardens when summoned (except on reasonable excuse), good advice and counsel in the Company's affairs without malice or affection to others, or corrupt profit to the deponent, maintenance of the ordinances, and generally just conduct in the affairs of the mistery.

The auditor's oath enjoins faithful examination of the Company's account, impartiality between the Company and the accountants, delivery of the accounts "fairly ingrossed up in writing" to the master and wardens at the appointed time, and general discretion and skill in every thing for the common profit of the Company without wrong to the accounts.

The Clerk's oath enjoins fidelity and obedience to the master and wardens in the Company's affairs, keeping the Company's secret, prohibits delivery of its documents without the master and wardens' consent. Enjoins the deponent to be a faithful admonisher and remembrancer in the Company's affairs, prohibits the doing anything prejudicial to the Company, and generally enjoins due execution of the office, especially the rendering of accounts, or else submission to the court "touching your pain." Concludes with a general injunction of conduct in the Company's affairs.

The freeman's oath enjoins fidelity to the Company, attendance upon summons (except upon sufficient excuse), keeping the Company's secrets, upholding its credit and profit, submission to the ordinances, payment of fines on default, and general obedience and good conduct in the deponent's calling in the mistery.

The sizer's oath enjoins true sizing all brass weights which ought to be sized according to the king's standard remaining in Founders' Hall, and mark all lawful brass weights with the Company's mark of an ewer.

Then to bring them to Guildhall to be sealed if avoirdupoize or if troys to Goldsmiths' Hall.

And if false and not sufficient to present them to the master and wardens to be broken and defaced.

And the general impartial execution of his office.

The searcher's oath enjoins search at the master's and wardens' commandment within the city and suburbs and three miles compass thereof, for deceitful works wrought into brass or copper wares, and use of his best endeavours for the punishment of the masters, sellers, and workers, and for the marking of true weights with the Company's "ewer."

And generally the obedient and impartial execution of his office.

F.—In 1365 a mistery of founders existed with masters elected and sworn to govern it. Their jurisdiction over the trade extended to trade disputes, and especially to seeing that the materials used in it were good. This jurisdiction required the authority of the city to enforce it and for search a sergeant of the chamber was sworn with the masters of the mistery. At this early date no powers as to weights appear.

In 1472 there seems to have been some kind of reconstitution of the guild. Wardens are mentioned in the ordinances of 1489 which contain directions about masses, burials, and alms, but still no mention of weights. At this period the carrying wares to fairs, hawking them, restricting the workmanship to members of the craft, alms paid to members, funerals of members (there was a hearse cloth for common use which was destroyed during the Commonwealth as popish), and apprenticeships seem to have been among the matters which principally occupied the attention of the guild and came under its control. It is clear that anciently the trade was to a great extent identical with the guild, because in the 8th of the ordinances of 28th March 1592 there appears an apprehension that too many apprentices may become entitled to claim their freedom, and so to privileges entailing expense which the funds of the guild would be inadequate to meet.

In 1531 the Company, or rather the members of it, out of their private resources, bought the site of their old hall in Founders' Hall Court, which site remains to the present time their most valuable possession.

In 1579 the younger warden is mentioned.

In 1587 there is the first reference to sizing weights as a part of the Company's duties.

In 1592 it becomes clear that there were three wardens, a livery and a yeomanry, and also that the Company had very little money, that they sized weights, controlled apprenticeships, searched for bad materials, and inspected furnaces. Still (in 1613), the Company is said to be a brotherhood and no corporation, although, on the other hand, in 1590 they are alleged to be incorporate by the name of three wardens and commonalty with a perpetual succession.

Whatever may be the explanation of these contradictory statements, the Company obtained in 1614 its charter, and with it all its present constitution and privileges. By this grant and the ordinances of nearly the same date the public duty which they had no doubt exercised before was formally and authoritatively imposed upon the Founders' Company of searching for, sizing, and stamping brass weights within the limits so often mentioned in these returns. In fact, the motive of the Charter appears to be the performances of this public duty which has been carefully and faithfully discharged down to the present day.

The control of the Court over the trade, especially as to view and search for inferior workmanship, and still especially for inferior materials, is apparent from the charter and also from the contemporary ordinances, and at that time it seems to have gone so far as to include the allowance by the Company to workmen of private marks with which they were bound to stamp the articles they made.

All this time it is abundantly evident that the Company was not rich, and their hall being burnt in the great fire had to be rebuilt by the voluntary subscriptions of the members. The next misfortune was the seizure of their Charter by the king, and the still greater one of the consideration they had to pay for a re-grant. From these causes, whatever may have been the condition before they existed, it is certain that the Company became very impoverished, and that throughout the 18th century, and indeed up to 1846, it remained in a condition which allowed indeed of the performance of its chartered duties but of very little more. It is remarkable in the register of the Company how few members from 1740 to 1840 advanced beyond the first step. A liveryman is an exception, and it seems extraordinary that courts could during this period have been formed of the requisite number. At the same time it must be admitted that these members, who were freemen and nothing more, were working men, and the pensions, which even now are not quite extinct, to freemen's widows, were paid to the widows of these working men; in fact the Company was then to them still, what it was in part in its origin, a kind of benefit society. Even now if an application is made for the funeral expenses of a freeman or his widow a grant is always made, a usage, no doubt, arising out of the old custom by which the guild paid for the masses, dirges, and funerals of its deceased members, supplied the pall and attended as mourners.

In 1783 ordinances were granted to which attention is still paid by the court, the charter, and these one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three ordinances are, in fact, regarded as their guide whenever, which is seldom, any doubtful question arises. These ordinances fixed the maximum of members necessary to form a court at nine, showing that it had become difficult to induce members of the company to proceed beyond the initial stage of a freeman. The 1783 ordinances are directed to the regulation of the Company's offices and the fines payable upon serving them, or in default of service much more than to the questions of the weights, the search and inspection, and others affecting the founding trade. They were probably applied for in consequence of an action tried in 1777, in which the Company sought to compel a liveryman to serve steward, and in which they were nonsuited.

About 30 years ago the Goldsmiths' Company were consulted as to the expediency of reviving the view and search, but their clerk stated that on this subject Sir Vicary Gibbs had advised them, and that in his opinion the franchise subsisted and was good, but that if at that time of day they attempted to exercise it, there would be a riot and the master and wardens might find themselves in the compter.

In 1846 the finances of the Company began to change for the better. They let their old hall, the lower part of which was then used as a carpenter's shop, to the Electric Telegraph Company on a building lease at 325*l.* rent. In 1853, mainly through the influence of a member of the court well known in the city, a large accession to the livery took place, nearly 150 having been admitted since that date. In 1854 the house (New Founders' Hall) adjoining to the old hall was also let to the Electric Telegraph Company at an occupation rent of 400*l.* This necessitated the purchase of the present hall, the members of the court subscribing by way of loan the necessary funds. What with the increased rental of their property, what with the increased fines of the augmented livery, and what with self-imposed increase of fines on the wardens and assistants, the court were able to pay off these loans and also the money which they had previously borrowed of the charitable fund and Bond's legacy trustees to meet the expense of building their second, i.e., New Founders' Hall.

Encouraged by these results the court next (in 1877) resolved to pull down and rebuild their hall in St. Swithin's Lane. To do this they incurred a mortgage debt of 8,000*l.* at 4 per cent., secured on their property in Founders' Hall Court, but on the other hand, whereas the gross annual rental of the St. Swithin's Lane property before the pulling down was 330*l.*, it is now 952*l.* 10*s.*

And, lastly, whereas the gross rental of the Company's entire property in 1845 did not reach 100*l.*, it is now 1,662*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* The history of the Company since 1846 has thus been one almost it may be said of revival, through the increased value of their property, the loans from the members, the increase in their numbers, the voluntary increase in their fines, and the fortunate result of the purchase of the St. Swithin's Lane freehold property, the original cost of which was 3,750*l.*

G.—The license in mortmain appears from the abstract of the charter, its extent is supposed to be a value bearing such a proportion to the present value of the site of the old hall in Founders' Hall Court as 40*l.* per annum bore to the value of that site in 1614.

When the house on the site of which the present hall in St. Swithin's Lane was built was purchased, the Queen's Letters Patent, dated 28th November 1854, were obtained licensing and confined to that purchase.

H.—The abstracts furnished in compliance with returns B., D., and E. it is submitted satisfy return H. with the exception of its two last inquiries.

As to these, first, the sizing and stamping or marking brass weights continues, and has of course increased with the increase of population and trade. About 20,000 weights on an average are sized and stamped at the hall yearly, this is a principal part of the beadle's duty, and there seems to be a preference in the trade for weights with the hall mark. The search and view of weights have long ceased, chiefly because the city searcher inspects, and if he finds a weight not hall marked, directs, and if necessary compels, it to be brought to Founders' Hall. And from time to time the court issue printed circulars containing extracts from the charters and facsimiles of the hall marks, and pointing out that brass weights sized and stamped by the Company are good and legal weights for use throughout the realm. The falsities and deceits they are now, as always, exposed to and obliged to guard against, are the bringing for stamping weights with too little metal, the concealed plugging with lead, and the admixture of lead in other ways with the brass of which the weight ought wholly to consist.

As for the search and view, and view of work in brass and copper other than weights, it has long been disused. It cannot be said that the Company exercises any general supervision over the trade, except upon the special matter of weights. On the other hand, more persons are members of the Company who are connected with the trade than is usual with city companies, and the practice of the court is to subscribe, according to their means, to the Brass Founders' and Metal Workers' Charitable Institution.

Another injunction of the charter and 1783 ordinances has fallen into disuse, it is doubtful whether it ever was in use, the taking troy brass weight from Founders' Hall to Goldsmiths' Hall to be sealed.

The Company's rights as to weights are saved by sec. 43 of 5 & 6 William the IV. c. 63. and again by sec. 67 of 41 and 42 Vict. c. 49.

PART I.—I.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

Founder's Name.	Date of Foundation.	Objects of Benefaction.	Endowment. Personalty. / Stock.	Present Income.	Original Income.	Application of Income.	Remarks.
Henry Jourdeyn -	15 Oct. 1468	Twenty of the poor householders of the craft of founders dwelling within the walls of the City of London.	—	13*s.* 4*d.*	13*s.* 4*d.*, i.e., a quarter of coals to each of the 20 householders at 8*d.* per quarter.	The annual payments to freemen's widows exceed this and the other annual sum in the gift of the Company who make up the deficiency out of their general income.	This gift is payable and paid by the Fishmongers' Company, who are trustees under Jourdeyn's will, which is dated 15th October 1468.
Abraham Woodhall	20 Sept. 1640	The poorer sort of the Founders' Company.	—	40*s.*	40*s.*	Ditto - -	This gift is paid by the Chamberlain, the city having taken for Farringdon Market the site of the houses devised by Woodhall out of which the 40*s.* was issuing. His will, dated 20th September 1640, devised the houses to St. Bride's parish, subject to a condition that the parish paid the 40*s.* to the master and wardens for ever, to be by them distributed to the poorer sort of their Company.
William Bond -	24 Feb. 1823	Four young men who have served their time of apprenticeship to a free founder and the court.	935*l.* Consols.	28*l.* 1*s.*, less property tax.	28*l.* 1*s.*, less property tax.	Waiting decision of the court.	This is a trust legacy bequeathed by the will of the late Mr. Bond, a former clerk to the company. He left 1,000*l.* to the court in trust, to pay the income to his two nieces for their lives, and, after the death of the survivor (she died 9th April 1876), to pay 40*l.* of the said interest to four young men who have served their time of apprenticeship to a free founder, 10*l.* each, the remaining 10*l.* to be applied towards refreshments on the day of opening the poor box, or on any other day the court may appoint. If four young men do not yearly apply, the lapsed 10*l.* to be applied as the court may direct after paying the clerk of his attendance. This 1,000*l.* is represented by the 935*l.* Consols. Probably expenses and duty reduced the amount, but no account exists to the knowledge of the court. The testator seems to have assumed that the amount would remain 1,000*l.*, and produce always 5*l.* per cent. The court have received the dividends since January 1877, paid them into their bankers, but kept an account. No applications have been made by served apprentices, but it cannot be said that none are expected. Pending their decision what course to take with this charity, the court determined to offer prizes of an equal amount for a model of a bell, and a statuette specimen of repoussé brasswork, lock and hinge furniture, and a hanging lamp, and an essay on the history and art of founding. This competition has taken place, and certain prizes have been awarded, with additions made by members of the court on their own account. The matter of this charity is still under consideration.
The Founders' Charitable Fund was founded by the members of the Court, the livery, and others.	2nd April 1829.	Liverymen or widows of liverymen.	1,875*l.* Consols.	—	3*l.*	In payment of pensions to liverymen or their widows for life. In 1871 there was 146*l.* paid in pensions of 20*l.* and 16*l.* In 1872, 126*l.* in the like. In 1873, 116*l.* in the like. In 1874, 106*l.* in the like. In 1875, 80*l.* in pensions of 20*l.* In 1876, 80*l.* in the like. In 1877, 70*l.* in the like. In 1878, 50*l.* in the like. In 1879, 25*l.* In 1880, 45*l.*	This fund was formed by voluntary subscription, Mr. Warner and Mr. Mears, well known in the founding trade, with other members of the Court and livery, being the originators. At the time it was founded the income of the Company was small and inadequate for charitable purposes. The originators provided by resolution (there was no trust deed) that their subscriptions should not be subject to the debts and contingencies of the Company, but applicable only to the charitable purposes proposed. Gradually the investments of the monies subscribed reached the sum of 1,875*l.* Consols, at which it still continues. The distribution of the dividends were at first in pensions of 3*l.* per annum. Preference was to be given to members of the Court over members of the livery, but only one case of misfortune has happened to a member of the Court since the fund was instituted. A recipient of the fund must be a liveryman or the widow of a liveryman, and have reached the age of 60. Widows marrying again become disqualified. Recipients on the list may be struck off "should they in their after situation "in life be considered by the Court no longer eligible, or from any gross "misconduct." In one case, by special vote of the Court, a pension has been granted to the daughter of a liveryman who left no widow. The accounts and minutes of the fund are kept separately from those of the Company. A treasurer, a member of the court, is appointed, who keeps the accounts. The Court are, in fact, considered merely as delegates or administrators on behalf of the charitable fund trustees. Of these there are four in whose names the 1,875*l.* stock is invested. When more pensions are granted than the income of the fund will meet, the Court makes up the deficiency out of the funds of the Company. The pensions are now at the rate of 20*l.* per annum, and the distribution is made at the Candlemas and August courts.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

A.

RETURN A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. A master, two wardens, and 15 assistants at present constitute the governing body according to the charter.

2. The candidate for assistantship must have served steward, under warden, and upper warden. As to the time for election see the 5th ordinance of 1783. Election is by co-optation; it is usual to respect seniority of service in the previous offices, but there is no obligation, ordinance, or binding rule to that effect. The co-optative method of election applies alike to master, wardens, and assistants. The elections are by all the members present, by the usual form of resolution; two names are submitted for master, the senior in service is, however, invariably elected. The distinction drawn by the charter as to "senior assistants" is not now observed, if indeed it ever had reference to wardens other than those who had served before the charter was granted.

Again, the charter contemplates election of wardens who are already assistants, but the practice is (and has always been so far as is known) to elect the wardens from the liverymen who have served steward.

3. To hold courts, to receive their rents, and pay their debts, to distribute the Company's charities, to supervise and audit the master and beadle's accounts and those of the treasurer to the charitable fund, to adjudicate upon competitions for art prizes, to keep their property in good repair, and to rebuild it when necessary.

The master, in particular, being, in fact, the Company's treasurer, is much occupied with its business during his year of office.

An assistant has paid besides 31*l.* 10*s.* at coming on the court, 21*l.* 15*s.* for his freedom and livery, 5*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* for his stewardship, 26*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* as under warden, and 26*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* as upper warden.

Members of the court receive 3*l.* 3*s.* each on attending each of the five courts which are held in the year, and the same at special courts.

4. At the February and August courts the "Founders' Charitable Fund" is divided among the pensioners, chiefly liverymen's widows. At the February court the Company's own charities are divided, chiefly to freemen's widows. At the May court general business, at the election day the election of officers for the year ensuing, and at the October court the administering the oaths of office. All other business that arises on the last minutes or has arisen since the last court, is entered upon an agenda paper and disposed of. The time of meeting at the quarterly courts is in the master's discretion, it has of late years been 3 and 4 o'clock. Resolutions are moved, seconded, put by the master and carried or negatived by show of hands. There is no publication of resolutions, the minute books are carefully kept, they are accessible to the members of the court to whom they are read, and by whom they are confirmed, but not to others except by the master's direction, which has never been applied for.

5. See the 22nd ordinance of 3rd February 1783. No case of removal has occurred to the knowledge of the senior member of the court, whose experience extends over 30 years nor has he heard of such a case.

6. The Company possesses no such bye-laws.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. No qualification is required for membership. The grades of membership are freeman, liveryman, steward, under warden, upper warden, assistant, master.

Freedom is membership according to the constitution of this Company.

Women are eligible for the freedom, but none have been admitted to it in recent times.

2. The freedom may be obtained by patrimony, servitude, redemption, and by gift, called in this Company "redemption by presentation."

In patrimony admissions the candidate's father must have been free of the Company at the date of the candidate's birth.

	£	s.	d.
The fee is - - -	1	17	6
Besides the "King's duty" which is	1	0	0

In servitude admissions the apprentice must have served his term, satisfied his master, and complied with the 20th ordinance of 3rd February 1783.

The fees are the same as for patrimony admissions.

In redemption admissions nothing is required beyond the consent of the court.

The fees are 3l. 7s. 6d. besides the "King's duty," which is 3l.

In cases of freedom by redemption by presentation, i.e., gift, the Company pays the King's duty of 3l.

3. The terms of the charter seem permissory, "may make free of the mistery persons using the trade," is the expression. It is clear from the last of the ordinances of 29th July 1365 that even then there were persons engaged in the trade, but not members of the mistery. The order of the Common Council (9th May 1753) attempts to make the trade identical with the Company; but it is not known to have been ever enforced.

As to the freedom of the city there is no condition, precedent, or subsequent, but freemen of the Company are always advised to attend upon the clerk of freedoms at Guildhall, who admits them to the freedom of the city.

Probably there are no persons free of the Company who are not also free of the city, but this is not within the Company's means of knowledge.

It has been rather common in this Company to receive members of the trade, at present among the livery there appear 13, and among the freemen 8, more or less connected with the business of founding.

4. No case of disfranchisement is known to have occurred.

It would seem from the form of oath admininstered to the master and wardens, that they have power to "depart with" a brother, but if so, it is not known to have been exercised.

5. It is not known that there is any limit to the number of the livery, other than the having been admitted to the freedom, there is no qualification required for the livery. The court having consented to receive the member, he is introduced, generally by some member of the Company, and the oath is administered in the presence of the court.

The fees on admission to the livery are 15l. 7s. 6d.

A liveryman is removable under the 22nd ordinance of 3d February 1783, and probably was so before. See the terms of the master and wardens oath, but no such case is known to have arisen.

PART II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen; (2) the present number of the livery; (3) the present number of other members; (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively; and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. The present number of freemen, not liverymen, is 22.

2. The present number of those who are both freemen, and liverymen is 115.

3. There are no other members.

PART II.—D.

Return D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

	Apprentice bound.
1. In the year 1873 - - -	1
„ 1880 - - -	1

2. In neither of the above cases was the binding to a member following the trade of a founder.

In neither of the above cases was the fee or premium of the apprentice paid by the Company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and Privileges:—

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1.—A freeman has the right of taking apprentices. He would be admitted as of course to the livery on payment of the fine, and proceed in his turn to the successive offices. His widow would on application receive a donation or pension out of the Company's funds.

A liveryman has the like privileges, with that of attending the annual livery dinner. His widow is eligible for a donation or pension from the Founders' Charitable Fund.

The master and assistants attend the five quarterly Courts and dinners and receive 3*l.* 3*s.* each at each quarterly Court, and the wardens do and receive the same during their year of office.

No other payments to members of the court.

In 1871 a grant was made of 10*l.* out of the funds of the Company to a former member of the court.

In 1873, 1874, 1875, and 1876 a grant was made of 10*l.* out of the funds of the Company to a member of the livery.

In 1877, 5*l.* was paid out of the funds of the Company towards a liveryman's funeral expenses, and 10*l.* in 1878, and 5*l.* in 1880 on similar occasions.

3. In practice, a freeman's widow's application is always favourably considered. Unless personally known to the Court, her case is inquired into by one of its members, and no instance is remembered of any circumstances calling for a refusal.

Three pensions were paid to the widows or relatives of deceased freemen in 1880, of the respective amounts of 5*l.*, 5*l.*, and 10*l.*

Of these grantees one is the daughter of a deceased metal worker, another the widow of a deceased founder, the third the widow of a freeman in no way conected with the founding or metal trade.

4.—No person who was a member of the Court in 1849 survives.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—The officers of the Company are a clerk and beadle.

The clerk's salary is 100*l.* per annum, with the use of the Court room and two other rooms in the hall, where he practises as a solicitor. He receives 5*s.* when a fine is payable to the Company other than the assistant's fine, when he receives 1*l.*

His duties are to attend the quarterly, monthly, and extra Courts, art prizes, building, and other committees; to keep the minutes, accounts, and registers; to advise the Court on legal technical points; to collect the Company's rents; to prepare the master's accounts for annual audit; to correct the annual parliamentary electoral list; to keep revised and reprinted the private list of members; to conduct the correspondence and business of the Company under the master's directions.

The beadle's salary is 146*l.* He receives for stamping weights a penny a dozen, on collection of quarterage 10 per cent., and 2*s.* 6*d.* when a fine is payable to the Company, other than the assistant's fine, when he receives 10*s.*

His duties, in addition to the stamping, are summoning and attending on the Court, and obedience to their general orders.

Both clerk and beadle are freemen and liverymen of the Company.

B.—None.

B. 3. The Company's plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on their premises are not very valuable. They are, however, insured for 1,000*l.*, because they include "Wesley's Cup" which though of glass is probably 400 years old, and may be worth 500*l.* Only 2 rooms of the hall and the weight office are occupied by the Company.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

No person has during the last 10 years applied for the freedom without the livery.

There have been four freedoms by patrimony during the last 10 years, the rest by redemption.

All the other information demanded by Part IV., Return E., appears in Part IV., Return H. (detailed statement of income).

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1.)—The income or decrease of the Company's income from year to year during the last 10 years appears in Part IV., Return H. (detailed statement of income).

There is no reason to expect either increase or decrease during the next 10 years, except where a small increase is provided for by the terms of the shop and office leases already stated.

F. (2.)—There is no reason to expect any permanent increase in value in the Founders' Hall Court property until the existing leases expire. There is no probability of a decrease.

The shop and offices at the present hall have been fairly but recently let. The leases are terminable at the lessees option.

The Company do not look for any other than a small increase, the particulars of which appear from the terms of the shop and office leases already stated.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

1. By the court.

2. As to the rents, fines, and gifts, the receipt is by the clerk, whose duty it is to cross cheques and pay in cash to the Company's bankers, reporting such payments to the master.

As to the weights and quarterage the receipts are by the beadle, whose duties as to paying in and reporting are similar to those of the clerk.

3. The audit is by auditors appointed in pursuance of the 13th Ordinance of 3rd February 1783. They sign the outgoing master's account, which is then posted into the audit book and again signed by the auditors at the next court. This audit book and the pass book lie on the table at every court.

4. The accounts are not published. They are accessible to every member of the court. If any other member of the Company applied to inspect, the clerk would ask the master's permission, but no such application has ever been made.

PART IV.—H.

A DETAILED STATEMENT of the ASSETS and LIABILITIES of the COMPANY at the end of each of the last 10 years.

At the end of each of the last 10 years the assets of the Company consisted of the freehold property in Founders' Hall Court, let to Messrs. Brown, Shipley, & Co., and the Postmaster-General, and their present hall in St. Swithin's Lane, their bankers' balance, and their furniture, which is not very valuable.

It is however insured for 1,000*l.*, because, as before mentioned, it includes Wesley's cup.

The fines are not assets because they are not compulsory payments.

Part IV.—K.

Return K.—Position in relation to Universities.

Has the Company any relations with the universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company has no relations with the universities or the colleges in them, and no scholarshps or exhibitions in its gift.

Part IV.—L.

Return L.—Church Patronage.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company.
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the Company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the Company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what churches or chapels and where situated?

1 and 2. There are not and never have been any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company.
3. The Company have never built or contributed to the building of any churches or chapels.

Part IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

In 1876 (the then debts of the Company being nearly cleared off) the court considered a scheme for promoting technical education in the trade with which the Company is connected. This was held in abeyance, however, because the rebuilding the hall became almost immediately afterwards an urgent question.

In 1880, after the hall was rebuilt, and the shops and offices which form part of it let, the scheme was revived. The court offered a prize of 10*l.*, with 10*l.* 10*s.* added by Mr. Franks, a member of the court, for the best, and one of 5*l.* for the second best specimen in brass or bronze of a figure not exceeding 12 inches in height.

The first prize was gained by Mr. Beattie, a designer in the employ of Messrs. Elkington.

The court also offered a first prize of 5*l.* and a second of 3*l.* for ornamental bells; the second prize was awarded to Mr. Wm. Naden, in the employ of Messrs. John Warner and Sons.

The court also offered similar prizes for repoussé brass work of lock and hinge furniture. Only one specimen was sent in and that not of sufficient merit to warrant an award.

The court also offered similar prizes for a hanging lamp in brass work, but no competition ensued.

The court also offered their freedom and livery, and Mr. Warner, a member of the court, added a prize of 10*l.* 10*s.*, and Mr. Poole, a member of the livery, a second prize of 5*l.* 5*s.* for essays on the history and art of founding in brass, copper, and bronze. The freedom and livery and Mr. Warner's prize were awarded to Mr. Stannus, who has served his time to Messrs. Hoole, and is employed as a designer by founding firms. His essay is a very careful and able work and will be published. Mr. Poole's prize was awarded to Mr. Tuck, who is also employed in the founding business, and his essay also is of merit, though not so technical and practical as that of Mr. Stannus.

The aggregate in prizes offered was 87*l.* When Mr. Stannus' essay is ready for publication, a proposal will be made by a member of the court that the whole or a part of the expense should be paid out of the funds of the company.

The following is a copy of the regulations under which the competition for art prizes took place.

The Worshipful Company of Founders offer the following prizes for competition amongst persons carrying on business as founders, or employed or engaged by such persons.

1. A prize of 10*l.* for the best, and one of 5*l.* for the second best specimen in brass or bronze of an original nude Figure, not to exceed twelve inches in height including the base. The figure to be the property of the Company, the model to remain the property of the designer. With 10*l.* 10*s.* added by Past Master James Franks, Esq.

2. A prize of 5*l.* for the best, and one of 3*l.* for the second best ornamental bell, not to exceed 9 inches diameter at the mouth. The first prize bell to be the property of the Company; the model or pattern to remain the property of the designer.

3. A prize of 5*l.* for the best, and one of 3*l.* for the second best specimen of repoussé brass work of lock and hinge furniture for doors of mediæval design; the design and the work to be by the same person. The first prize to be the property of the Company.

4. A prize of 5*l.* for the best, and one of 3*l.* for the second best specimen in brass work for a hanging lamp; the design and workmanship by the same person. The first prize to be the property of the Company.

5. The freedom and livery of the Company of Founders to the author of the best essay on the history and art of founding, in brass, copper and bronze. To the winner of this prize, an additional sum of 10*l.* 10*s.* the gift of Past Master Robert Warner, Esq.

6. Each competitor must satisfy the judges, by certificate or otherwise, that he is engaged in the business of founding, or employed or engaged by some person or firm so employed.

7. Each object must be delivered free at Founders' Hall, St. Swithin's Lane, during the week ending the 25th October, 1880.

8. Each object must be marked with a private mark or motto and numbered, and each object must be accompanied by a sealed envelope, marked with the same mark or motto as that on the object, and containing the name and address of the competitor, and a certificate or declaration that the object has not been exhibited before.

9. The envelopes will not be opened until the judges have made their report.

10. Beauty, originality of design, and excellence of workmanship, and, where necessary, fitness for the purpose, will be considered and influence the judges in their awards.

11. All the prizes will be in the absolute discretion of the court, it being a condition that no prizes will be awarded if, and when in the opinion of the judges, an adequate standard or degree of merit has not been attained.

12. The judges will be Past Masters, Robert Warner, Esq., W. C. Fowler, Esq., Deputy, George Edward Forrest, Esq., and George Aitchison, Esq., and Warden Compton Warner, Esq.

13. Notice of the delivery of the prizes will be sent to each competitor by post to the address given by him.

M. H. WALKER,
June, 1880. Master.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appropria- "tion or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The clerk is without views of his own on the subject of this return. So far as his observation extends the wish of the court appears now to be after making due provision for the 8,500*l.* due to Mr. Parnell, and the London Life Office, to repeat the experiment of the art prizes, and to extend it, holding out a hand to skilled workmen in the trade with which the Company is connected.

This is a subject which would have been taken up long since but for the fact that from 1846 to 1877 the court were paying off debt and from 1877 to 1880 rebuilding and reletting their hall and offices.

If Mr. Parnell's 500*l.* is repaid, as is hoped, during the present year, there will remain only the 8,000*l.* due to the London Life Office. For this a sinking fund will probably be formed and enough will still remain of revenue to warrant a repetition and extension of the efforts to encourage and assist skill in the trade with which the Company is connected.*

* The Company sent, along with these returns, a book of their "Annals" compiled by Mr. William Meade Williams, the master for 1852–3 and 1853–4.

APPENDIX A.

This Company gave considerable information to the Commission appointed in 1834.

FRAME-WORK KNITTERS' COMPANY.

The Company's returns were accompanied with the following document, signed by the clerk :—

" In the annexed returns the Company have furnished full particulars of their trust property.

" With respect to such of their property as is not subject to any trust, the Company are advised that they might properly as well as legally decline to furnish any information. They are not, however, disposed to insist upon their strict right.

" They think it, indeed, their duty to claim before the Commissioners the right which they would be entitled to assert even in legal proceedings before courts having power to enforce discovery, of protecting from disclosure their titles to the private property of which they are in possession, but with this exception they have given such information as they hope will be found sufficient for the purposes of Her Majesty's Commission.

" But in giving such information the Company desire in the most formal manner to state that their readiness so to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown, or any other jurisdiction, to inquire into their private property, or to deal with it in disregard of their rights.

" They desire also to record their claim, that if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the Company, every such question must be determined only by the courts of law."

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The date of the foundation of the Company, so far as it can be discovered from the public records, was, by letters patent dated the 13th June 1657, granted by the Protector Oliver Cromwell. The Company has no document in its possession which states this.

B.—The charter under which the Company is now constituted is dated the 19th August 1663, and is the only charter or instrument of that nature which is now or has for the past 50 years been in the possession of the Company.

The abstract of the charter is as follows :—

" 1. The recital of the petition.

" 2. The grant and creation of the Frame-work Knitters " to be for ever a fellowship and body corporate and poli- " tique, by the name of the master, master wardens, " assistants, and Society of the Art or Mystery of Frame- " work Knitters of the Cities of London and Westminster, " and Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales.

" 3. That they have perpetual succession by that name.

" 4. That they are enabled to purchase any manors, " lands, or tenements not exceeding 100*l.* per annum,

" 5. That they may demise, grant, lett, sett, or assign " the said manors, lands, &c., so by them bought and " purchased, at their pleasure.

" 6. That they may plead and be impleaded in any of " His Majesty's courts or other place whatsoever.

" 7. The constitution of the Society is one master, two " wardens, and 15 or more assistants.

" 8. That for ever they have a common seal, which at " pleasure they may at any time alter, deface, and new " make.

" 9. John Croson constituted the first master, and to " continue to Midsummer 1664, and to take an oath " before a Master in Chancery for the due execution of his " office.

" 10. That from and after Midsummer 1664 there be " chosen by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the " greater number of them, out of the two wardens, a new " master, who shall continue in his office till Midsummer " following, if he so long live or be not removed for just " cause, and to take his oath before the two wardens for " the time being.

"11. Jonathan Grammar and George Balderstone constituted the first wardens, and continued in their office till Midsummer 1664, and to take their oaths before a Master in Chancery, but the succeeding wardens to take their oaths before the master of the Society.

"12. John Lee, Thomas Phillips, Joseph Tomlinson, Richard Read, Wm. Rigson, William Grammar, Gabriel Brewer, Samuel Knight, Francis East, John Pargiter, junior, William Pargiter, Samuel Toman, Owen Lavender, John Bennett, junior, Francis Armstead, Thomas Stevenson, George Massie, Osmond Smith, Wm. Pickerne, and Thomas Ladd constituted the first assistants, who are to continue for their natural lives, unless for just cause, and they to take their oaths before the master and wardens, or any two of them impowered to administer the same.

"13. That after John Croson had served the office of master a new master shall be chosen, who shall be one that hath served the office of warden, and he that shall be so chosen master shall serve that office during one whole year.

"14. That after the first wardens have served that office their successors shall be annually chosen on Midsummer Day, unless it happen on Sunday, and when it so happens, on the day following, who are to continue one whole year in their office, if they so long live or be not for just cause removed; and that the new master and wardens take their oaths before the master and wardens their predecessors.

"15. That the master and wardens that have served their respective offices do, from and after the leaving the same, instantly be and remain assistants of the said Society, taking their oaths, if not sworn before.

"16. That if the master or wardens die, or be for just cause removed, before they have served their respective offices, that then, in 15 days after, a fit person be chosen to supply the room of him that shall die or be so removed, and he or they so chosen to be and continue the residue that shall be to come of the time that he or they so dying should have, and before his or their election to take the oaths, &c.

"17. That if any of the assistants die or be removed, others be chosen in their stead to continue during their lives unless just cause, and he or they so chosen to take his or their corporal oath truly to execute the office.

"18. That if any person elected master, warden, or assistant refuse to serve the said office, the master, wardens, and assistants then being, or the greater number, to impose a fine on the party refusing so it exceed not 10*l.*, and the same fine to take by distress on the goods and chattels of the party refusing.

"19. That the Society from time to time have a clerk, John Hannis, gent., to be the first and to continue during his life, and to officiate the place by himself or deputy. The said John Hannis, and after his death every other person chosen clerk, to take an oath before the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number, duly and faithfully, according to the best of his skill, to execute the said place.

"20. That the master, wardens, and assistants, and Society, and their successors, in their common hall, as oft as they see meet, to assemble and make laws and convenient oaths as to them seem reasonable for the good rule and government of them and their members and all other persons exercising the art of frame-work knitting in any place in England or Wales, and for reformation of such abuse and deceipts by bad work or otherwise, and to impose fines and levy the same by distress on the goods and chattels of the offender so as the same laws and fines be not repugnant or contrary to the laws or statutes of England or prejudicial to the customs of London.

"21. That the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number, at their pleasure, to elect one or more beadle or beadles who shall take an oath for the faithful execution of that office, Wm. Patrick, the first beadle, to continue during pleasure, and he and his successors to receive the fines and to distrain on offenders for the same.

"22. That all mayors, bailiffs, constables, &c. be aiding to the master, wardens, and assistants, or any two of them, or any of their sworn deputies, letters patents and the laws by them the said master, wardens, and assistants made.

"23. Two or more empowered to go on the search, and if they find bad work to cut the same in pieces, and the persons in whose hands the same are found to be fined. The master, wardens, and assistants to administer an oath to the said deputies, and to remove them at pleasure and choose others in their stead.

"24. That no person presume to transport frames or any other thing belonging to the trade to any part beyond seas. If any endeavoured to be transported, the master, wardens, and assistants, or any two of them, or any of their sworn deputies, may seize the same, and after seizure to leave the same in the hands of a lawful officer till a justice of peace or lawful magistrate shall adjudge and convict the same to be forfeited, and the same conviction and judgment shall be made within 40 days after seizure if the same be within 20 miles of London, and if further distant, then within 6 months after seizure, and after conviction to be sold, the one half of the profits to be to the use of the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other half to the use of the Society, all charges first deducted.

"25. That none shall use the trade unless he or they have served 7 years.

"26. The master, wardens, and assistants, and their sworn deputies, with a constable, to enter into any place, privileged or not, in England or Wales, where there is any suspicion of frames or bad manufacture of what persons whatsoever, and if any found to break and deface and to punish the offenders by fine or otherwise.

"27. That no person whatsoever use the art of a frame-work knitter but such as serve 7 years' apprenticeship at least.

"28. That all persons using the art and dwelling within 20 miles of London should within 3 months, and such as live further distance within 6 months, after the date of the letters patents enter themselves and be admitted before the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number, that they may be sworn members of the Society, and those that neglected to pay 5*l.* fine for every week's neglect, and to be dealt with as contemney of the King's Royal Command, and that they who are admitted shall take the oath.

"29. That all persons using or to use the art aforesaid who are free of any other company shall bind such apprentices as he or they shall take unto some member or freeman of this Society, to the intent the apprentices so bound at the end of their terms may become free of the same.

"30. That the lord mayor and aldermen allow the letters patents to be enrolled in the common chamber amongst the records there, to the intent that the members that are free of the city of London may be subject to the government of the city, and enjoy the benefit thereof.

"31. That the master, wardens, and assistants may admit such who are not freemen of London, and administer the oath to them upon their admittance as to others, and they, with those who are freemen of London, to be reputed and known by the name of the master, wardens, assistants, and Society of Frame-Work Knitters of the City of London.

"32. That the said master, wardens, and assistants may cause the statute of the 5th Elizabeth and all other statutes concerning trade mysteries and manual occupations to be put in execution upon offenders.

"33. That the master, wardens, and assistants, or any two of them so as the two be the master and one of the wardens for the time being, may, by writing under their common seal, substitute deputies, who shall have full power and authority where they live for such compass of place as shall be limited in the said deputation to rule and govern all persons exercising the art in as ample manner as the master, wardens, and assistants can or may do in the City of London and Westminster so as they render an account and make true and just payment of moneys received, and other their doings as oft as required thereto, such deputation to have continuance during pleasure only.

"34. That all justices of the peace, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, &c. give their aid and assistance to the master, wardens, and assistants, and their deputies, in the due execution of His Majesty's grant, and the inroiment of the letters patents their discharge.

"35. That the letters patents shall be good in law, and so shall be construed in all courts of record and elsewhere for the most benefit and advantage of the said master, wardens, assistants, and Society, and their successors.

"36. That the master, wardens, and assistants, before they take upon them the execution of their respective offices, do take the oath of allegiance and supremacy before such persons as by Statute are appointed to administer."

C.—There are no trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the Company in the Company's possession or mentioned in its records.

D.—An order of the Court of Aldermen dated the 14th July 1657, the effect of which is to enrol the letters patent of incorporation granted by the Protector Cromwell, dated 13th June 1657.

Another order of the same court dated the 24th September 1663, the effect of which is to enrol the charter granted by King Charles the Second, dated 19th August 1663.

Another order of the same court dated the 9th June 1713 granting a livery to the Company.

An order of the Court of Queen's Bench dated 13th February, Hilary Term 1809, and made in a suit in which the company was plaintiff, and one Wm. Payne defendant, the object of the suit being to enforce the legal powers of the charter and byelaws against Payne for teaching the art to one Thos. Main as an apprentice, in violation of the 16th rule of the Company's byelaws, and the object of the defendant's application being for a rule to discharge the verdict for the plaintiff given on the trial of the cause in the term preceding, and that such verdict should be set aside, and instead thereof a nonsuit entered, the effect of the judgment being to discharge the rule applied for, and to leave the verdict for the Company, but entry of final judgment was stayed.

E.—The only other documents which "found, regulate, or affect the Company" are the Company's byelaws, approved by the Lord Chancellor and Lords Chief Justices of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, dated 28th May 1745.

F.—The Company of Frame-work Knitters, the 65th in order of precedence among the municipal guilds or companies of the city of London, owes its origin to the invention of the stocking loom.

Stowe, in his Chronicle (edition 1615, page 869), says: "In the year 1599 was devised and perfected the art of "knitting or weaving silk stockings, waistcoats, and "divers other things by engines or steel looms, by William "Lee, Master of Arts of St. John's College, Cambridge, "and after that he went into France, where he obtained a "patent of the King." The history of the invention has been exhaustively dealt with by Mr. William Felkin, in his History of the Machine Wrought Hosiery and Lace Manufacture, Longmans', 1867.

The first incorporation of the Company of Frame-work Knitters, or Stocking Weavers, as they have been sometimes called, was made by the Protector, Oliver Cromwell, in the year 1657, by letters patent under the great seal, dated the 13th June 1657, enrolled by order of the Court of Aldermen on the 14th July following, the order for which enrolment recites the grant of this charter.

The petition for the charter is said to designate the application as "The humble representation of the pro-"moters and inventors of the art and mystery or trade of "frame-work knitting or making of silk stockings or other "work in a frame or engine. Petitioners to your High-"ness that they may be united and incorporated by "charter under the great seal of England, whereby their "just right to the invention may be preserved from "foreigners, the trade advanced, abuses therein suppressed, "the benefit of the commonwealth by importation and "exportation and otherwise increased, and hundreds of "poor families comfortably relieved by their several "employments about the same, who will otherwise be "exposed to ruin, having no other calling to live of."

The petitioners allege: "That the trade of frame-work "knitting was never known or practised here in England "or in any other place in the world before it was (about "50 years past) invented and found out by one William "Lee, of Calverton, in the county of Nottingham, gen-"tleman, who, by himself and such of his kindred and "countrymen as he took unto him for servants, practised "the same many years somewhat imperfectly in com-"parison of the exactness it is sithense brought into by "the endeavours of some of your petitioners."

Under Cromwell's charter the Company acted until the restoration of King Charles II.

On the restoration of King Charles II. the Company applied to His Majesty for and obtained a new charter.

This charter or letters patent, under which the Company is now constituted, is dated the 19th August 1663, and by it they are created a fellowship and body corporate and politic, by the name of the master, wardens, and assistants and Society of the Art or Mystery of Frame-work Knitters of the Cities of London and Westminster, and Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, with perpetual succession and a common seal.

G.—The Company has no record of any licence in mortmain other than contained in the charter, paragraph 4 of the abstract, "and the statute for not putting "lands or tenements in mortmain, or anything therein "contained, or any other act or statute, to the contrary "notwithstanding."

H.—By the terms of the charter granted by Charles II., the right of exercising superintendence over the art of frame-work knitting is given. Its nature is to try and prove whether all frame-work knitted goods are workmanlike wrought, and if found inartificially made or of deceitful stuff, to cut the same in pieces, and to fine the parties making them according to the byelaws of the Company.

The powers of the Company were by the charter limited to the cities of London and Westminster and kingdom of England and Wales; no such control is now exercised. The circumstances under which such control fell into desuetude are that the effect of the byelaws approved in 1745 were by the House of Commons, in 1753, thought to be injurious and vexatious to manufacturers, and discouraging industry and trade; and the action against Payne before mentioned was that the Company's charter and byelaws only bound the members of the Company, and that non-members of the Company might practise the art for their own profit without supervision of the Company's officers. This action in its result affirmed the principle of free trade, and destroyed the influence of the Company over the manufactures by the frame-work knitting machines.

PART I.—Return I.—Charities, 1870.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

Founder's Name.	Charity.
Thomas Bourne's Charity -	12 freehold almshouses and ground on the east side of Kingsland Road, in the parish of St. Leonard, Shoreditch, and 2,210*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.* new 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent. annuities, the dividends whereon are applied in payment of pensions to the almspeople.
Thomas Cooke's Charity - -	2,100*l.* consols; the dividends are applied to increase the pensions to the almspeople.
Mrs. Anne Staunton's Benefaction -	341*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* consols; dividends distributed to the almspeople.
Thomas Taylor's Gift - -	113*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.* consols; dividends distributed to the almspeople.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

A.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body of the Company is the master wardens and court of assistants. Such constitution is according to the charter.

2. The qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company are that the member shall be an admitted freeman of the Company elected to the livery, and shall have paid his fines and fees and made the declarations required by the byelaws. The method of election to the governing body is the nomination of the proposed liveryman by a member of the court seconded by another member. There is no record of any such election being otherwise than unanimous, nor any provision for election in case of absence of unanimity. The qualifications of voters at elections to the governing body are that they shall themselves be members of that body.

3. The functions of the governing body are now to manage the receipt and expenditure of the Company's funds, and to decide upon all questions in respect of such management. The members of such body now pay a fine of 52*l.* 10*s.* on admission to such body. They are not paid any salaries in respect of their services, but each of those members, not exceeding 16, who are in attendance at the quarterly meetings of the body before the master takes his seat and the business commences receives 10*s.* for his attendance.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company is the election of its officers and the management and expenditure of its funds. The returns to Parliament, if any be required, and the election of recipients to the charities. The method adopted is the ordinary one of proposal, of resolution, discussion of fitness, and voting by show of hands. The times are the quarterly courts of the governing body, or if occasion requires at other courts specially summoned for the purpose. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published, there being no interest of the members outside the governing body requiring publication. There has not been any occasion to consider the necessity for the decisions of the governing body being accessible to all or any of the members of the Company.

5. The members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal for misbehaviour in respect of their duties as such members, and such suspension or removal is by the resolution of such body. Only one case of suspension, and none of removal, during the past 50 years is recorded in the minutes of the Company,

6. The Company's byelaws are sanctioned in accordance with the statute 19 H. 7. chap. 7., viz., by the Lord Chancellor and the Lords Chief Justices of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas. The effect of the byelaws was the further defining of the mode of election of officers; the number and times of the courts for conducting the Company's business; the control of the trade by search and inspection of manufactured goods, machines, apprentices, workmen, widows of freemen, and their admission to the Company.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

FRAME-WORK KNITTERS' COMPANY—continued.

1. The qualifications for membership of the Company are:—
   (a.) That the applicant shall have served his apprenticeship to a freeman of the Company;
   (b.) That he shall be a true and lawful son of a freeman, born after the father's freedom;
   (c.) That he shall be admitted by the permission of the master of the governing body or the court. Women are admitted to the membership.

2. The mode in which the admission of an apprentice is obtained is upon evidence of binding and service, and is called admission by servitude; the admission of a son of a freeman by evidence of the father's freedom and the lawful birth of the son, and is called by patrimony; the admission of a person neither apprentice nor son of a freeman is by permission of the master or court, and is called by redemption. The fees in each case payable to the Company are the same, viz., 2*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.* The stamp duty payable to the Government on such admission varies; for instance, on admission of apprentice or son of a freeman, 1*l.*, freeman by redemption, 3*l.*

3. No persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise than by the charter or byelaws to become free of the Company. There is no process to compel any person to procure admission, or any process by which any person not an apprentice to a freeman, or son of a freeman entitled as before mentioned to his freedom, is enabled to enforce admission, but any fit person may procure admission by redemption in the manner before mentioned. No process has been adopted to enforce or procure admission since the action against Payne, mentioned in Part I., Return D. No person exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company. The Company has no means of knowing how many members of the Company following the trade of frame-work knitters are now living.

4. The Company are not aware of any powers to disfranchise admitted freemen.

5. For an answer to this inquiry reference is made to the Corporation of the City of London. The qualifications for the election to the livery is that the person is a freeman of the company and of the City of London, and that he has been elected by the governing body to the livery as a fit person. The elections are by the court. The fees are variable, not exceeding 21*l.* nor less than 18*l.* Neither the charter nor the byelaws give power to remove, and the Company cannot say if liverymen are removable from the livery, but liverymen have at their own request been discharged from the livery.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

1. The present number of freemen living is unknown.
2. The present number of livery is 46.
3. There are no members of the Company who come under the designate of other members.
4. The number of admissions to the freedom during the year

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last 10 years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3.) In what cases, and to what extent, have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

Only one apprentice has been bound under the auspices of the Company during the last 10 years; such apprentice was not bound to a member following the trade the name of which is borne by the Company. The Company did not pay the fee or premium on such appointment.

The freedom of the City of London is a condition subsequent of membership, but a freeman of the City of London may, by permission of the Court of Aldermen, be afterwards recorded as a freeman of the Company. There are not any members of the Company who are not free of the City of London to the knowledge of the Company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges:

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3), master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) What is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body ?

5. Does the Company carry on any, and what, trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected ? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with ?

1. The advantages now incident to the position of a member of the Company, are, as a freeman, now very small. The right of trading in the City being thrown open, tolls in the City removed, voting for common council and aldermen given to householders, and other incidental rights being given to non-freemen, there remains only the social privileges as a member of the Company, the participation if in distress in the Company's charities, and if fit and worthy the election to the livery and governing body. The liveryman has in addition to the privileges of a freeman a right of voting for members of Parliament for the City of London, and for election of the mayor, sheriffs, and corporation officers elected according to custom in common hall. The master holds an office of honour and dignity highly esteemed by the holder. Its possession is looked forward to by the wardens and members of the governing body with hope, and to obtain it the seeker does not fail to use his best efforts for the welfare of the fraternity and to win the esteem and regard of his fellow members. The wardens have the immediate care of the Company's income and its expenditure under the direction and approbation of the governing body. Their position is also of honour and dignity, and second only to the master. The master and wardens on state or other important occasions represent the Company ; they are therefore required to be of probity, commercial or social position, educated, and indeed fit above the other members of the governing body, livery, or freemen for those offices. The other members of the governing body, in addition to the privileges of freemen and liverymen, have the duties of a council upon the Company's affairs, controlling by their votes the management of the Company's moneys, election of freemen to the livery and liverymen to be members of the governing body, electing the master and wardens, and generally the direction of the Company. The position as a member of this body is also of honour and dignity, and is so esteemed by its possessors, and most liverymen desire to be elected to it. The pecuniary advantages of the master, wardens, and governing body are 10*s.* each to the first 16 of their number who attend the quarterly courts of the Company.

2. The sum paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members of the governing body for the fees above mentioned are 10*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*; pensions none; other payments none. It is assumed that these questions relate to the Company's corporate income, and not to its charities, and the answer is given accordingly.

3. This question is answered in the preceding,

4. The standing of a member of the Company is not a consideration in electing him to the governing body; to give an average would mislead. A member remains on the governing body during life. The oldest member of the body has been so for 53 years; the most recent, nine months.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture ; nor has it done so for the past 100 years.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—The clerk of the Company. His duties are to attend the master, wardens, and court at their meetings, to record the minutes of their meetings and accounts, to prepare list of voters, attend the revising barrister at his court thereon ; to be the custodian of the Company's records, the remembrancer and adviser of the court, to assist the treasurer of the charitable funds in the management of the almshouses and the inmates, superintend the repairs of the fabric, payment of the pensioners and the rates, &c., prepare accounts for the Charity Commissioners, conduct all correspondence and act generally as a solicitor, secretary, and clerk. The clerk receives no salary, and his emoluments are his bill of charges, which varies according to the business transacted, and some small fees paid on the admission of freemen, liverymen, and members of the governing body for services rendered to them and the Company, and not provided or charged for in his bill of costs. The clerk is a freeman and liveryman of the Company.

B.—The Company has no servants other than a beadle, whose duty is to attend the quarterly courts and common halls. His salary is 5*l.* a year.

C.—The clerk and beadle are elected by the court or governing body.

PART IV.—Returns A 1 to A 14.

The Company has no landed property.

Part IV.—B.

Return B. 1.—List of moneys belonging to the Frame-work Knitters' Company invested in Government or other Stock, Shares, Funds, or Securities.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., gift with name of donor, bequest with name of testator, sale of lands, and which, &c.	In what Name standing, e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	Net Annual Receipt.
£ s. d. 4,428 10 3	3,628*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* consols, and 800*l.* London and South-Western Railway Company 5% Preference.	The source from whence the 3,628*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* arose was the sale of the Company's freehold land and buildings (formerly the Company's hall), situate in Red Cross Street, in the city of London, to the corporation of the city, in or about the year 1821; the said freehold land having been purchased, and the buildings erected thereon by the Company, out of its savings of income and moneys contributed by the members of the governing body for the purpose in the years 1678 and 1720. The source from whence the 800*l.* arose was the internal source of income of the Company.	The said sum of 3,628*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* consols is standing in the name of the Paymaster General of the Chancery Division of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice to the credit of the Company; and the said 800*l.* London and South-western Railway Company's stock stands in the name of the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Company.	The net annual receipts in respect of such stocks are 145*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B. 2.—The balance of moneys in hand unappropriated in their accounts on the 24th June, the financial close in each year of the Company's accounts, are, for the year

B. 3.—The plate belonging to the Company was sold in the year 1861, and the amount realised (79*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.*) was given as a donation towards the repair of the almshouses, part of the charities of which the Company is trustee. The Company do not possess any pictures or furniture except a master's chair, the gift of a past master in the year 1681; it is valuable only to the Company, from its association with past events.

Part IV.—C.

Return C.—(1.) A list of any properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

Return C.—(2.) A list of any properties of which the Company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

C.—1. The Company is not trustee of any property other than the charitable funds before mentioned and detailed.

C.—2. This question is answered by the preceding.

Part IV.—D.

Return D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

There are no properties of any other description.

Part IV.— E.

Return E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F.—(1.) This return is answered in the preceding.

F.—(2.) The Company have formed no expectation on this subject.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

1. The Company have, as before stated, no estates to manage.
2. The receipt of its income and payments thereout is by the senior warden and, as before stated, under the control of the court.
3. The Company's accounts, i.e., the senior warden's accounts, are audited by members of the governing body annually appointed.
4. The Company's accounts are not published; they are accessible to all the members of the governing body.

PART IV.—RETURN H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The income and expenditure of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years is as follows:—

Part IV.—REFORM.

The members of this Company, who are the only persons interested in or entitled to seek measures for improving or altering the constitution of the Company, or appropriating or administering its property and revenues, have not sought either one or the other. The officers of the Company, having regard to the progressive commercial prosperity of the trade which has arisen out of the invention fostered by this Company of Frame-work Knitting, and the continuous improvements made in the machinery used therein, deem it at the present time unnecessary to make any suggestions. The officers of the Company respectfully protest against the suggestion that persons who are not members of the Company are, or can, in anyway, be interested in its private affairs or entitled to the knowledge the Commissioners seek.

APPENDIX A.

The Company did not give information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
17th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the circular addressed by the Commissioners to the Frame-work Knitters' Company, dated the 15th of February, I am instructed to request the Court to favour the Commissioners with answers to the following questions :—

1. In the returns of the Company's income for 10 years with which the Court have favoured the Commissioners, is the trust income of the Company to any, and what, extent included?

2. What was the trust income of the Company for 1879, and how much of such trust income arose from (1) rents and rentcharges, (2) dividends, (3) charges on the general income of the Company? The Commissioners do not mean to imply that the return on this subject is defective, but they prefer to take the figures from the Company itself.

3. What is the rateable value of the Company's almshouses?

The Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court and to yourself for replies to the above three questions.

I am, &c.,
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

James Funston, Esq.,
Clerk to the Frame-work Knitters' Company.

Frame-work Knitters' Company.

93, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.,
18th July 1882.

Sir,

I acknowledge your letter of the 17th instant, and, as the Court will not reassemble until the 10th October next, beg to state, in answer to the 1st question, that the charitable trust income of the Company is not included.

To the 2nd, the income for 1879 was the dividends only on the stocks mentioned in Return I., Part I.

To the 3rd, the almshouses are exempt.

I am, &c.,
Jas. Funston,
Clerk.

FRUITERERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURNS A. TO H., BOTH INCLUSIVE.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

The date of the foundation of the Company or Society of the Fruiterers is uncertain, but they were incorporated by charter, granted by King James I. in the third year of his reign "for the better order, government, and rule of them," by the name of "Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of "the Mystery of Fruiterers of London," with perpetual succession and power "to purchase, have, receive, and enjoy "manors, messuages, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, "jurisdictions, franchises, and other hereditaments" "to "them and their successors in fee and perpetuity," or for years or otherwise; "and also all manner of goods, chattels, and things whatsoever," with power to grant, let, alien, assign, &c., and to sue and be sued, and to have a common seal. And that there should be a master and two wardens, and five or more of the said Company, not exceeding 20, to be called the assistants of the said Company, with power to make byelaws for the good rule and government of the said Corporation.

Byelaws were afterwards made, and they were allowed by the Lord Keeper and Chief Justices in 1759.

These byelaws relate chiefly to the constitution of the court of the Company. There are also regulations (long since obsolete) affecting the trade, and some rules as to apprentices.

The originals of the charter and of the byelaws are not in the Company's possession.

The Company has never exercised its power to acquire real property or any chattels real.

The power is limited to property not exceeding the yearly value of 50*l.*

The Company, like other similar guilds, had for its object the regulation and protection of the trade to which it owes its name.

The charter included the right of supervision of those exercising the trade in the City of London and within three miles thereof.

The Company appears in old times to have defended its members against the exactions of the lord mayor's meter; indeed a grave dispute arose in consequence; but this was healed, and the Company have ever since presented every year to the lord mayor a friendly tribute of fruit in lieu of the old metage dues.

The Company has not for very many years exercised any control over the trade, though about 50 years ago it was from time to time moved to call upon those carrying on the trade in the City to take up the freedom of the Company.

The policy and spirit of modern times has, however, been opposed to any restriction on or qualification for trading.

PART I.—RETURN I.—CHARITIES.

1872.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

The dividends have been applied during each of the last preceding ten years for the relief of the poor of the Company.

PART II.—A.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present governing body consists of a master, upper warden, and about 20 assistants, these form the court. There is a renter warden also. Thus constituted, the governing body is according to the charter.

2. The master must have served the offices of renter warden and (having been called on the court) of upper warden. The upper warden must be a member of the court, and have served as renter warden; no one can be called on the court till he has served as renter warden. The renter warden is elected by the court from the livery. He enters upon his duties on or immediately after the last Thursday in March. The master and wardens are elected annually on St. Paul's Day (25th January) by the members of the court, and generally by rotation.

3. The master and upper warden enter upon their functions on the 25th January in each year; they are assisted by the members of the court. The court transacts and regulates all the business of the Company, including the administration of its funds and the relief of its poor, the admission of new members, the election of officers, the votes in aid of objects of special utility or interest. The master presides. The upper warden is charged with the care of the poor fund; the renter warden with the general funds. Minute books and books of account are kept by the clerk, and carefully supervised by the master wardens and court; the renter warden pays a fine of 20*l.* on taking office. Each member of the court pays on becoming a member 11*l.* 11*s.*, viz., 10*l.* to the general funds, 1*l.* 1*s.* to the poor fund, 7*s.* 6*d.* to the clerk, and 2*s.* 6*d.* to the beadle. On taking office the upper warden pays 11*l.* 11*s.* in like proportions. The master pays the same. No fees, salaries, or amounts whatever are paid to or received by the master, or wardens, or members of the court, or any or either of them.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body is indicated above, and the method adopted in transacting it is by motion, resolution, on show of hands, report, entries, &c. The court meets four times every year; on 25th January, and the last Thursday in March, in June, and in October. The minutes and account books are accessible to all the members of the court.

5. The members of the governing body are liable to removal by resolution of the court for gross misconduct, but happily no such instance is to be found. No one can be master or warden, or admitted as an assistant, who has been bankrupt or paid less than 20s. in the pound except by special resolution of the court.

6. The byelaws of the Company have been sufficiently noticed in Part I. Returns A to H. Their effect is to be seen by the above answers.

PART II.—B.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. There are no qualifications for membership of the Company. The several grades of that membership are freeman and liveryman. Women are not admitted.

2. The freedom of the Company may be obtained by patrimony, servitude, and redemption. The circumstances speak for themselves under each mode. Fees payable, if by patrimony—

	£	s.	d.
As son of member born during membership	4	10	6
By servitude, having served apprenticeship to member	4	10	6
By redemption as a stranger	7	5	6

All subject to admission by the court.

3. It is not now obligatory on any person to become free of the Company, nor can any one of the trade claim as such to become a member. The freedom of the City of London is a condition precedent to becoming a liveryman of the Company. Persons exercising any particular trade do not commonly become members of the Company. There is, just now, only one of the trade (the name of which is borne by the Company) who is a member of the Company.

4. Freemen are not liable to disfranchisement, so far as the question is understood.

5. The livery is unlimited in number. The qualifications for election to the livery are 1st, to be free of the Company; 2nd, to be free of the City. The court elect to the livery. The fees payable on election are, if by servitude (now almost obsolete), 31*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.*; if by patrimony or redemption, 26*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.*

A liveryman loses his rights and privileges by continued neglect to pay quarterage.

PART II.—C.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freemen, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. There are none, except social position.
2. None, except donations at will to two or three widows, and very poor old members.
3. No special circumstances. No regular pensioners or donees. The sums from time to time voted are altogether arbitrary.
4. About 20 years.
5. None.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A. Clerk. Keeps minutes, accounts, &c., conducts correspondence, advises and assists in management generally. Salary, 25*l.* a year. Not a member of the Company.

B. Beadle. Attends livery meetings at Guildhall, &c., court meetings, delivers summonses, collects quarterages, &c. Salary, 10*l.* 10*s.* a year, and poundage on quarterage collected. Not a member of the Company.

C. Appointed by the court.

PART IV. RETURN A. LANDED PROPERTY. (ENGLAND, WALES, AND IRELAND.)

Same	Poor Fund	27*l.* less income tax.	On the 26th March 1874 the court passed the following resolution:—"That although the subscriptions for increasing the poor fund have been made with the view of enabling the court to give more effectual relief to decayed members of the Company, and their widows and families, yet no member is to have any legal claim upon the fund, which is to be and remain at the absolute control and disposal of the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Fruiterers' Company for the time being, in the same way as the other funds of the Company."

Mr. Frankland's bequest was in the following form:—"I give to the master for the time being of the Fruiterers' Company, London, the sum of 100*l.* sterling money in trust for the poor of the said Company, to be applied as the said master, together with the wardens and court of assistants of the said Company, shall deem best."

PART IV.—RETURN B.

B 2. A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B 3. A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the Company or in their possession elsewhere.

E 2. The Company's financial year ends in the month of March.

PART IV.—RETURN D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

The Fruiterers' Company (with other livery companies) is entitled to a share of some Irish property, and receives its share of a rentcharge through the Vintners' Company.
The property appears to be the Bellaghy manor and estate in Ulster.
The income from this source for the last 10 years has been as under:—

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

(1.) The Company's income has slightly increased from year to year during the last 10 years. The increase has arisen chiefly out of the additional investment in bank stock of sums from time to time produced by the receipt of fines on admissions to the freedom and livery.

Thus in 1870 the dividends on the Company's bank stock had risen from about 68*l.* a year to about 74*l.* a year.

In 1873 a fine of 10*l.* was for the first time paid to the Company on promotion to the office of upper warden, and this fine has been received every year since.

In 1874 a sum of about 250*l.* was added to the Company's investment in bank stock, and the dividends proportionately increased.

The average number of liverymen has also increased, and the total quarterage payable by them ought to have, and, speaking generally, has increased also. See Part IV., Return E.

In 1879, 20*l.* further bank stock was bought at 259*l.*, and the Company's total investment has since been increased to 1,000*l.* bank stock, yielding an income of about 90*l.* a year.

The Fruiterers' Company being now almost wholly composed of merchants, and gentlemen in good position, seems likely to attract new members. Should many more join, a further increase of the Company's income many be anticipated.

(2.) There is no reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in the value of the present property of the Company.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

(1.) The property of the Fruiterers' Company is of so simple a nature that nothing more than the direction, supervision, and control of the court is required.

(2.) The several receipts and payments are taken and made by the renterwarden, or by the clerk on his behalf, and are subject to the audit mentioned next.

(3.) The accounts are submitted yearly to a finance committee, who examine them with the vouchers, &c., and report thereon to the court, and the latter (on being satisfied with the report) direct the accounts to be entered in a book kept for the purpose, and to be signed by the master for the time being as approved.

N.B.—Copies of these accounts from the year 1870 are appended to Return H., Part IV.

(4.) The Company's accounts are not published, but are always accessible to the members of the court, and, perhaps, of the livery also. No liveryman (not of the court) has applied to see the accounts.

PART IV.—RETURN H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART IV.—RETURN M.—GENERAL AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidize or encourage education whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company has recently provided prizes to be given by the Royal Botanic Society for the best English grown fruit, desiring that the actual growers should be the competitors.

The prizes given in 1881 were a silver tea-pot, cost 10*l.* 10*s.*, and two money prizes amounting together to 15*l.* 15*s.*

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, "or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Fruiterers' Company have no suggestions to make.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834. Their property then consisted mainly of 775*l.* bank stock.

GIRDLERS' COMPANY.

The returns were accompanied with the following protest:—

With respect to such of their property as is not subject to any trust, the company are advised that they might properly as well as legally decline to furnish any information. They are not, however, disposed to insist upon their strict right.

They deem it their duty to claim before the Commissioners the right, which they would be entitled to assert, even in legal proceedings before courts having power to enforce discovery, of protecting from disclosure their title to the private property of which they are and have long been in undisputed and uninterrupted possession, but with this exception they have given such information as they hope will be found sufficient for the purposes of Her Majesty's Commission.

But in giving this information this company desire most formally to insist that their readiness so to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown or any other jurisdiction to inquire into their private property, or in any way to deal with it in disregard to their rights.

They desire also to record their claim, that if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the Girdlers' Company, every such question should be determined only by Her Majesty's High Court of Justice.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

Returns A. to H., both inclusive.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

Returns A. and B.—The Girdlers' Company traces its existence to a very early period, and cannot in the strict sense of the words be said to have been founded. It is believed to have been a fraternity by prescription, which owed its origin to a lay brotherhood of the order of Saint Laurence, maintaining themselves by the making of girdles and voluntarily associating for the purpose of mutual protection and for the regulation of the trade which they practised, and the maintenance of the ancient ordinances and usages established to ensure the honest manufacture of girdles with good and sound materials.

The earliest public or State recognition of the company of which it now possesses any evidence consists of Letters Patent of the first year of King Edward the 3rd, A.D. 1327, addressed to them as an existing body, as "les beincturiers de notre Citée de Loundres," by which the "ancient ordinances and usuages" of the said trade are approved and their observance directed. The king also grants licence to the Girdlers that they shall have power to elect one or two of their own trade to seek out false work and present it before the mayors or chief guardians of the places where found, who shall cause the same to be burnt and those who have worked the same to be punished; all amercements resulting therefrom to belong to the mayors of the places where the false work is found.

The said Letters Patent were confirmed in the 1st Richard 2nd (1377) and 2nd Henry IV. (1401), and the company was incorporated in 27 Henry VI. (1448) by the name of the Master and Guardians of the Mystery of Girdlers of the City of London.

Further confirmations were made in the 2nd Edward IV., the 10th Elizabeth, 15 Charles I., and 1 James II.

No important change in the original constitution of the company was made by any of the charters prior to that of the 10th Elizabeth, which directed that the three arts or mysteries called Pinners, Wyerworkers, and Girdlers should be joined and invited together into one body corporate and polity, and one society and company for ever, and did incorporate them by the name of the Master and Wardens or Keepers of the Art and Mystery of Girdlers, London.

It does not appear that the Pinners and Wyerworkers brought any accession of property to the Girdlers.

Return C.—There are no such trust deeds.

Return D.—The governing body is not aware of the existence of any decrees of court, whether of the Courts of Common Law or Chancery, or any acts of the Court of Aldermen, or of the Court of Common Council, regulating or affecting this company.

Return E.—Other than the charters referred to in Returns A. and B., there are no documents which found the company, the only additional document affecting the company consists of the "orders and ordinances of the Company of Girdlers, London," made and confirmed on the 30th May, Charles 2, A.D. 1682, by the Lord Chancellor, Nottingham, and the Chief Justices Fra. North and Fra. Pemberton.

This document is made pursuant to the statute of 19 Henry 7, which requires that no master, wardens, and fellowships of craft and mysteries, &c., shall take upon them to make any acts or ordinances, but that the same should be examined and approved by the Chancellor or Treasurer of England, or Chief Justices of either Bench, or three of them.

Return F.—The history of the company with reference to the objects for which it was founded is contained in Return A. As there observed, the company cannot properly be said to have been "founded" in the sense in which that word appears to be used in this inquiry. That the makers of girdles were associated from a remote period, and had established amongst themselves a monopoly of their trade, regulated by certain ordinances and usages, is apparent from the Letters Patent of 1st Edward 3rd, which approve and confirm the same as "ancient ordinances and custums."

The object of the association no doubt was to keep out foreigners, and to regulate the trade and confine it within certain limits by preventing its exercise by any but those who had passed through an apprenticeship. The number of apprentices to be taken by each member of the craft being limited to two.

How far the right of search and other privileges given to the Girdlers by Edward the 3rd were exercised cannot now be known, except by assuming that such exercise was continued, as, had it been otherwise, the subsequent charters and confirmations would not have been required.

The earlier records of the company's transactions were probably burnt in the Great Fire, which destroyed their Hall. The first minute book in existence commences in the year 1622, from which date the company possesses minutes of its proceedings up to the present day.
